Budget Move For Colleges Is Postponed

Education Board To Study Funds At July Meeting

BATON ROUGE (AP) — The State Board of Education, unable to decide on next year's spending until the Legislature acts, decided Saturday to withhold until its July meeting any action on revised budgets for state colleges.

"What we would do here today," President Joseph Davies told the board, "would be absolutely useless."

The Senate Finance Committee is working on the administration's 492-million - dollar appropriations bill to support normal operations of the state during the next fiscal year.

DIFFER

The administration and education spokesmen differ sharply on money outlays for the colleges and schools. Gov. Jimmie H. Davis has ordered his administration to hold the line on any attempts to increase the budget.

College presidents and their financial assistants were upset over budget problems in view of some eight million dollars slashed from education funds. Both the colleges and parish school systems figure in such cuts.

The board set July 15 for college administrators to get in their budgets to the office of State Supt. of Education Shelby Jackson.

The next meeting of the board is planned for July 29, after the end of the current 60-day session of the Legislature.

President George T. Walker, Northeast State, suggested the schools had insufficient time and information to get in budgets by July 15.

Byron Benton, education department fiscal officer, suggested that the colleges could make up budgets without allowing for any increases in salaries.

But President John S. Kyser, Northwestern State College, quickly reminded that "we're going to have a lot of dissatisfaction on salaries."

College instructors would get increases in salaries along with public school teachers under the 1958 pay scale, but apparently until final action on the general appropriations bill the increases will not be nailed down.

The education board meeting apparently began and ended with secret sessions lasting about one hour each. Considerable routine action was taken in the open session.

State Education Supt. Shelby Jackson said later the first ses-

Guitar Player Named By FBI As Murderer

MEMPHIS (UPI)—A young jazz guitar player was named by the FBI Saturday as the kidnap-slayer who wiped out the family of Carroll Vernon Jackson in one of Virginia's most baffling crimes 18 months ago.

The suspect, tall, dark-haired former University of Maryland student Melvin Davis (Dave) Rees, 31, also was accused of a lover's lane slaying in Maryland three years ago and was questioned about the unsolved slayings of two little girls in a Washington, D. C., park.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover announced in Washington formal charges were being filed in Baltimore accusing Rees of kidnaping and killing two members of the Jackson family.

Man Loses Arm In Freak Mishap

ROBERTA, Ga. (UPI) — A motorist drove more than a mile Saturday to the home of a friend after his left arm was torn off in a freak highway accident.

The victim, Jimmy Stembridge, collapsed at his friend's front door and was rushed to a Macon, Ga. hospital in critical condition.

The state Highway Patrol said Stembridge's car sideswiped a big auto carrier truck just inside the Roberta town limits on U.S. 341. His arm was outside the window and was wrenched off by the passing trailer, troopers said.

The truck driver, John Barber of Jacksonville, Fla., was unaware of the tragedy until he made a stop later to check his brakes and found Stembridge's arm still dangling from the carrier.

AS LEGISLATURE RETURNS TODAY

Bill To Cut LSU Board Terms Set For Close Eyeing

BATON ROUGE (AP) — The bill to reduce terms of the Louisiana State University Board comes under close scrutiny at 7 p.m. today as the Legislature returns to begin the session's eighth week.

Backers are expected to make a new attempt in the Senate to amend the LSU Boar dbill so it will be more acceptable to those who urge caution before changes.

The pressure is building up in general upon the Senate, where swift and easy action has been the rule in handling major legislation.

Only 12 more days remain before the 60-day session ends July 7. Already a special session has been predicted for next fall to straighten out school finances.

Gov. Jimmie H. Davis, asked if his administration intends to hold the line on attempts by educators to add to the 492-million-dollar general appropriations bill, had curt comment.

"They'd better," Davis said.

Parish school superintendents predict shortened school terms next year unless budget is altered upward.

Joseph Davies, president of the state board of education, said he believes a special legislative session may be necessary if the administration holds the line now and expects to head off shorter school terms.

In the House, one main controversial item remains unsettled. A vote appears possible on the administration's move to withhold state income taxes from payrolls.

The Senate has the last of the administration's group of about 40 segregation measures, some of which have been approved finally by the Legislature.

A bill to legalize jitney service in cities ordered to integrate public transportation may get special attention Sunday night.

More of the bills aimed at checking federal moves toward racial integration are moving into position in the Senate for final action after touching up by legislative researchers.

The governor passed out the word at his news conference that he wanted the LSU board bill re-written so neither he nor any other governor could get control of the board.

An informant said a bill was being prepared to remove language which might oust present members of the board.

The new version of the bill was xpected to propose nine year terms for board members instead of the present 14, and 18 instead of 14 members.

Four new members would be added under the new arrangement. This would give Gov. Davis eight appointments on an 18-member board during his four years in office

As the bill came out of the Senate Judiciary B Committee with a set of mystery amendments, it would have given Davis 10 appointments on 18-member board.

The fact that he would have been given an easy working majority of the board membership shook some senators. They led a move that stripped the bill of all amendments, leacing it about as written by Rep. Jesse McLain, St. Tammany, and approved by the House.

Gov. Davis said the questioned amendments were not his own and he knew nothing about them. He said again he has enough work to do without taking on more at LSU.

BUT MORE NEEDED

Parish Rainfall Aid To Farmers

Farmers in Ouachita Parish area will be glad to know that Selman Field registered 1.25 inches for Monroe, and Calhoun reported approximately an inch of rain.

According to officials, this will go a long way towards breaking up the current drought that the whole state has been suffering. W. B. Aycock Jr., associate county agent, stated last night that if the rest of the state received rain such as Monroe enjoyed, crops will be helped considerably.

But he added that it would take another such rain before one could safely say that the drought was broken

County Agent J. J. Joyce Jr. said that most of the crops, except cotton, had been suffering from the long dry spell. Peaches, watermelon and corn will be helped considerably by yesterday's and the past week's rain fall.

RAIN SCARCE

Aycock said that in the northern, western and eastern areas of Ouachita Parish, rainfall had been scarce, "as we all know," but that the extreme southern portion had not been as dry. But generally speaking, all crops had suffered.

Joyce said that the yield from corn crops will be less than it would have been this year, if we had had rain earlier. Peaches and watermelons will be somewhat smaller than in previous years, but the sweetness of the fruits will not be affected.

Selman Field authorities said

Talks May End Revolt In Algeria

PARIS (AP) — Two Algerian nationalists flew to Paris Saturday and went immediately into secret talks which might lead to an end to the five-year-old revolt against French rule.

Ahmed Boumendjel, chief of military and political affairs for the provisional rebel government, and Mohammed Ben Yahia, principal aide to rebel Premier Fehrat Abbas, flew from Tunis in a Tunisian airliner. They were whisked away by helicopter to Melun, some 35 miles south of Paris for the talks.

Boumendjel and Yahia met for 2½ hours with Roger Moris, French secretary general for Algerian affairs, and Gen. Hubert Mace de Gastines. Moris then came back to Paris to report to Premier Michel Debre and Gen. Paul Ely, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

NO HINT

No hint of what had been said was disclosed. No mention was made of another meeting, but it was generally expected that the talks will continue Sunday. Boumendjel and Yahia will stay at the prefecture in Melun overnight, and as long as necessary to conclude the negotiations.

The talks were aimed at fixing the conditions for a visit to Paris by Ferhat Abbas, who has said he was willing to talk to President Charles de Gaulle about conditions for a truce in Algeria.

Even before Boumendjel arrived, the rebels and the French government took public positions on the detailed aims of the projected talks between Abbas and De Gaulle. The two positions appeared to vary on important issues indicating that the talks may run into difficulties.

De Gaulle has said he will now discuss only an end to the fighting, disposition of the weapons and the fate of the combatants.

CHRISTMAS IN JUNE

Procrastinators Celebrate Yuletide

MERCHANTVILLE, N. J. (AP) — It seemed an oddball thing to do, squirt the air full of mosquito poison just before a Christmas party.

Christmas party? In June?

And the weather so steamy you could easily have confused southern Jersey with Burma?

It was for real, though. In a strictly desultory way.

The party was the highlight of the year for the Procrastinators Club of America, with headquarters in Philadelphia just across the Delaware River.

The club was at its backward best. No one ever got around to hanging all the yule decorations in an unfinished night club used for the blowout. Santa Claus was supposed to show up but didn't. The party was set for 7:30. Nobody was on time. Nearly all the 200 members and guests managed to devour the turkey dinner, however.

A housewife won the club's annual essay contest, on the theme "How Procrastination Has Helped Me." She said: "I'll write it tomorrow." Four words of golden prose.

Comedian Jack Benney was given the club's annual top award as the country's ace procrastinator because, as he's so often said on radio and TV, he's never gotten around to being 40.

N.C. Demos Vote Lawyer As Candidate

Young Moderate Nominated In Governor's Race

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) —North Carolina Democrats turned down an appeal to abandon their moderate course on integration Saturday and nominated Terry Sanford a youthful attorney, as their gubernatorial candidate.

Sanford picked up an early lead over segregationist I. Beverly

DECLINED

Lake and raced to a 55,000-vote margin by early Saturday evening.

With 1,713 of 2,094 precincts counted, Sanford had 289,379 votes to 227,494 for Lake.

Lake declined to make any immediate statement. The sober-faced attorney appeared at his headquarters about 8:30 p. m. (EST) but said he wanted to study the returns further before saying anything.

Sanford held his own in most of the rural eastern counties where segregationist sentiment runs strongest and cut into some of Lake's first primary strength. He trimmed Lake's lead in three large counties — Durham, New Hanover and Iredell — from the May 28 figures.

Lake grabbed Wayne County from Sanford in the run-off but was unable to make serious inroads in the Sanford margin in the heavily populated Piedmont.

One of the pivotal areas appeared to be splitting almost evenly between the two candidates. Most of the counties of the Third District went to favorite son John Larkins in the first primary and were the scene of intensive campaigning in the run-off fight. Lake picked up Lee County, the only one to go to Malcolm Seawell, who like Larkins, was eliminated in the first primary.

Lake, a scholarly lawyer who injected the race issue into the campaign, campaigned on a platform opposed to any integration.

Sanford, who sought to steer the campaign to other issues while endorsing the state's moderate course on racial matters, plugged hard for an ambitious and costly program of improved schools, highways, farms and industrial development.

Teen-Age Gang Fights Injure 3 In Chicago

CHICAGO (AP)—Teen-age violence with racial overtones flared up on the last day of school Friday. Three youths were hospitalized and 11 others seized for juvenile authorities.

All the assailants were Negroes and all the victims were white, but police said they could see no pattern in what they described as "isolated incidents."

A band of 15 to 20 teen-agers slapped around some Harrison High School students, police said, and then attacked Dennis Blaha, 14. Blaha was admitted to a hospital with a possible skull fracture. The gang escaped.

ATTACKED

Dennis Duggan and Gerald Comstock, both 16 and high school sophomores, were attacked by six or seven teen-age toughs who demanded their money and, when they found none, beat the two students. The gang escaped with some records one of the students had just purchased. Duggan was hospitalized with a possible skull fracture.

Kurt Langher, 16, suffered a nose fracture and was hospitalized after he was attacked and beaten for no apparent reason by

OF SOUTH AFRICAN GOODS

NAACP Plans For Boycott

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP)—A campaign for a nationwide boycott of goods imported from South Africa as a protest against its racist policies was approved by the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People Saturday as part of its civil rights program for the coming year.

Delegates said, "We condemn the dangerous racist policies of the Union of South Africa and the ruthless violence with which protests against them have been suppressed."

In addition to the boycott on South African goods, they called on government and private financial organizations to insist that the country "abandon its persecution of Africans, Indians and to some extent the British minority" as a prerequisite to further loans of financial aid or trade.

URGED

They further urged that the government of the United States "welcome the oppressed people of South Africa to America to live."

Delegates to the annual convention of the 350,000 member organization voted down a committee suggestion that they hold their 1962 convention in Portland, Ore., and voted to approve Atlanta, Ga., instead.

The move was made to "bring the civil rights struggle to the heart of the Confederacy where our fight is the most intense."

Historic Trial On Voting Case Slated To Start

ALBANY Ga (UPI) — A trial that may result in the appointment of the first federal voting referee in the South is scheduled to begin in federal district court Monday.

A Justice Department suit charges the voting registrars of Terrell County, Ga., with applying more stringent registration tests to Negroes than to whites in violation of the 1957 Civil Rights Act. Specifically, the suit charges the registrars with failure to register four Negro teachers, among others, on grounds of illiteracy.

APPOINT

Under the 1960 Civil Rights Act, the federal government can appoint voting referees to register Negroes for both national and state elections where a "pattern of practice of racial discrimination" is shown.

U. S. District Judge T. Hoyt Davis dismissed the Terrell suit in 1959, declaring that the provisions of the act under which it was brought were unconstitutional. The Supreme Court reinstated it and the suit will now be tried before Judge W. W. Bootle.

MIGHT BE RED LIGHT BANDIT

FBI Captures Man Chessman Named

EL PASO, Tex. (UPI) — The FBI announced Saturday that its agents have captured Severio Terranova, 38, whom convict-author Caryl Chessman said "might" be the man for whose sex crimes Chessman went to the San Quentin prison gas chamber.

FBI agents and El Paso police seized Terranova, 38, who was living as "Michael C. Russo," Friday without a struggle. He was not armed and was arrested on a warrant charging unlawful flight to escape prosecution for burglary in Azusa, Calif.

Chessman was executed last May 6 after the most famous fight to escape execution in U.S. history. He was executed for being a "red light" bandit who preyed on parked couples by posing as a policeman in a car with a red light.

He denied during the 12 years that he delayed execution by a series of brilliant appeals that he was the "red light" bandit. He said that Terranova "might" be.

Jack E. Smith, acting agent in charge of the El Paso FBI office, said Terranova had said nothing about being a red light bandit, although he admitted his identity.

Terranova was arraigned on a fugitive warrant before U.S. Commissioner Henry C. Clifton, who set his bond at $20,000.

Four Others Are Injured, One Severely

TUSCUMBIA, Ala. (UPI) — A dump truck, a sports car and another automobile collided near this northwest Alabama city Saturday, killing six persons and injuring four others, one critically.

The Colbert County Hospital at Sheffield identified the dead as Mr. and Mrs. Harry Howard Morris, 49 and 47, respectively, of Florence; Robert Reed, 28, his wife Maggie, 22, and their daughter, Sandra, 3, of North Chicago, Ill., and Wilodene Jackson, about 25, of Sheffield.

The Highway Patrol said Reed apparently attempted to pass the American made sports car in which the Morrises were riding, swerved back into the right lane and struck the Morris automobile.

KNOCKED

It was knocked into the path of a 2½ ton dump truck loaded with gravel and driven by James Christmas, 35, of Town Creek, Ala. The truck rolled over the sports car, crushing it flat, and turned over on top of the Illinois car, carrying the seven Negroes.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris were killed instantly. Sandra and Miss Jackson died en route to the hospital. Reed died an hour later and his wife died about four hours later.

The injured were identified as Beatrice Jackson and her husband Eluit Jackson, of Sheffield, parents of the Reeds and Wilodene; and Beverly Reed, 7, daughter of the Reeds. She was listed in critical condition at the hospital. Christmas was not seriously hurt.

The Highway Patrol said the truck and cars met on straight stretch of U.S. 43, seven miles south of there. The truck had just descended a mountain.

Louisiana Will Go To Congress In Oil Battle

HOUMA, La. (AP) — Atty. Gen. Jack Gremillion Saturday night said Louisiana will seek Congressional remedy if its tidelands case appeal is denied by the U. S. Supreme Court.

The attorney general said Louisiana hopes the high tribunal will grant a rehearing in the important tidelands case. But if this fails "we shall then take our unfortunate plight to Congress for restoration of rights that we should have received in the decision in the tidelands case."

The decision against Louisiana in favor of the federal government was handed down May 31, giving Texas and Florida title to tidelands 10.5 miles into the Gulf of Mexico, but denying claims of Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama for the same number of miles of submerged lands.

FILED

The three states have since filed a joint brief in support of the separate motions.

At stake in the Louisiana tidelands fight is title to the oil-rich tracts off the Louisiana coast and some 320 million dollars in oil and gas revenues from the Louisiana tidelands now held in escrow by the federal government pending final determination of the dispute.

Gremillion told the Houma-Terrebonne Jaycees, Louisiana contends many errors by the court in its decision, but pointed to these as the most glaring:

OF SOUTH AFRICAN GOODS

NAACP Plans For Boycott

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP)—A campaign for a nationwide boycott of goods imported from South Africa as a protest against its racist policies was approved by the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People Saturday as part of its civil rights program for the coming year.

Delegates said, "We condemn the dangerous racist policies of the Union of South Africa and the ruthless violence with which protests against them have been suppressed."

In addition to the boycott on South African goods, they called on government and private financial organizations to insist that the country "abandon its persecution of Africans, Indians and to some extent the British minority" as a prerequisite to further loans of financial aid or trade.

URGED

They further urged that the government of the United States "welcome the oppressed people of South Africa to America to live."

Delegates to the annual convention of the 350,000 member organization voted down a committee suggestion that they hold their 1962 convention in Portland, Ore., and voted to approve Atlanta, Ga., instead.

The move was made to "bring the civil rights struggle to the heart of the Confederacy where our fight is the most intense."

BUT MORE NEEDED

Parish Rainfall Aid To Farmers

Farmers in Ouachita Parish area will be glad to know that Selman Field registered 1.25 inches for Monroe, and Calhoun reported approximately an inch of rain.

According to officials, this will go a long way towards breaking up the current drought that the whole state has been suffering. W. B. Aycock Jr., associate county agent, stated last night that if the rest of the state received rain such as Monroe enjoyed, crops will be helped considerably.

But he added that it would take another such rain before one could safely say that the drought was broken

County Agent J. J. Joyce Jr. said that most of the crops, except cotton, had been suffering from the long dry spell. Peaches, watermelon and corn will be helped considerably by yesterday's and the past week's rain fall.

RAIN SCARCE

Aycock said that in the northern, western and eastern areas of Ouachita Parish, rainfall had been scarce, "as we all know," but that the extreme southern portion had not been as dry. But generally speaking, all crops had suffered.

Joyce said that the yield from corn crops will be less than it would have been this year, if we had had rain earlier. Peaches and watermelons will be somewhat smaller than in previous years, but the sweetness of the fruits will not be affected.

Selman Field authorities said

Talks May End Revolt In Algeria

PARIS (AP) — Two Algerian nationalists flew to Paris Saturday and went immediately into secret talks which might lead to an end to the five-year-old revolt against French rule.

Ahmed Boumendjel, chief of military and political affairs for the provisional rebel government, and Mohammed Ben Yahia, principal aide to rebel Premier Fehrat Abbas, flew from Tunis in a Tunisian airliner. They were whisked away by helicopter to Melun, some 35 miles south of Paris for the talks.

Boumendjel and Yahia met for 2½ hours with Roger Moris, French secretary general for Algerian affairs, and Gen. Hubert Mace de Gastines. Moris then came back to Paris to report to Premier Michel Debre and Gen. Paul Ely, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

NO HINT

No hint of what had been said was disclosed. No mention was made of another meeting, but it was generally expected that the talks will continue Sunday. Boumendjel and Yahia will stay at the prefecture in Melun overnight, and as long as necessary to conclude the negotiations.

The talks were aimed at fixing the conditions for a visit to Paris by Ferhat Abbas, who has said he was willing to talk to President Charles de Gaulle about conditions for a truce in Algeria.

Even before Boumendjel arrived, the rebels and the French government took public positions on the detailed aims of the projected talks between Abbas and De Gaulle. The two positions appeared to vary on important issues indicating that the talks may run into difficulties.

De Gaulle has said he will now discuss only an end to the fighting, disposition of the weapons and the fate of the combatants.

Kefauver Joins With Opponent

They shook hands on the platform at the Sullivan County Democratic Party rally in Warriors' Path State Park where political speeches competed with band and rock 'n roll music and free watermelon for the attention of a crowd of about 1,000. Threat of rain and cloudy skies kept many away.

Teen-Age Gang Fights Injure 3 In Chicago

CHICAGO (AP)—Teen-age violence with racial overtones flared up on the last day of school Friday. Three youths were hospitalized and 11 others seized for juvenile authorities.

All the assailants were Negroes and all the victims were white, but police said they could see no pattern in what they described as "isolated incidents."

A band of 15 to 20 teen-agers slapped around some Harrison High School students, police said, and then attacked Dennis Blaha, 14. Blaha was admitted to a hospital with a possible skull fracture. The gang escaped.

ATTACKED

Dennis Duggan and Gerald Comstock, both 16 and high school sophomores, were attacked by six or seven teen-age toughs who demanded their money and, when they found none, beat the two students. The gang escaped with some records one of the students had just purchased. Duggan was hospitalized with a possible skull fracture.

Kurt Langher, 16, suffered a nose fracture and was hospitalized after he was attacked and beaten for no apparent reason by

Burglar Nets $30,000 In Gems

NEW YORK (AP)—A nimble smash-and-grab burglar struck famed Cartier's Fifth Avenue jewelry store before dawn Saturday and escaped with $30,000 in gems scooped from a shattered display window.

The thief made a quick getaway by diving head-first through a window of a waiting car. It sped away, driven by an accomplice.

Historic Trial On Voting Case Slated To Start

ALBANY Ga (UPI) — A trial that may result in the appointment of the first federal voting referee in the South is scheduled to begin in federal district court Monday.

A Justice Department suit charges the voting registrars of Terrell County, Ga., with applying more stringent registration tests to Negroes than to whites in violation of the 1957 Civil Rights Act. Specifically, the suit charges the registrars with failure to register four Negro teachers, among others, on grounds of illiteracy.

APPOINT

Under the 1960 Civil Rights Act, the federal government can appoint voting referees to register Negroes for both national and state elections where a "pattern of practice of racial discrimination" is shown.

U. S. District Judge T. Hoyt Davis dismissed the Terrell suit in 1959, declaring that the provisions of the act under which it was brought were unconstitutional. The Supreme Court reinstated it and the suit will now be tried before Judge W. W. Bootle.

Louisiana Will Go To Congress In Oil Battle

HOUMA, La. (AP) — Atty. Gen. Jack Gremillion Saturday night said Louisiana will seek Congressional remedy if its tidelands case appeal is denied by the U. S. Supreme Court.

The attorney general said Louisiana hopes the high tribunal will grant a rehearing in the important tidelands case. But if this fails "we shall then take our unfortunate plight to Congress for restoration of rights that we should have received in the decision in the tidelands case."

The decision against Louisiana in favor of the federal government was handed down May 31, giving Texas and Florida title to tidelands 10.5 miles into the Gulf of Mexico, but denying claims of Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama for the same number of miles of submerged lands.

FILED

The three states have since filed a joint brief in support of the separate motions.

At stake in the Louisiana tidelands fight is title to the oil-rich tracts off the Louisiana coast and some 320 million dollars in oil and gas revenues from the Louisiana tidelands now held in escrow by the federal government pending final determination of the dispute.

Gremillion told the Houma-Terrebonne Jaycees, Louisiana contends many errors by the court in its decision, but pointed to these as the most glaring:

CHRISTMAS IN JUNE

Procrastinators Celebrate Yuletide

Christmas party? In June?

And the weather so steamy you could easily have confused southern Jersey with Burma?

It was for real, though. In a strictly desultory way.

The party was the highlight of the year for the Procrastinators Club of America, with headquarters in Philadelphia just across the Delaware River.

The club was at its backward best. No one ever got around to hanging all the yule decorations in an unfinished night club used for the blowout. Santa Claus was supposed to show up but didn't. The party was set for 7:30. Nobody was on time. Nearly all the 200 members and guests managed to devour the turkey dinner, however.

A housewife won the club's annual essay contest, on the theme "How Procrastination Has Helped Me." She said: "I'll write it tomorrow." Four words of golden prose.

Comedian Jack Benney was given the club's annual top award as the country's ace procrastinator because, as he's so often said on radio and TV, he's never gotten around to being 40.

MIGHT BE RED LIGHT BANDIT

FBI Captures Man Chessman Named

EL PASO, Tex. (UPI) — The FBI announced Saturday that its agents have captured Severio Terranova, 38, whom convict-author Caryl Chessman said "might" be the man for whose sex crimes Chessman went to the San Quentin prison gas chamber.

FBI agents and El Paso police seized Terranova, 38, who was living as "Michael C. Russo," Friday without a struggle. He was not armed and was arrested on a warrant charging unlawful flight to escape prosecution for burglary in Azusa, Calif.

Chessman was executed last May 6 after the most famous fight to escape execution in U.S. history. He was executed for being a "red light" bandit who preyed on parked couples by posing as a policeman in a car with a red light.

He denied during the 12 years that he delayed execution by a series of brilliant appeals that he was the "red light" bandit. He said that Terranova "might" be.

Jack E. Smith, acting agent in charge of the El Paso FBI office, said Terranova had said nothing about being a red light bandit, although he admitted his identity.

Terranova was arraigned on a fugitive warrant before U.S. Commissioner Henry C. Clifton, who set his bond at $20,000.

An "alert" citizen recognized Terranova from a picture on an FBI circular and telephoned the FBI.

Mississippi Demos To Meet Thursday

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—Mississippi's Democratic party, preparing for the worst from the national convention, meets in state convention Thursday in what observers say will be a harmonious session to lay plans for winning national concessions.

The state's traditionally segregated way of life and outspoken objection to any form of desegregation has had party leaders on the defensive nationally, especially in deciding upon a national candidate and platform.

But lately, party leaders—including Gov. Ross Barnett, the titular head of the state party—have advised Mississippians to adopt a wait and see attitude before raising any objections.

"We want to get seated at the national convention," is Barnett's attitude. "We don't know who we are going to support. We don't know who is in the race. We don't know what they are going to advocate."

Sen. James Eastland (D-Miss), chairman of the Judiciary Committee and one of Mississippi's most powerful political figures, has been a major influence in helping keep Mississippi's strategy under wraps.

In addition, his acceptance of a position on the national platform committee will afford him greater opportunity to help Mississippi over the rough spots at the national convention.

No one will say what Mississippi will do because the state's action apparently will hinge upon the national convention. And this year, state law authorizes a recess convention at any time after the national convention.

Mississippi's new attitude became evident last month in the congressional district caucuses.

With only an occasional uprising against authority, the sizzling caususes followed Barnett's every proposal, accepting his leaders for presidential electors, executive committee members, state convention delegates and national committeeman and committeewoman.

Harmony reigned.

Barnett and House Speaker Walter Sillers of Bolivar County have spoken publicly about a possible bolt from the national convention, but only if the state were forced out by an unacceptable candidate or platform.

Sillers, chairman of the state resolutions committee and not a candidate to go to the national convention, drafted two resolutions for the state convention to take to the national meeting in Los Angeles July 11.

The resolutions, which could have been violent, merely state the state party's principles and describe the type platform and candidate the state party would like.

In the light of the harmony which prevailed at the caucuses, the state convention is most likely to accept the mild resolutions without too much controversy.

Old timers in Mississippi party politics will see other changes from the past, both recent and distant.

Man Murders Wife In N. Y.

NEW YORK (AP)—A Long Island restaurant owner bludgeoned his wife to death Saturday then jumped or fell in front of a subway train, an assistant district attorney said.

Asst. Dist. Atty. William Cahn of Nassau County, Long Island, gave this account:

Altneu and his wife, Sylvia, 69, quarreled—over what it was not disclosed. At the height of the argument, Altneu picked up an 18-inch length of brass pipe and struck his wife two or three times.

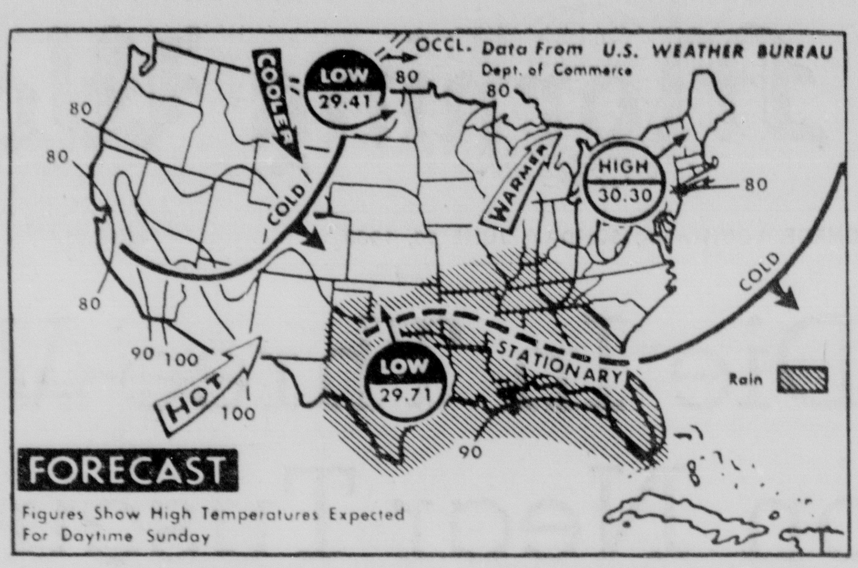

He then walked from their Great Neck, Long Island, home and caught a train for Manhattan and his restaurant. At the 34th Street station of the Broklyn-Manhattan Transit subway, Altneu plunged to the rails as a train entered the station. He suffered a skull fracture, cuts and bruises.

Lost Billfold In Phone Booth

A Delhi man reported to Monroe police yesterday afternoon that he lost his wallet containing approximately $60 when he laid it down in a telephone booth at the intersection of Catalpa and DeSiard Streets.

Officers said Julius C. Tant told them he made a phone call about 2:30 p.m., and apparently forgot the wallet when he left. He said he went back to the place several minutes later when he missed the billfold, and it was not in the booth.

Police were still investigating the incident late yesterday.

MOSTLY FAIR WEATHER and pleasant temperatures are due for West Coast and Northeast today but rain is expected from Texas through southern Mississippi Valley into Tennessee Valley and Gulf coast as well as northern and central Plains. It should be warmer in northern Mississippi Valley, Lakes area and Ohio Valley; cooler in Montana and western North Dakota southward into Utah and Colorado. (AP Wirephoto Map)

IDEOLOGICAL DISPUTE

Red China Widens Russian Argument

LONDON (UPI) — Red China Saturday widened its ideological dispute with "big brother" Russia, charging that the Soviet peaceful co-existence line is little more than an attempt to "whitewash U.S. imperialism."

No nemes were mentioned, but speeches at a mass rally in Peiping, transmitted by the Communist New China News Agency, made it clear that Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev was a chief target in the quarrel over who interprets Marx and Lenin best.

Observers in London said they believed Peiping was starting a major campaign against the Russian idea that there must be peace between Communism and Captalism in an age of nuclear weapons. Peiping indicated it felt the risks of nuclear war were exaggerated."

According to the news agency, Gen. Li Chih - Min defounced "modern revisionists who claim that the true character of imperialists whose hands were smeared with blood were envoys of peace.

"This is to whitewash the U.S. imperialism and help it to carry on aggression under the pretense of peace," he charged.

The ideological dispute broke out into the open early this month when the Soviet Communist party Newspaper Pravda attacked opponents who rejected the Khrushchev idea that Communism will win the world by economic means and that there must be peaceful co-existence between East and West.

Khrushchev himself brought the issues into the open at a Communist meeting in Bucharest, Romania, earlier this week when he criticized Peiping's "hard" line that war against capitalism is inevitable.

Khrushchev insisted that Leninist doctrine must be interpreted to fit changing times. China's Mao Tse-Tung allows for no such free interpretation of the Communist bible.

Said Li Chih-Min Saturday:

"Modern revisionists, frightened out of their wits by the imperialists blackmail of nuclear war, exaggerated the consequences for the destructiveness of nuclear war and begged imperialism for peace at any cost, in fact helping the imperialists to undermine the militant spirit of the socialist countries."

The attack on "revisionism" left little doubt that Red Chinese theory rejected the idea that nuclear warfare is too dangerous even to contemplate.

Newspaper Ad Brings Lost Daughter Back

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP)—A Fort Lauderdale woman ran a newspaper ad for a baby sitter and got an answer Saturday from a daughter she hadn't seen in 14 years.

Tera Lea Brynman, 15, answered the ad, hoping to earn money toward a hi-fi set. Arriving at the home of Lois Goodlake, she was told that the job was already filled.

But when Mrs. Goodlake heard her name, she cried: "I'm your mother!"

When Mrs. Goodlake and her former husband, Arnold Brynman, separated in 1946, they agreed to leave Tera Lea with the paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Ole Brynman, in Princeton, Minn.

"I knew they could offer her more than I could," Mrs. Goodlake said.

After the parents separated, each was married again and each settled in Fort Lauderdale.

Two months ago, Mrs. Goodlake separated from her second husband. She advertised for the sitter to take care of her son and daughter so she could take a job as a cook.

Tera Lea came here last week to spend the summer with her father and stepmother. She will return to Minnesota this summer. She is a student at Bethany College High School in Mankato.

Meantime, she will be her mother's baby sitter.

Propaganda Abundant In Asia

SEOUL, South Korea (AP)—The 10th anniversary of the outbreak of the Korean War brought a torrent of Communist propaganda Saturday against U.S. troops in Asia.

South Korea took some of the steam out of the Red onslaught with an announcement that it has abandoned the idea—promoted by ex-President Syngman Rhee—of unifying Korea by force.

Caretaker Prime Minister Huh Chung, who succeeded Rhee as chief of the government after a popular revolt in April, declared that while South Korea strongly wants unification it has discarded Rhee's old "march north" slogan as an emotional cliche.

At the truce village of Panmunjom, in hot sunny weather similar to that during the Communist invasion of June 25, 1950, Allied and Red delegates held their 120th full-dress war of words since the armistice was signed in 1953.

U.S. Marine Corps Maj. Gen. Marion L. Dawson, chief Allied delegate, denied the familiar Red charge that "U.S. imperialist aggression" started the conflict which cost 157,000 American casualties, including 54,000 lives.

He said that during the seven-year truce, the U.N. Command has collected evidence of 79 truce violations in the air and 360 on the ground by Communist forces. He said the Allies have captured 1,600 Red spies. He accused the Communists of illegally introducing 60 jet planes into North Korea, of seizing South Korean fishing boats and of operating illegal patrols in the truce zone.

North Korean Maj. Gen. Joo Chang-joon demanded the immediate withdrawal of all foreign troops from South Korea "for the peaceful unification of our fatherland." He accused the United States of perpetuating the division of Korea.

The U.N. Commission for the Unification and Rehabilitation of Korea called again on North Korea to agree to the U.N. plan for unifying the peninsula with free elections, which the Reds have repeatedly rejected.

Machinists Vote Today On Contract

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Machinists at Douglas and Convair plants vote Sunday on new contract offers, but an impasse continued in the 11-day strike against Lockheed missiles and space division.

About 25,000 employes at Convair plants in San Diego are expected to approve the latest contract offer in balloting Sunday. Another 6,000 machinists at Douglas's plant in El Segundo, Calif., also are voting on a similar two-year contract.

Negotiators of the International Assn. of Machinists (IAM) have recommended approval of the contracts, which provide for wage increases of about 15 cents an hour over the two-year period, including cost-of-living benefits.

Three federal mediators have had no major programs to report in negotiations between Lockheed and the machinists at San Francisco. About 10,000 machinists at four locations — Sunnyvale, Van Nuys, Vandenberg Air Force Base and Santa Cruz, Calif. — are involved in the dispute.

Membership meetings have been scheduled for next Tuesday at which time union leaders are expected to report on the progress of the negotiations with Lockheed missile and space, makers of the Polaris missile.

There has been speculation negotiators will watch closely the voting by Convair and Douglas employes before taking any new steps in the Lockheed dispute. The company offered substantially the same terms as approved by union negotiators in the Convair and Douglas disputes but IAM representatives indicate there are unique features that must be considered in the talks with Lockheed.

TORONTO (AP) — Gina Lollobrigida passed the driver's test in her new hometown with Examiner John Hardy's appraisal that she was "cool and relaxed." Then she commented on driving here and there: "In Rome it is worse than here. Naples is worse than Rome. In California there are many policemen, and it is better. In Toronto there are some fools and not enough police."

When Mrs. Goodlake and her former husband, Arnold Brynman, separated in 1946, they agreed to leave Tera Lea with the paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Ole Brynman, in Princeton, Minn.

"I knew they could offer her more than I could," Mrs. Goodlake said.

After the parents separated, each was married again and each settled in Fort Lauderdale.

Two months ago, Mrs. Goodlake separated from her second husband. She advertised for the sitter to take care of her son and daughter so she could take a job as a cook.

Tera Lea came here last week to spend the summer with her father and stepmother. She will return to Minnesota this summer. She is a student at Bethany College High School in Mankato.

Meantime, she will be her mother's baby sitter.

Propaganda Abundant In Asia

SEOUL, South Korea (AP)—The 10th anniversary of the outbreak of the Korean War brought a torrent of Communist propaganda Saturday against U.S. troops in Asia.

South Korea took some of the steam out of the Red onslaught with an announcement that it has abandoned the idea—promoted by ex-President Syngman Rhee—of unifying Korea by force.

Caretaker Prime Minister Huh Chung, who succeeded Rhee as chief of the government after a popular revolt in April, declared that while South Korea strongly wants unification it has discarded Rhee's old "march north" slogan as an emotional cliche.

At the truce village of Panmunjom, in hot sunny weather similar to that during the Communist invasion of June 25, 1950, Allied and Red delegates held their 426th full-dress war of words since the armistice was signed in 1953.

U.S. Marine Corps Maj. Gen. Marion L. Dawson, chief Allied delegate, denied the familiar Red charge that "U.S. imperialist aggression" started the conflict which cost 157,000 American casualties, including 54,000 lives.

He said that during the seven-year truce, the U.N. Command has collected evidence of 79 truce violations in the air and 360 on the ground by Communist forces. He said the Allies have captured 1,600 Red spies. He accused the Communists of illegally introducing 464 jet planes into North Korea, of seizing South Korean fishing boats and of operating illegal patrols in the truce zone.

North Korean Maj. Gen. Joo Chang-joon demanded the immediate withdrawal of all foreign troops from South Korea "for the peaceful unification of our fatherland." He accused the United States of perpetuating the division of Korea.

The U.N. Commission for the Unification and Rehabilitation of Korea called again on North Korea to agree to the U.N. plan for unifying the peninsula with free elections, which the Reds have repeatedly rejected.

Machinists Vote Today On Contract

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Machinists at Douglas and Convair plants vote Sunday on new contract offers, but an impasse continued in the 11-day strike against Lockheed missiles and space division.

About 25,000 employes at Convair plants in San Diego are expected to approve the latest contract offer in balloting Sunday. Another 6,000 machinists at Douglas's plant in El Segundo, Calif., also are voting on a similar two-year contract.

Negotiators of the International Assn. of Machinists (IAM) have recommended approval of the contracts, which provide for wage increases of about 15 cents an hour over the two-year period, including cost-of-living benefits.

Three federal mediators have had no major programs to report in negotiations between Lockheed and the machinists at San Francisco. About 10,000 machinists at four locations — Sunnyvale, Van Nuys, Vandenberg Air Force Base and Santa Cruz, Calif. — are involved in the dispute.

Membership meetings have been scheduled for next Tuesday at which time union leaders are expected to report on the progress of the negotiations with Lockheed missile and space makers of the Polaris missile.

There has been speculation negotiators will watch closely the voting by Convair and Douglas employes before taking any new steps in the Lockheed dispute. The company offered substantially the same terms as approved by union negotiators in the Convair and Douglas disputes but IAM representatives indicate there are unique features that must be considered in the talks with Lockheed.

Bowler Hat Owner Labels Hat His Own

LONDON (UPI) — London airport manager G. J. H. Jeffs has had four bowler hats stolen from him in the past four years. He finally decided that was enough.

Gina Lollobrigida 'Cool And Relaxed

TORONTO (AP) — Gina Lollobrigida passed the driver's test in her new hometown with Examiner John Hardy's appraisal that she was "cool and relaxed." Then she commented on driving here and there: "In Rome it is worse than here. Naples is worse than Rome. In California there are many policemen, and it is better. In Toronto there are some fools and not enough police."

DREAM OF THE AGES

United Nations Is 15 Years Old

By RELMAN MORIN
AP Special Correspondent

To some of the men on the stage that day, a dream of the ages was about to come true.

The bright vision was at hand now, the vision of a world without war, the end of aggression, the renunciation of armed force as an instrument of national purpose, the banishing of a specter that had haunted mankind since the beginning of time.

It was June 26, 1945, exactly 15 years ago.

One by one, the 50 men mounted the stage of the Opera House in San Francisco. The flags of 50 nations gleamed in the great hall. One by one, the representatives of those nations signed the document which lay open on a long table.

It was the Charter of the United Nations.

So began the great experiment. Could it suceed?

Here were 50 nations, big and small, weak and strong. They were in different stages of political and social development. Their cultural memories were different. They lived under different systems of government. Most important, they held widely different attitudes about the relation of the individual to the state, and the basic rights of men.

Still, it was a shining vision.

One thing was not apparent in that hopeful hour—the representatives of the Soviet Union, and its Communist satellites, had no intention of adhering even to the first article of the Charter which pledges the signatories to strive for international peace and security.

Within six months from the date of the signing of the charter, and the formal beginning of the United Nations, Iran complained to the Security Council that Soviet troops were still occupying parts of its territory. Eventually, in May, 1946, the Soviet forces withdrew.

Thereafter came the Berlin blockade, the Korean war, the war in Indochina, the bloody suppression of the Hungarian rebellion, to name the outstanding Communist violations of Article 1 of the Charter.

While they sat as members of the United Nations, ostensibly subscribing to its principles, the Communists relentlessly carried on the cold war, using methods as old as war itself.

Largely as a result, there were many complaints from many nations to the Security Council.

The Soviets countered by casting 87 vetoes, paralyzing action. All other nations combined have filed only seven vetoes.

The United Nations is 15 years old now.

What is its image in the eys of ordinary people all over the world? What do they think of its accomplishments? Do they think it has made the world a better place to live in?

Associated Press correspondents around the globe recently went out to obtain answers to these questions. They focussed primarily on the man in the street, avoiding diplomats and government officials.

A composite picture emerged, in this general pattern—

A majority of those questioned are still optimistic about the United Nations, and believe it has done some good.

"The U.N. can best be described as a drilling outfit, drilling toward world peace and brotherhood," said Douglas Lauderdale, an Atlanta Ga., attorney.

"Over the years, the U.N. has grown, and this means that people want it," said Basna Charawi, an Egyptian university student.

"I think it has worked out pretty well," said Tong Chiu, employee of an import-export firm in Hong Kong. "At least the world has this place to try to settle differences. Without it, the nations would have no place to do so."

"If there is going to be any brotherhood at all in the world, it must come from the U.N.," said Camille Petersen, member of the graduating class of Stanford University, Palo Alto, Calif.

"I believe the United Nations has helped preserve the peace. I think there is a chance that it will find a way to permanent peace," said Mrs. Leighlian Vail, who operates a farm near Topeka, Kan.

About two-thirds of all the hundreds questioned around the world gave answers like these.

Dissenters gave these answers—

A Polish student of economy, who asked not to be identified, said, "there is no hope whatsoever of world peace and brotherhood because Russia is an expanding nation and will not renounce its hold over the satellite countries. All compromises reached in the U.N. were attained at a cost to the non-Communist countries."

"Problems are never really allowed to be solved by the U.N.," said Antonio de Castro Araujo Silva, a Brazilian seaman. "Both sides use it as a platform for propaganda."

"It's a waste of good money and time. I'm in favor of eliminating it. I don't believe it could be improved," said Thomas D. Brooks, a Louisiana employment officer.

"The U.N. has reached a futile stage," said John F. Day, an Australian businessman. "A number of nations are not cooperating and the U.N. will be frustrated by these nations. . . ."

Disputes between nations color the views of the citizens of the countries involved—

"India complained about the Pakistani aggression in Kashmir," said Pawan Kapur, a student in New Delhi, India. "What on earth is the U.N. doing about it?

The U.N. is doing many good things," said Mustafa Osman, a gardner in Cairo, Epypt, "but remember it created Israel. If there was no U.N., there wouldn't be an Israel or a million Arab refugees. . ."

The advantages of the United Nations as a forum where nations can debate their differences were noted by many of those who admire the organization—

"The U.N. is better than no U.N.," said a lady librarian in Tokyo. "It has brought open discussion of world issues before an international forum. It also is an advancement in that it provides a place for new, young and backward countries to meet, to cooperate and become stronger."

Critics and admirers alike agreed that the United Nations had been useful in halting some wars and that the probabilities of continued peace today are greater because of it—

"The U.N., has helped in many crises, Suez and Viet Nam, for example," said a Japanese clerk.

Lars Nenander, a Swedish policeman, and former member of the United Nations Emergency Force in the Gaza Strip, said:

"I believe the U.N. avoided, or let's say postponed, a bigger scale war in 1956 (in the Middle East). The U.N. might be able to stop the civil war in Algeria if France would permit."

"The U.N. did not prevent fighting in Korea or Budapest," said a Polish hotel clerk. "But it has prevented war in the Far East."

"It may have helped to avoid some mischief in the world, but above all it gives a kind of reassuring feeling to the man in the street whether the reassurance is well founded or not," said Christian L'Oreille, a French medical technician.

"The U.N. has acted as a fire brigade," said Stockholm restaurand manager Gunnar Wiberg. "The speed and the efficiency are impressive. The U.N. is not to blame for the failures. The responsibility must be shifted to the nations concerned."

"It quite possibly averted World War III at the beginning of the Korean conflict," said R. H. Carson, advertising director of the Raleigh, N.C., News and Observer. "I think it would work in the Berlin crisis if allowed to, but not with Russia's veto power."

Friends and foes of the United Nations agreed that the organization's greatest problem is misuse of the veto in the Security Council—

"The U.N. hasn't made much progress because the veto is always there to be used to prevent something being done," said Ted Dolly, a London telephone operator.

"The veto power was not a bright idea," said Hans Frese, a Berlin salesman. "A simple majority vote would be better."

"The organization should be strengthened," said a Warsaw bookkeeper, "but I do not see how this can be done unless the veto is abolished."

Has the United Nations made the world a better place in which to live?

"The world is better because of the U.N.," said Ellen D. Leyburn, college professor in Georgia. "Its subsidiary agencies have done tremendous things."

"I don't believe the world is a much better place to live in because of the U.N.," said Ira Flenер, Kansas City architect. "We should have allowed the people in the last world war to settle things their way."

O. A. Vas, Portuguese clerk, said, "yes, definitely because through its work some conflicting interests have mangled to come to some sort of terms. Also, by ensuring or at least endeavoring to ensure that the rights of man are respected throughout the world, the U.N. has played an important role in making the world a better place."

"If there were no U.N.," said a Polish truck driver, "the world would be a much worse place."

"There's no question that the U.N. has done a lot of good in fields like medicine and education," said Lewis Gaskill, Dallas insurance man, "but so far as stabilizing world peace, it has been a total flop."

The majority opinion: The United Nations has done pretty well in its first 15 years.

The minority view: It hasn't worked, primarily because it is powerless to settle the great struggle between East and West.

Lars Nenander, a Swedish policeman, and former member of the United Nations Emergency Force in the Gaza Strip, said:

"I believe the U.N. avoided, or let's say postponed, a bigger scale war in 1956 (in the Middle East). The U.N. might be able to stop the civil war in Algeria if France would permit."

High Court To Rule On Gas Rate Case

By HARRY WILSON SHARPE

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Supreme Court has agreed to decide whether state courts can overturn on "common law" grounds decisions of the Federal Power Commission in interstate natural gas rate cases.

This right is now reserved exclusively for the Federal courts.

prducer contracts which could be affected. Hence the case is tremendously important to the gas industry.

The issue already is being tested in scores of actions in state and federal courts and, according to industry sources, hundreds more may be filed "for the record" before the court acts.

The suits are a direct challenge of the FPC's powers under the 1938 Natural Gas Act as altered by the Supreme Court's famous June 7, 1954 Phillips decision making all interstate gas prices subject to FPC utility-type approvel.

AUTHORITY

In the test case the Delaware Supreme Court claimed "common law" jurisdiction on grounds the FPC had misused its authority under the gas act to approve an allegedly illegal rate increase as part of a basic contract.

It did so in holding that Cities Service Gas Co., a pipeline distributor, was entitled to refunds from three producers—Pan American Petroleum Co. (formerly Stanolind), Texaco, and Columbian Fuel Corp.

Cities Service began its suits six years ago. They reached the Supreme Court on appeal this spring when the producers challenged the Delaware court's right to interfere with the FPC's administration of the Gas Act.

The complex question raised by Cities Service was this: Can the FPC approve a contract rate increase when the increase was based on a Kansas minimum price fixing order which later was voided by the U.S. Supreme Court? In this circumstance the increase was included in basic rate schedules which all independent producers had to file with the FPC after June 7, 1954, in compliance with the Phillips decision.

Three Teenagers Found Guilty In Assault Of Girl

GREENVILLE, Miss. (AP)—A Washington County jury found three teenagers guilty Saturday of raping a 19-year-old Mathiston girl but were unable to decide the verdict.

Under state law, an automatic life sentence results when the jury cannot decide punishment for rape.

Defense attorneys E. B. Taylor and Joe Biggers said they would file a motion for a new trial.

The youths are. Robert Earl Blade, 19; Billy Huggins, 18, and O'Neal Luke, 18.

The trio was accused of picking up the girl while she was visiting her sister in Greenville and then taking her to the country and assaulting her.

The defense maintained the girl submitted willingly and then took money.

Circuit Judge Arthur Clark cleared the courtroom when the trial started and did not allow spectators or newsmen to witness proceedings.

Ex-Paratrooper Is Shot To Death

LAKE HIAWATHA, N.J. (AP)—A 38-year-old former paratrooper was shot to death in bed early yesterday by an unknown assailant after shoving his wife to safety on the floor.

The victim, Joseph F. Lupoli, 38, was shot once in the temple at his 60 River Dr. home. His wife, Ann, 26, told police she saw a gunshot flash in the darkness. The intruder fled immediately.

Three children—Jean, 4, Frank, 2, and Susan, 14 months—were asleep in adjoining bedrooms.

A new .22-caliber pistol was found near the front door in a clump of bushes. Nothing was reported missing from the home. Police said they could discover no apparent motive for the killing.

Detective Sgt. Arthur Denny said Mrs. Lupoli had told him she did not get a look at the gunman and could give no description.

The Lupolis had been married five years. Lupoli was married once before.

Shrimp Fishing Will Be Closed

NEW ORLEANS (UPI)—Shrimp fishing will be closed to sportsmen and commercial fishing in Louisiana's inside waters from July 1 to Aug. 15, the State Wild Life and Fisheries Commission said today.

Commission director Rudolph Easterly said "inside" waters include the areas inside a three-mile zone from the continental coast line and all other waters where the tide rises and falls or into which salt water shrimp migrate.

Easterly reminded sports fishermen and those planning fishing trips to "lay away" bait in storage to tide them over during the closed season. He also warned that all available boats and personnel will be shifted to the closed areas to enforce the closed season.

Martin Reports Double Vote Tie In Council Races

BATON ROUGE (AP)—Secretary of State Wade O. Martin said Friday Avoyelles Parish had the first double tie, to his knowledge, with two candidates for aldermen in two different races.

In a Simmesport contest for aldermen, there were eight candidates for five places on the aldermanic board. For the No. 5 spot, Andrew Barr and David Lemoine each received 295 votes. They will compete in a runoff June 28.

The second tie occurred in the Plaucheville election, where five candidates competed for three aldermanic seats. In this race, M. Whim Chenevert and Roland J. Rabalais each got 42 votes, and tied for the third spot.

Chenevert withdrew, leaving Rabalais elected.

George Bernard Shaw said: "I believe in the discipline of silence and could talk for hours about it."

last night that they could not varify whether or not the rainfall had been the same throughout the state, but that Texas, Mississippi, Louisiana and Arkansas had all had scattered general thundershowers.

Officials at Selman Field said that the rains were a result of a warm front moving north, bringing scattered thunderstorms throughout the state.

The weather forecast for the Monroe area today calls for partly cloudy skies and a chance for more early morning and late afternoon thundershowers. Temperatures are scheduled to range from 70 to 90 degrees.

The high recorded at Selman Field yesterday by the Federal Aviation Agency was 84, and the low was 74.

Throughout the state, cloudy skies and scattered thundershowers are expected. The thundershowers will be most numerous in the western portions of the state.

In Arkansas rain is expected along with warm temperatures.

old Carol, were found in a sawdust pit near Fredericksburg, Va. on March 4, 1959.

The entire family vanished on the night of Jan. 11, 1959, from their car driving along a rural road near Mineral, Va., after a visit with relatives.

The FBI charges pertaining to the mother and oldest daughter apparently were filed because they were taken across a state line.

Virginia authorities were expected to file murder charges in the case of Jackson and his younger daughter.

Rees was arrestd by the FBI Friday as a fugitive from Maryland prosecution for the slaying June 26, 1957, of Margaret Harold, a clerk-typist at Fort Meade, Md., who was abducted from a car parked on a lover's lane near Gambrills, Md.

Her body was found in a shack only a few miles from the spot where, nearly two years later, authorities uncovered the bodies of Mrs. Jackson and her five-year old daughter.

Similarities in the cases led authorities to combine efforts in the investigation.

The trail led to Rees who was working in a music store in West Memphis, Ark., where he was questioned, given lie detector tests and then formally arrested on a fugitive warrant yesterday. He was held here for a hearing July 6.

Earlier this month, a Dutch telepathist, Peter Herkos, called in to assist in the Jackson case, identified a Falls Church, Va., trash collector as the slayer. The trash collector, at the request of his wife, was given a sanity test and was sent last week to Southwestern State Hospital at Marion, Va., for a period of mental observation. He was not charged with the crimes.

Cotton Sees Slim Range On Market

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures continued to move in a narrow, irregular pattern on the New York Cotton Exchange this week, closing 40 cents a bale higher to 40 cents a bale lower.

Trade and mill price fixing sustained demand to some extent. Some commission house demand for contracts for delivery in distant months ago developed on reports the democratic party would favor a higher level of price supports.

The nearby July contract was aided at times by short covering. In addition, switching from the spot months to the more distant positions tended to depress the former and bolster the latter.

Trade talk during the week touched frequently on the rate at which cotton continues to be registered for export this season under the government's payment in kind program. The Commodity Credit Corp. reported that in the week ended June 17 it registered 62,724 bales compared with 43,284 the previous week.

This contrasted with earlier expectations that registrations under the program would taper off sharply with the season approaching its close.

Actual exports slower somewhat, being estimated by the exchange service bureau at 82,000 bales in the week ended Tuesday compared with 97,000 the previous week and 47,000 in the similar 1959 week.

Exports for the season through June 21 reached an estimated 6,306,000 bales compared with 2,589,000 to the same time last season.

ON SPY PLANE CASE

Senate Group Hurls Accusation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee Saturday night accused the Eisenhower administration of mishandling the U2 spy plane case. It said that at least the affair had given Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev a handy excuse for wrecking the Paris summit conference.

The committee suggested that the spy flight of May 1, which went down deep inside the Soviet Union, probably should never have been undertaken. It said that when the failure did occur, the government's handling seems to have made bad matters worse.

The 28-page report to the Senate was based on extensive committee questioning of top administration officials.

It was issued on the eve of President Eisenhower's return from a Far Eastern goodwill trip marred by cancellation of his projected visit to Japan.

Fourteen of the 17 Foreign Relations Committee members signed the report on the U2 incident. One Republican dissented.

One Republican and one Democrat signed a separate statement criticizing what they called a lack of coordination but generally defending the administration's handling of the case.

The committee acknowledge that despite its close questioning of Secretary of State Christian A. Herter, Secretary of Defense Thomas S. Gates, and Central Intelligence Director Allen W. Dulles, it had not succeeded in obtaining every piece of information essential to making definitive judgements on the U2 case.

It said it had never found out, for example, precisely what information was sought by pilot Francis G. Powers when he took off on his ill-starred high-altitude flight across the Soviet Union. The committee knows only that Eisenhower has described the information as important to U.S. security.

The conclusions reached by the majority of the 17-member committee were thus qualified by many ifs.

The criticisms of the Eisenhower administration were couched in soft terms. The committee's Democratic leadership apparently wished for maximum Republican support and also wanted to deal in gingerly fashion with a matter delicate in U.S. politics as well as in international relations.

The most fully agreed-on criticism was that administration leaders and such key agencies as the White House, State Department, Defense Department and Central Intelligence Agency showed a lack of coordination and centralized control.

"At crucial points the coordination broke down. . .," the main committee report said. "There are few, if any, references in the record to direction, and this seems to the committee to be what was most lacking in this period. . . .If this direction is not to come from the White House, then it ought to be made clear by the White House that it is to come from the State Department."

In a separate statement, Sens. Frank J. Lausche (D-Ohio) and Alexander Wiley (R-Wis) generally defended the administration's handling of the case, particularly President Eisenhower's decision to tell the truth about it and assume personal responsibility for spy flights over the Soviet Union.

Police seized 10 girls and a boy after they had robbed three 15-year-old girls of a purse, containing $1.56, and a portable radio. Officers found three knives, a pair of brass knuckles and a long, steel fork in the police wagon in which the 11 had ridden to the station house. All were turned over to juvenile authorities.

Firemen and police fighting a blaze Friday night became involved in a brawl involving two groups of Negroes when a car pursued by some 20 teen-agers on foot plowed into a piece of fire-fighting equipment.

In the melee that followed, three occupants of the car were beaten, one into unconsciousness. They were taken to a hospital. Police seized the "Robin" gang, and ordered a roundup of juvenile gangs in the area.

During the brawl, which police said apparently stemmed from an altercation between two youths earlier in the day, a fireman was hit on the head by a rock.

Budget Move For Colleges Is Postponed

sion was not really secret, although members of the board gathered in a side room in Jackson's office. He said the board members just had their customary coffee and talked.

Member Raymond Heard, Ruston, said the board members merely talked in groups about topics in which they were interested.

BATON ROUGE (AP) — The State Board of Education Saturday killed 5-4 a motion that would have asked the Legislature to quit changing colleges to universities without recommendations from the board.

But the board had a long and hearty discussion showing dissatisfaction with the several bills.

Joseph Davies, Arabi, president of the board, pointed out that a resolution was approved two years ago asking that the Legislature not designate the colleges under its jurisdiction universities unless the board approved.

Isom J. Guillory, Eunice member, moved to table the whole matter, but F. E. Cole of Many got back into the general topic in a way that he said was "through the back door."

In an obvious move to poke fun at the several bills in the Legislature to put university labels on colleges, Cole offered a resolution to name all institutions of higher learning under the board universities.

There the eight such institutions and six of them would be changed to university status under proposed legislation.

One bill to change Southwestern Louisiana Institute at Lafayette to the University of Southwestern Louisiana was on the governor's desk and at 12:01 a.m. Sunday was scheduled to become law unless the governor vetoed it. The colleges which would be changed include Northwestern State College, Southeastern Louisiana College, McNeese State, Louisiana Tech, Grambling (for Negroes) and SLI.

Mrs. Eleanore H. Meade, member from New Orleans, told the board she sent letters to state representatives and senators asking that the various bills be killed.

She said she felt it her duty to tell the lawmakers the schools should not be called universities when they really are not qualified.

Robert H. Curry, member from Shreveport, said he also believed there should be no such changes without the action being channeled through the board. He pointed out that Grambling was the only college which came to the board first.

Mrs. Meade asked for a resolution to "call down the Legislature . . .the point is to ask them not to pass certain bills."

President Joel Fletcher of LSI told the board he was not consulted about the bill and he had opposed such legislation before.

But he pointed out that the late Sen. Rexford McCullough went along with him in opposing similar legislation and McCullough was defeated at the polls.

Fletcher has said earlier, however, that the change of name would assist the school to get accreditation and recognition.

Guillory, asked that the whole matter before the board be tabled because "I think we are too late."

Guillory said what the board really needed was a legislative committee to get the stand of the board before the legislators.

"You might call it a lobby," Guillory said.

The vote on the motion to table was 5-4.

But as an attempt was made to adjourn, Cole offered his motion to change all institutions of higher learning under the board to universities.

"And the trade schools?" Leon Gary of Houma asked.

Cole said the trade schools shouldn't be included, but he predicted that all the colleges by 1962 would be named universities anyway.

"By inference," Cole said, "all of them have about the same position."

George Madison, member from Bastrop, offered a second to Cole's motion just before it died so he could have his own way.

"I don't think," he said, "that we can support more than two universities in Louisiana — Southern and LSU. I don't think the name institute carries any subnormal connotation."

Madison said he was against any lobby in the Legislature as such, but "I think we ought to advise them, and I wish they would advise us more."

Alfred Roberts, Lake Charles, who described himself as a lame duck member, said he believed the State Board of Education had to assume leadership and should have a separate staff to keep up with its affairs.

At any rate, he said, "I think the State Board of Education should be given an opportunity to make recommendations to those in the Legislature."

Billy Graham Raps Churches On Attitudes

Sen. Johnson Receives 27 Ky. Votes

LOUSVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The Kentucky Democratic convention strengthened the presidential ambitions of Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas Saturday by handing him a probable 27 of the state's national convention votes.

The state meeting did not order the unit rule, or impose binding instructions to support any one candidate.

But a source close to Gov. Bert T. Combs, who is backing Johnson, said the senator is assured of 27 Kentucky votes.

At the convention, Combs took firm control of the national delegation and the state's party machinery.

Still doubtful were the three votes from the populous 3rd Congressional district of Louisville and Jefferson County.

One 3rd District delegate said all three of these votes would be cast for Sen. John F. Kennedy (D-Mass).

The remaining vote will be shared by members of the National Democratic Committee — former Gov. A. B. Chandler and Mrs. W. B. Ardery. Both say they favor Adlai E. Stevenson.

Mrs. Ardery reportedly will not attend the national convention, however, leaving her half-vote to be cast by an alternate.

Sentiment for Johnson was apparent early today when the state's eight congressional districts held separate conventions.

Most delegates wore Johnson buttons and some carried placards boosting Johnson.

Engineering the drive for Johnson votes was former U. S. Sen. Earle Clements, now Kentucky's highway commissioner.

In a last-minute switch, Clements was chosen a delegate at large to the national convention, along with Combs and Lt. Gov. Wilson Wyatt, who was Stevenson's national campaign manager in 1952 and his personal adviser in 1956.

Wyatt declined to say which presidential candidate he favors.

Notably absent from the cheering convention throng were Chandler and former Gov. Keen Johnson, the Democratic nominee for U. S. Senate in November. Chandler was reported "out in the state" as his friends surrendered party control. Johnson is recoveing from surgery.

The state convention named Wyatt and Mrs. Geneva Blue as National Democratic committee members to succeed Chandler and Mrs. Ardery after the Los Angeles convention.

The slate of delegates had been carefully selected in advance by the Combs-Clements leadership and got prompt ratification by the state convention.

Greek Heiress Ends Marriage

CHATOM, Ala. (UPI)— Blonde Mrs. Athina (Tina) Onassis, a beautiful Greek heiress, ended her 14-year-old marriage to multimillionaire Aristotle Socrates Onassis with a quickie divorce in this small southwest Alabama town about a week ago, it was learned Saturday.

Court records were not available over the weekend but court officials confirmed the 29-year-old shipping heiress obtained the divorce in Washington County circuit court. Officials said it was about a week or 10 days ago.

Mrs. Onassis was reported to have purchased a lot on Dauphin Island, an expensive gulf resort in Mobile County. Court officials reported Mrs. Onassis had bought some Alabama property and planned to build a house on it. This satisfied the residence requirements of the state's divorce law, the sources said.

last night that they could not varify whether or not the rainfall had been the same throughout the state, but that Texas, Mississippi, Louisiana and Arkansas had all had scattered general thundershowers.

Officials at Selman Field said that the rains were a result of a warm front moving north, bringing scattered thunderstorms throughout the state.

The weather forecast for the Monroe area today calls for partly cloudy skies and a chance for more early morning and late afternoon thundershowers. Temperatures are scheduled to range from 70 to 90 degrees.

The high recorded at Selman Field yesterday by the Federal Aviation Agency was 84, and the low was 74.

Throughout the state, cloudy skies and scattered thundershowers are expected. The thundershowers will be most numerous in the western portions of the state.

In Arkansas rain is expected along with warm temperatures.

old Carol, were found in a sawdust pit near Fredericksburg, Va. on March 4, 1959.

The entire family vanished on the night of Jan. 11, 1959, from their car driving along a rural road near Mineral, Va., after a visit with relatives.

The FBI charges pertaining to the mother and oldest daughter apparently were filed because they were taken across a state line.

Virginia authorities were expected to file murder charges in the case of Jackson and his younger daughter.

Rees was arrestd by the FBI Friday as a fugitive from Maryland prosecution for the slaying June 26, 1957, of Margaret Harold, a clerk-typist at Fort Meade, Md., who was abducted from a car parked on a lover's lane near Gambrills, Md.

Her body was found in a shack only a few miles from the spot where, nearly two years later, authorities uncovered the bodies of Mrs. Jackson and her five-year old daughter.

Similarities in the cases led authorities to combine efforts in the investigation.

The trail led to Rees who was working in a music store in West Memphis, Ark., where he was questioned, given lie detector tests and then formally arrested on a fugitive warrant yesterday. He was held here for a hearing July 6.

Earlier this month, a Dutch telepathist, Peter Herkos, called in to assist in the Jackson case, identified a Falls Church, Va., trash collector as the slayer. The trash collector, at the request of his wife, was given a sanity test and was sent last week to Southwestern State Hospital at Marion, Va., for a period of mental observation. He was not charged with the crimes.

Cotton Sees Slim Range On Market

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures continued to move in a narrow, irregular pattern on the New York Cotton Exchange this week, closing 40 cents a bale higher to 40 cents a bale lower.

Trade and mill price fixing sustained demand to some extent. Some commission house demand for contracts for delivery in distant months ago developed on reports the democratic party would favor a higher level of price supports.

The nearby July contract was aided at times by short covering. In addition, switching from the spot months to the more distant positions tended to depress the former and bolster the latter.

Trade talk during the week touched frequently on the rate at which cotton continues to be registered for export this season under the government's payment in kind program. The Commodity Credit Corp. reported that in the week ended June 17 it registered 62,724 bales compared with 43,284 the previous week.

This contrasted with earlier expectations that registrations under the program would taper off sharply with the season approaching its close.

Actual exports slower somewhat, being estimated by the exchange service bureau at 82,000 bales in the week ended Tuesday compared with 97,000 the previous week and 47,000 in the similar 1959 week.

Exports for the season through June 21 reached an estimated 6,306,000 bales compared with 2,589,000 to the same time last season.

ON SPY PLANE CASE

Senate Group Hurls Accusation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee Saturday night accused the Eisenhower administration of mishandling the U2 spy plane case. It said that at least the affair had given Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev a handy excuse for wrecking the Paris summit conference.

The committee suggested that the spy flight of May 1, which went down deep inside the Soviet Union, probably should never have been undertaken. It said that when the failure did occur, the government's handling seems to have made bad matters worse.

The 28-page report to the Senate was based on extensive committee questioning of top administration officials.

It was issued on the eve of President Eisenhower's return from a Far Eastern goodwill trip marred by cancellation of his projected visit to Japan.

Fourteen of the 17 Foreign Relations Committee members signed the report on the U2 incident. One Republican dissented.

One Republican and one Democrat signed a separate statement criticizing what they called a lack of coordination but generally defending the administration's handling of the case.

The committee acknowledge that despite its close questioning of Secretary of State Christian A. Herter, Secretary of Defense Thomas S. Gates, and Central Intelligence Director Allen W. Dulles, it had not succeeded in obtaining every piece of information essential to making definitive judgements on the U2 case.

It said it had never found out, for example, precisely what information was sought by pilot Francis G. Powers when he took off on his ill-starred high-altitude flight across the Soviet Union. The committee knows only that Eisenhower has described the information as important to U.S. security.

The conclusions reached by the majority of the 17-member committee were thus qualified by many ifs.

The criticisms of the Eisenhower administration were couched in soft terms. The committee's Democratic leadership apparently wished for maximum Republican support and also wanted to deal in gingerly fashion with a matter delicate in U.S. politics as well as in international relations.

The most fully agreed-on criticism was that administration leaders and such key agencies as the White House, State Department, Defense Department and Central Intelligence Agency showed a lack of coordination and centralized control.

"At crucial points the coordination broke down. . . ." the main committee report said. "There are few, if any, references in the record to direction, and this seems to the committee to be what was most lacking in this period. . . .If this direction is not to come from the White House, then it ought to be made clear by the White House that it is to come from the State Department."

In a separate statement, Sens. Frank J. Lausche (D-Ohio) and Alexander Wiley (R-Wis) generally defended the administration's handling of the case, particularly President Eisenhower's decision to tell the truth about it and assume personal responsibility for spy flights over the Soviet Union.

five youths while riding on a city bus. The youths fled.

Police seized 10 girls and a boy after they had robbed three 15-year-old girls of a purse, containing $1.56, and a portable radio. Officers found three knives, a pair of brass knuckles and a long, steel fork in the police wagon in which the 11 had ridden to the station house. All were turned over to juvenile authorities.

Firemen and police fighting a blaze Friday night became involved in a brawl involving two groups of Negroes when a car pursued by some 20 teen-agers on foot plowed into a piece of fire-fighting equipment.

In the melee that followed, three occupants of the car were beaten, one into unconsciousness. They were taken to a hospital. Police seized the "Robin" gang, and ordered a roundup of juvenile gangs in the area.

During the brawl, which police said apparently stemmed from an altercation between two youths earlier in the day, a fireman was hit on the head by a rock.

Budget Move For Colleges Is Postponed

sion was not really secret, although members of the board gathered in a side room in Jackson's office. He said the board members just had their customary coffee and talked.

Member Raymond Heard, Ruston, said the board members merely talked in groups about topics in which they were interested.

BATON ROUGE (AP) — The State Board of Education Saturday killed 5-4 a motion that would have asked the Legislature to quit changing colleges to universities without recommendations from the board.

But the board had a long and hearty discussion showing dissatisfaction with the several bills.

Joseph Davies, Arabi, president of the board, pointed out that a resolution was approved two years ago asking that the Legislature not designate the colleges under its jurisdiction universities unless the board approved.

Isom J. Guillory, Eunice member, moved to table the whole matter, but F. E. Cole of Many got back into the general topic in a way that he said was "through the back door."

In an obvious move to poke fun at the several bills in the Legislature to put university labels on colleges, Cole offered a resolution to name all institutions of higher learning under the board universities.

There the eight such institutions and six of them would be changed to university status under proposed legislation.

One bill to change Southwestern Louisiana Institute at Lafayette to the University of Southwestern Louisiana was on the governor's desk and at 12:01 a.m. Sunday was scheduled to become law unless the governor vetoed it. The colleges which would be changed include Northwestern State College, Southeastern Louisiana College, McNeese State, Louisiana Tech, Grambling (for Negroes) and SLI.

Mrs. Eleanore H. Meade, member from New Orleans, told the board she sent letters to state representatives and senators asking that the various bills be killed.

She said she felt it her duty to tell the lawmakers the schools should not be called universities when they really are not qualified.

Robert H. Curry, member from Shreveport, said he also believed there should be no such changes without the action being channeled through the board. He pointed out that Grambling was the only college which came to the board first.

Mrs. Meade asked for a resolution to "call down the Legislature . . .the point is to ask them not to pass certain bills."

President Joel Fletcher of LSI told the board he was not consulted about the bill and he had opposed such legislation before.

But he pointed out that the late Sen. Rexford McCullough went along with him in opposing similar legislation and McCullough was defeated at the polls.

Fletcher has said earlier, however, that the change of name would assist the school to get accreditation and recognition.

Guillory, asked that the whole matter before the board be tabled because "I think we are too late."

Guillory said what the board really needed was a legislative committee to get the stand of the board before the legislators.

"You might call it a lobby," Guillory said.

The vote on the motion to table was 5-4.

But as an attempt was made to adjourn, Cole offered his motion to change all institutions of higher learning under the board to universities.

"And the trade schools?" Leon Gary of Houma asked.

Cole said the trade schools shouldn't be included, but he predicted that all the colleges by 1962 would be named universities anyway.

"By inference," Cole said, "all of them have about the same position."

George Madison, member from Bastrop, offered a second to Cole's motion just before it died so he could have his own way.

"I don't think," he said, "that we can support more than two universities in Louisiana — Southern and LSU. I don't think the name institute carries any subnormal connotation."

Madison said he was against any lobby in the Legislature as such, but "I think we ought to advise them, and I wish they would advise us more."

Alfred Roberts, Lake Charles, who described himself as a lame duck member, said he believed the State Board of Education had to assume leadership and should have a separate staff to keep up with its affairs.

District Change Facing Solons

WASHINGTON (AP) — Within the next two years, 24 state legislatures, more or less, will have to decide about reshaping the districts which elect their states' representatives to Congress.

Except for congressmen themselves, probably nobody is more interested in the changes the 1960 census will bring about than the leaders of political parties and factions.

So far as federal law is concerned, the state lawmakers can do pretty much as they like, or as the needs of their majority parties dictate.

They can create little districts and big districts side by side. The boundaries can meander to bring in or to leave out particular pockets of party votes, to provide a safe district for a favored member or to make things rough for one not favored, to balance city votes with rural votes.

Districts can be drawn with fantastic borders to look like the fabulous gerrymander, or—as Rep. Emanuel Celler (D-NY) described some present ones—"like contours of wash hanging out on the line."

All of the changes will be in the House of Representatives which has a permanent legal membership of 435. Each state by law has two senators, regardless of population.

After the 1950 census changed the representation of 16 states, there were several cries of political foul in the redistricting.

Some resounding ones came from Democrats in California, who watched a Republican-controlled legislature redraw the boundaries to provide districts for seven additional House members. Booming California stands to gain eight more members this time, and the Democrats now control the Legislature. If they still do next year, the possibilities are such that some starry-eyed Democrats are talking of picking up a dozen members, or even more.

Other big, two-party states which face almost certain redistricting include New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts, all of which stand to lose members. Illinois may be another.

A proposed law pending in the House Judiciary Committee is avowedly designed to promote fair and rational districting. The committee has been working on the problem off and on since 1951. But political realists in the House give the measure little or no chance of being enacted in time to affect the 1962 congressional elections, if ever.

"The one stark fact that emerges from a study of the history of congressional apportionment is its embroilment in politics, in the sense of party contests and party interests," Justice Felix Frankfurter wrote in a 1946 landmark U.S. Supreme Court case. The court decided a contested Illinois apportionment was not a proper subject for judicial review.

There are authorities who contend that, even so, a completely outrageous gerrymander might be successfully attacked in federal court under the general guarantees of the U.S. Constitution.

Moreover, some states have their own constitutional or legal provisions on districting which might open the state courts to complaints. In general, however, one legislature's gerrymanders have been charged only by a later legislature.

An Associated Press computation based on preliminary census returns indicates 15 states probably will lose one or more house seats and nine will gain, effective with the congressional elections of 1962.

Strictly speaking, the states which gain need not redistrict—they could let the extra members be elected at large. Most, however, probably will redraw the lines.

The states which lose members have no choice. Unless they can absorb the loss by dropping existing at-large membership, they must redistrict or have their whole delegation elected statewide, a prospect which would give the horrors to the established political organizations in most states.

Since 1929, redistricting after each census has been largely automatic, although Congress retains the power at any time to change the rules.

The president, on the convening of Congress in the year after a census, sends the national lawmakers a report, actually prepared according to a prescribed formula by the census experts, showing how many members each state will be entitled to in the next Congress. Unless the House takes some action, its clerk within 15 days notifies the governors of the states, and then the problem is theirs and the legislatures.

It was the 1929 automatic Apportionment Act which voided some theoretical antigerrmandering provisions by repealing earlier laws.

FCC Head Gives View On Speech

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chairman Frederick W. Ford of the Federal Communications Commission suggested Saturday that a speech by Sen. William Proxmire (D-Wis) was intended to influence the FCC in a TV license dispute.

Ford made the suggestion in a taped radio-TV interview (WTOP) here when asked about the speech Proxmire made on the Senate floor last Monday.

Proxmire, raising a cry of "political payola," said then the FCC is now giving an advantage in TV license contests to firms with Congress members among their stockholders. Friday he issued a statement saying a high FCC official — whom he did not name — had since visited him and said this is the commission's policy.

The speech was based on a tentative FCC decision last month to grant a TV license in Albany, N.Y. to Capital Cities Broadcasting Corp., a firm numbering five house members among its stockholders.

Dog Tells Sad Story, Stranded

By PICK-WHISKEY
As told to
John O. B. Wallace

NEW YORK (AP) — You've heard the story about the man without a country, haven't you? Well, I'm a dog without a country—and it's a sad tale.

Some humans might think my life is a happy one—for a dog. (Oh, sure, I've heard that old bone about living a dog's life.)

You see, I've been back and forth across the Atlantic twice as a special passenger aboard the North German Llyod luxury liner, the Berlin.

What's so bad about that?

They don't have trees and fire hydrants on ships. So I want to get off this boat.

I'm not complaining about Capt. Guenther Roessing. And the captain's daughter, Heidi, is a real doll. But she's 19—too old for me.

Besides, she's not my real girl, anyway.

My real girl is Valerie Adams. She's only 8, and she's in England.

And here I am aboard this ship in New York Harbor. Nobody will let me get off.

Valerie took me with her when she went home last month with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Adams. They're British subjects, and they adopted me while they were living in Connecticut.

I'm really nothing to brag about. I'm small, partly black and partly tan—and mostly beagle. Valerie named me Pick.

"Well, they like me enough to take me home with them. But the British wouldn't let me off the boat when we got to Southampton.

Valerie didn't have an "import license" for me, the British said.

So Capt. Roessing took me up to the bridge, and he's been taking care of me ever since except for this last trip west.

That's when I met Heidi. She's a real doll, like—excuse me, as—I said. But—just like Valerie—she got off the boat without me.

So here I am back again with Capt. Roessing. He calls me Whiskey. I can't understand why, though, because I never touch the stuff.

Anyway, the captain is still trying to get that import license from the British consulate here before we sail back to Southampton. We're due there July 6 this trip.

Meanwhile, I've got to stay aboard because the Americans won't let me off the boat either.

They say I've got to have my vaccination and good health certificates, and Capt. Roeesing left them back in Southampton with the North German Lloyd's agents.

A sad tale? You're dog-gone right it is.

Assassination Try Advance Tip Eyed

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Newspapers quoted a high government official Saturday as crediting the United States for an advance tip on the assassination plot against President Romulo Betancourt.

The press quoted Defense Minister Josue Lopez Henrique, who suffered burns in Friday's explosion along with betancourt. The report, although not officially confirmed, was broadcast by the government radio.

Betancourt, a moderate leftist who has been the target of numerous plots during a year and a half as President, returned to Miraflores Palace with his face swollen and his hands bandaged to cover burns.

The country's borders were sealed, the armed forces were alerted against any attempt to overthrow the government, and about 40 persons were reported under arrest. Most were suspected sympathizers of the former dictator Gen. Marcos Perez Jimenez, now in exile in Florida.

The newspaper El Nacional reported the defense minister's account of the bomb plot.

The government heard of the plot through the U. S. Embassy and Gen. Pedro Aramburu, who as provisional president of Argentina steered that country back to civilian rule after the Peron dictatorship had been overthrown. Aramburu visited Venezuela earlier this year and received a warm welcome.

The government was warned that three former Nazi "technicians" and an Argentine planned to slip into Venezuela to kill Betancourt.

"This is Trujillo's work," Lopez Henrique said, referring to Generalissimo Rafael L. Trujillo, dictator of the Dominican Republic. "This could not be the work of a Venezuelan because our people will never descend to that level. Information received through the U. S. Embassy and Gen. Pedro Aramburu in recent days ratify this belief. . . ."

"We were advised that three German specialists in dynamite attempts had left Spain, probably for Venezuela.

"Gen. Aramburu, for his part, informed us from Argentina of the disappearance of an individual connected with the Dominican dictatorship who presumably formed part of a group planning to assassinate President Betancourt. The information from Argentina indicated that this man was heading north, probably to Venezuela."

Other newspapers carried similar reports. El Nacional did not say whether any measures were taken to prevent the entry of the four men.

Station Sending News To Cuba

By DONALD MAY

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A powerful, American-owned radio station is broadcasting news to Cuba from a tiny island of disputed sovereignty in the Caribbean, it was learned Saturday.

The protest, disowned by the State Department and U.S. Information Agency, has brought angry blasts from Cuban Premier Fidel Castro who charged it is a State Department anti - Castro propaganda outlet.

The U. S. Information Agency until very recently was planning almost the same project to fill what the government feels is an urgent need to get straight news to Cuba. Most Cuban radio stations are now government - controlled. But the agency said it abandoned the idea because of "interference and licensing" problems.

The station is operated by a private American group, the Gibraltar Steamship Corp. of New York City, which owns no ships. It set up shop last month on two-mile-long Swan Island, 97 miles from the coast of Honduras and 300 miles southwest of Cuba.

It began making medium-wave test broadcasts and almost immediately Cuba began blasting what it called a "U. S. government counter-revolutionary" station on the island.

On June 1 a State Department spokesman told a press conference "the only station that I know anything about on Swan Island is a U.S. Weather Bureau station."

Horton H. Heath, commercial manager of the New York firm, told UPI the 50 kilowatt, medium-wave "Radio Swan" began regular broadcasts more than a week ago between the hours of 8 p.m. and 10 p.m.

He said they include music, soap operas and news, in both English and Spanish, and that the station reaches 15 countries in the Caribbean, Central America and on the northern fringes of South America.

"It is strictly a commercial venture," he said, "and just a coincidence that it is what USIA had thought of. We plan to get advertisers. We haven't got any yet but are negotiating."

Congo Riots Injure 11, 6 Seriously

LEOPOLDVILLE, Belgian Congo (UPI)—Rival political groups battled in the streets with machetes and clubs Saturday over the election of a president for the new Congo nation.

First reports said 11 Africans were injured, six seriously, in the street brawling between Upper and Lower Congolese. Police arrested 44 persons and officials ordered all bars closed and a sundown curfew put into effect.

The fighting in scattered areas of the African quarters of Leopoldville broke out after hundreds of Upper Congo Bangala tribesmen barricaded the street outside their political headquarters to protest against the defeat of Jean Bolikango in Friday's election for president.

The Parliament overwhelmingly voted for Joseph Kasa Vubu, leader of the Lower Congo tribesmen.

Fifty Bangala marched to the European section of the city to demand an audience with newly-elected Premier Patrice Lumumba. He refused to see any of them.

A Welsh proverb has this cautious advice: Praise the wise man behind his back, but a woman to her face.

WITHIN NEXT TWO YEARS

District Change Facing Solons

WASHINGTON (AP) — Within the next two years, 24 state legislatures, more or less, will have to decide about reshaping the districts which elect their states' representatives to Congress.

Except for congressmen themselves, probably nobody is more interested in the changes the 1960 census will bring about than the leaders of political parties and factions.

So far as federal law is concerned, the state lawmakers can do pretty much as they like, or as the needs of their majority parties dictate.

They can create little districts and big districts side by side. The boundaries can meander to bring in or to leave out particular pockets of party votes, to provide a safe district for a favored member or to make things rough for one not favored, to balance city votes with rural votes.

Districts can be drawn with fantastic borders to look like the fabulous gerrymander, or—as Rep. Emanuel Celler (D-NY) described some present ones—"like contours of wash hanging out on the line."

All of the changes will be in the House of Representatives which has a permanent legal membership of 435. Each state by law has two senators, regardless of population.

After the 1950 census changed the representation of 16 states, there were several cries of political foul in the redistricting.

Some resounding ones came from Democrats in California, who watched a Republican-controlled legislature redraw the boundaries to provide districts for seven additional House members. Booming California stands to gain eight more members this time, and the Democrats now control the Legislature. If they still do next year, the possibilities are such that some starry-eyed Democrats are talking of picking up a dozen members, or even more.

Other big, two-party states which face almost certain redistricting include New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts, all of which stand to lose members. Illinois may be another.

A proposed law pending in the House Judiciary Committee is avowedly designed to promote fair and rational districting. The committee has been working on the problem off and on since 1951. But political realists in the House give the measure little or no chance of being enacted in time to affect the 1962 congressional elections, if ever.

"The one stark fact that emerges from a study of the history of congressional apportionment is its embroilment in politics, in the sense of party contests and party interests," Justice Felix Frankfurter wrote in a 1946 landmark U.S. Supreme Court case. The court decided a contested Illinois apportionment was not a proper subject for judicial review.

There are authorities who contend that, even so, a completely outrageous gerrymander might be successfully attacked in federal court under the general guarantees of the U.S. Constitution.

Moreover, some states have their own constitutional or legal provisions on districting which might open the state courts to complaints. In general, however, one legislature's gerrymanders have been charged only by a later legislature.

An Associated Press computation based on preliminary census returns indicates 15 states probably will lose one or more house seats and nine will gain, effective with the congressional elections of 1962.

Strictly speaking, the states which gain need not redistrict—they could let the extra members be elected at large. Most, however, probably will redraw the lines.

The states which lose members have no choice. Unless they can absorb the loss by dropping existing at-large membership, they must redistrict or have their whole delegation elected statewide, a prospect which would give the horrors to the established political organizations in most states.

Since 1929, redistricting after each census has been largely automatic, although Congress retains the power at any time to change the rules.

The president, on the convening of Congress in the year after a census, sends the national lawmakers a report, actually prepared according to a prescribed formula by the census experts, showing how many members each state will be entitled to in the next Congress. Unless the House takes some action, its clerk within 15 days notifies the governors of the states, and then the problem is theirs and the legislatures.

It was the 1929 automatic Apportionment Act which voided some theoretical antigerrmandering provisions by repealing earlier laws.

FCC Head Gives View On Speech

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chairman Frederick W. Ford of the Federal Communications Commission suggested Saturday that a speech by Sen. William Proxmire (D-Wis) was intended to influence the FCC in a TV license dispute.

Ford made the suggestion in a taped radio-TV interview (WTOP) here when asked about the speech Proxmire made on the Senate floor last Monday.

Proxmire, raising a cry of "political payola," said then the FCC is now giving an advantage in TV license contests to firms with Congress members among their stockholders. Friday he issued a statement saying a high FCC official, — whom he did not name — had since visited him and said this is the commission's policy.

The speech was based on a tentative FCC decision last month to grant a TV license in Albany, N.Y. to Capital Cities Broadcasting Corp., a firm numbering five house members among its stockholders.

Dog Tells Sad Story, Stranded

By PICK-WHISKEY
As told to
John O. B. Wallace

NEW YORK (AP) — You've heard the story about the man without a country, haven't you? Well, I'm a dog without a country—and it's a sad tale.

Some humans might think my life is a happy one—for a dog. Oh, sure, I've heard that old bone about living a dog's life.

You see, I've been back and forth across the Atlantic twice as a special passenger aboard the North German Lloyd luxury liner, the Berlin.

What's so bad about that?

They don't have trees and fire hydrants on ships. So I want to get off this boat.

I'm not complaining about Capt. Guenther Roessing. And the captain's daughter, Heidi, is a real doll. But she's 19—too old for me.

Besides, she's not my real girl, anyway.

My real girl is Valerie Adams. She's only 8, and she's in England.

And here I am aboard this ship in New York Harbor. Nobody will let me get off.

Valerie took me with her when she went home last month with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Adams. They're British subjects, and they adopted me while they were living in Connecticut.

I'm really nothing to brag about. I'm small, partly black and partly tan—and mostly beagle. Valerie named me Pick.

"Well, they like me enough to take me home with them. But the British wouldn't let me off the boat when we got to Southampton.

Valerie didn't have an "import license" for me, the British said.

So Capt. Roessing took me up to the bridge, and he's been taking care of me ever since except for this last trip west.

That's when I met Heidi. She's a real doll, like—excuse me, as—I said. But—just like Valerie—she got off the boat without me.

So here I am back again with Capt. Roessing. He calls me Whiskey. I can't understand why, though, because I never touch the stuff.

Anyway, the captain is still trying to get that import license from the British consulate here before we sail back to Southampton. We're due there July 6 this trip.

Meanwhile, I've got to stay aboard because the Americans won't let me off the boat either.

They say I've got to have my vaccination and good health certificates, and Capt. Roessing left them back in Southampton with the North German Lloyd's agents.

A sad tale? You're dog-gone right it is.

GALLION BACKS JOHNSON

Atty. General On Bandwagon

By DONALD F. MARTIN

MONTGOMERY (UPI) —Atty. Gen. MacDonald Gallion assumed the leadership of the Johnson-for-President bandwagon in Alabama Saturday.

"I am now persuaded," Gallion said after much study, "that the best interests of Alabama and the south lie in supporting Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas for nomination as President on the Democratic ticket. I shall, therefore, cast my vote for Johnson at the convention and I shall work in every way possible toward solidifying support behind him.

The attorney general, who collected more voters than any other candidate for state-at-large delegate to the Los Angeles convention, huddled with Johnson in Washington Thursday. It was expected the Texas senator would announce formally Gallion as his Alabama campaign manager the first of next week.

Gallion said:

"I have noted a majority of Alabama's delegation who have indicated preference state they will be with Johnson. I believe this represents the will of the majority of the citizens of this state.

"This week I conferred at length in Washington with Johnson and a great many southern senators and congressmen. Their support for Johnson is overwhelming. Among those urging my support of Johnson were Sens. Talmadge of Georgia, Stennis and Eastman of Mississippi, Byrd of Virginia, Thurmond of South Carolina, Holland and Smathers of Florida as well as the majority of Alabama's Washington delegation whom I was able to contact.

"Most persuasive to me however, was the avowed support for Johnson by Sen. Dick Russell of Georgia. This great champion of the South has made himself one of the most respected and revered figures in the South, as well as over the nation."

Gallion added he did not lose sight of the fact that Johnson, as Senate majority leader, participated in the passage of the 1960 Civil Rights Act. "I was impressed, however, with the setated opinion of those I contacted in Washington, that Johnson's handling of the bill prevented and forestalled a more vicious and punitive bill which surely would have passed.

"Of all the major candidates, Johnson has by far the best record favoring Alabama and the South. The Congressional Quarterly reveals his voting record shows he was with the southern position 8 per cent of the time while Sen. John Kennedy (D-Mass) was with the South only 13 per cent of the time.

"In the perilous times we need a strong, steady hand at the helm. The Democratic Party must provide that leadership and I believe Johnson more than any other man can insure a Democratic victory next November."

Gallion's announcement followed his successful leadership in launching a "Block - Kennedy" drive at a closed-door caucus in Montgomery Friday afternoon. Thirteen delegates, representing every section of the state, reported a delegate-by-delegate poll of the 56-member Alabama delegation showed an "overwhelming majority" opposed Alabama yielding to Massachusetts on the first roll call so that Kennedy could be nominated on the crucial ballot.

This Woman Gossiper Just 'Remembered'

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI)— A Milwaukee woman called police Friday and told them a friend had collapsed while they were having a telephone conversation. But when police arrived the friend was happily gossipping again.

She explained that in the middle of the first conversation she suddenly remembered her washing machine was going so she dropped the phone and ran to turn it off.

Governors Setting Up Camps

GLACIER NATIONAL PARK, Mont. (AP)—Rival squads of governors began setting up camps in the towering Rockies Saturday as bases for pushing the presidential hopes of Sens. John F. Kennedy (D-Mass) and Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Tex).

And Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York, who would accept a Republican presidential draft that may never blow his way slated a news conference for Sunday that may throw new light on the political scene.

The chief executives of the states trekked to the mountains for their 52nd annual conference. Here, at a remote spot in a national park, sideline huddles and decisions could develop in such a fashion as to clinch both presidential nominations in advance of next month's national conventions.

The conference opens Sunday, in a setting as scenic as the Swiss Alps it resembles—a rustic chalet on a shimmering mountain lake tucked at the feet of jagged peaks strewn with snow and glaciers.

The official sessions will dig into such problems as schools, roads and care of oldsters. But the unofficial business will be politics.

Governors are political powers. Many of them control their state delegations to the national conventions. Thirteen of them have moved on to the White House. A score of the 50 have been mentioned this time as vice-presidential possibilities.

And the pressure will be on to pry some governors away from their favorite-son standards or to swing some of those who still are hemming and hawing behind one candidate or another.

Gov. Michael V. DiSalle of Ohio perched on a log, toyed with an ax, and told reporters in effect that he had agreed to a Kennedy request to work here on "the doubtful states — I suppose any state where there has been no commitment."

That would mean such states as California, Illinois, Michigan, Kansas, Iowa, New Jersey.

Several Southern states—Florida, Louisiana, North Carolina, Alabama, Arkansas, South Carolina—also are largely or wholly unbound to anyone other than a favorite son or two. But Johnson has no real worries about their political affections.

Southern governors are slated to get together at a breakfast Sunday to nail down Dixie support for the Texan and work on strategy for lining up more backing for Johnson outside the South.

"I am now persuaded," Gallion said after much study, "that the best interests of Alabama and the south lie in supporting Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas for nomination as President on the Democratic ticket. I shall, therefore, cast my vote for Johnson at the convention and I shall work in every way possible toward solidifying support behind him.

The attorney general, who collected more voters than any other candidate for state-at-large delegate to the Los Angeles convention, huddled with Johnson in Washington Thursday. It was expected the Texas senator would announce formally Gallion as his Alabama campaign manager the first of next week.

Gallion said:

"I have noted a majority of Alabama's delegation who have indicated preference state they will be with Johnson. I believe this represents the will of the majority of the citizens of this state.

"This week I conferred at length in Washington with Johnson and a great many southern senators and congressmen. Their support for Johnson is overwhelming. Among those urging my support of Johnson were Sens. Talmadge of Georgia, Stennis and Eastman of Mississippi, Byrd of Virginia, Thurmond of South Carolina, Holland and Smathers of Florida as well as the majority of Alabama's Washington delegation whom I was able to contact.

"Most persuasive to me however, was the avowed support for Johnson by Sen. Dick Russell of Georgia. This great champion of the South has made himself one of the most respected and revered figures in the South, as well as over the nation."

Gallion added he did not lose sight of the fact that Johnson, as Senate majority leader, participated in the passage of the 1960 Civil Rights Act. "I was impressed, however, with the setated opinion of those I contacted in Washington, that Johnson's handling of the bill prevented and forestalled a more vicious and punitive bill which surely would have passed.

"Of all the major candidates, Johnson has by far the best record favoring Alabama and the South. The Congressional Quarterly reveals his voting record shows he was with the southern position 8 per cent of the time while Sen. John Kennedy (D-Mass) was with the South only 13 per cent of the time.

"In the perilous times we need a strong, steady hand at the helm. The Democratic Party must provide that leadership and I believe Johnson more than any other man can insure a Democratic victory next November."

Gallion's announcement followed his successful leadership in launching a "Block - Kennedy" drive at a closed-door caucus in Montgomery Friday afternoon. Thirteen delegates, representing every section of the state, reported a delegate-by-delegate poll of the 56-member Alabama delegation showed an "overwhelming majority" opposed Alabama yielding to Massachusetts on the first roll call so that Kennedy could be nominated on the crucial ballot.

This Woman Gossiper Just 'Remembered'

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI)—A Milwaukee woman called police Friday and told them a friend had collapsed while they were having a telephone conversation. But when police arrived the friend was happily gossipping again.

She explained that in the middle of the first conversation she suddenly remembered her washing machine was going so she dropped the phone and ran to turn it off.

Governors Setting Up Camps

GLACIER NATIONAL PARK, Mont. (AP)—Rival squads of governors began setting up camps in the towering Rockies Saturday as bases for pushing the presidential hopes of Sens. John F. Kennedy (D-Mass) and Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Tex).

And Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York, who would accept a Republican presidential draft that may never blow his way slated a news conference for Sunday that may throw new light on the political scene.

The chief executives of the states trekked to the mountains for their 52nd annual conference. Here, at a remote spot in a national park, sideline huddles and decisions could develop in such a fashion as to clinch both presidential nominations in advance of next month's national conventions.

The conference opens Sunday, in a setting as scenic as the Swiss Alps it resembles—a rustic chalet on a shimmering mountain lake tucked at the feet of jagged peaks strewn with snow and glaciers.

The official sessions will dig into such problems as schools, roads and care of oldsters. But the unofficial business will be politics.

Governors are political powers. Many of them control their state delegations to the national conventions. Thirteen of them have moved on to the White House. A score of the 50 have been mentioned this time as vice-presidential possibilities.

And the pressure will be on to pry some governors away from their favorite-son standards or to swing some of those who still are hemming and hawing behind one candidate or another.

Gov. Michael V. DiSalle of Ohio perched on a log, toyed with an ax, and told reporters in effect that he had agreed to a Kennedy request to work here on "the doubtful states — I suppose any state where there has been no commitment."

That would mean such states as California, Illinois, Michigan, Kansas, Iowa, New Jersey.

Several Southern states—Florida, Louisiana, North Carolina, Alabama, Arkansas, South Carolina—also are largely or wholly unbound to anyone other than a favorite son or two. But Johnson has no real worries about their political affections.

Southern governors are slated to get together at a breakfast Sunday to nail down Dixie support for the Texan and work on strategy for lining up more backing for Johnson outside the South.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH JAPAN

Writer Gives His Views About 'Hate U.S.' Campaign

Editor's note: John Randolph, AP chief of bureau in Tokyo, has been a resident of Japan for nearly 10 years, lives in a Japanese house, and has a Japanese wife. He has witnessed the events that led to Japan's startling anti-American riots. Now visiting New York, Randolph gives this explanation of the forces at work on the Japanese mind and the pressures that lead to bloody violence.

By JOHN RANDOLPH
The Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — What's wrong with Japan?

Why do mobs of young people, who owe much of their advance in life to American-made opportunities, run down the street screaming "Hate America!"

Why does Japan's government, freely elected with a stunning majority, shrink from suppressing this revolutionary violence?

Why do Japan's Socialists—self-labeled men of peace—not only lead and cheer the rioters, but stage their own fist-swinging brawls in Parliament?

Why are Japan's giant newspapers so bitterly anti-government that they attack as "criminal" its few feeble efforts to protect itself from a howling mob?

What is wrong with Japan? Where is Japan going? What will be the end?

For years these questions and others like them have puzzled and disturbed the many foreigners who now live in that remarkable island country.

Today, now that the biggest anti-American riots of all have scrapped President Eisenhower's visit to Tokyo, they puzzle and disturb the entire Western world.

Even the Communists, gratified as they are, must be a bit surprised.

The answers are all there if you are willing to do a little digging, for Japan is not the simplest country in the world to understand.

When the Western world finally cracked Japan's shell a century ago, Japan's ruling Samurai class was still all-powerful. After a few quick changes at the top, Japan was plunged into the modern world with an energy that saved it from colonization and led it to empire. But the cost was terrible.

For 50 years—1895-1945—Japan built a great empire. For 13 years—1932-45—it was almost continually at war. The government assured the Japanese people that all this was necessary, glorious, and even divine. The people responded with a super-human loyalty as magnificent as it was misconceived.

The crash was terrible. The blow to the Japanese mind was far greater than the physical disasters, horrible as they were.

Within a few years, good luck and intense hard work restored the physical situation. A few years more brought some real prosperity—although even today the great mass of Japanese live in clean, decent, austere poverty, and the wealthy rarely show their wealth.

Under these new conditions, the only Japanese who blossomed were the young women. Freed from the worst chains of inferiority, they have come into their own in an age that repudiates the warlike, masculine virtues.

But not the pale, hard-working young men. They are still trapped in the grim economic race and by Japan's grinding social system. As breadwinners and future heads of families they cannot share their sisters' new freedom. They do not even have the self-respect of being their own country's defenders. That troublesome but honorable job is done by the tall foreign soldiers they see on the streets—often arm-in-arm with their liberated womenfolk.

If they were not bright boys, their childhood was only an apprenticeship for a life of narrow toil. If they had brains, the pressures were more subtle and more cruel. Their boyhood was a frantic struggle to pass a series of tough school examinations. A low mark at any point was the signal to get off the elevator and spend a lifetime of frustration at the social and economic level.

The culminating exam—for those who get that far—is for college entrance. Success or failure is for life. Once in, there follows three years of great personal studies, warm friendships with fellow students and professors, and at the end a virtual certainty of being snapped up by government service or big business.

Beyond that lies 40 more years of low pay, hard work, a Shinto marriage, children, heavy responsibility, early retirement on a pittance, death, a Buddhist funeral, cremation, and a small stone where the grandchildren will come on holidays to bow their heads, sprinkle fresh water, and leave bright flowers.

Into this drab and despairing vacuum came two alien influences in the postwar years.

One was the Western spirit of individual freedom, represented by the American occupation reforms, the shiny new parliamentary system on the British model, and the rise of the mildly liberal Conservative party.

The other was Marxism in all its forms from mild socialism to super - revolutionary communism.

There is no doubt—for they vote for it again and again in national elections—the Japanese people on the whole prefer the former, and are grateful for the calm, middle-of-the-road government that troubles them as little as possible.

But Western freedom in Japan suffers from a terrible and possibly even a fatal flaw.

It was an unearned gift that was never fought for, and never having fought and died for their freedom, the Japanese hardly know how to value it, to use it, or defend it.

This tepid show of democracy offers precious little to stir the blood of a 20-year-old student who sees all too clearly the strain and poverty around him. Nor has this calm and unexciting government anything to call out the loyalty that grew and died on Iwo Jima and among the tragic Kamikaze.

But Marxism offers a fighting creed and highly important in Japan today, it is still possible to be a Communist and be respectable.

Thus Marxism attracts and captures a large and important share of Japan's educated and skilled elite—students, teachers, scientists, writers, artists, newspapermen, editors, organizers and politicians.

In addition to the standard appeals of militant socialism and communism, excitement and violence are especially intoxicating in Japan. This is because the social system is so rigid that decent people can "let themselves go" only in drunkenness or in mass hysteria. For if Japanese social repression has created a delicate world of courtesy, politeness and the tea ceremony, it has compensated for these with the rape of Nanking, the torture of helpless prisoners, and other horrors.

But above all, giving Marxism an almost holy sanctity in Japan is its propaganda of neutralism in the holeland of Hiroshima, where the universal fear of a new war is stronger than anywhere else on earth.

With this kind of neutralism comes a virulent anti-Americanism that Japan's Socialist party has put ahead of social justice as the main plank of its platform.

In this, it is probable that the Socialists were blinded by their passions and have doomed themselves to continuing defeats in national elections. For the Japanese people, especially the countryfolk, if not excited by democracy, still appreciate America's generosity, fear Russia and know all too well that America remains the only real friend Japan has in the world.

Thus many Socialists, increasingly frustrated, turn increasingly to violence to obtain what they cannot obtain at the polls.

But why can't the government use its unquestionably loyal police force and its army to sweep away the rioters?

The answer is that there is a genuine fear that any such strong methods would recall the hated militaristic days of the Tojo period and cost the government its only real asset, the good will of the much-persecuted common people.

Thus the government backs away, hoping that the violence of the rioters will turn the people against the rioters and give the government a stronger mandate.

It is a dangerous game and the risks are only too clear.

Either the government has got to pull itself together at some ooint and assert its authority in a way that will command the respect and approval of its majority supporters, or—

Through failure of leadership and lack of moral courage, it will continue to back away until it breaks into a run and collapses in spiritual bankruptcy.

If that happens, Japan will either stumble into the arms of the Communists, or else there will be a bloody repression by the remaining forces of order that will poison Japan's history for decades to come.

Either way, this is freedom's first real test in Japan.

With this kind of neutralism comes a virulent anti-Americanism that Japan's Socialist party has put ahead of social justice as the main plank of its platform.

In this, it is probable that the Socialists were blinded by their passions and have doomed themselves to continuing defeats in national elections. For the Japanese people, especially the countryfolk, if not excited by democracy, still appreciate America's generosity, fear Russia and know all too well that America remains the only real friend Japan has in the world.

Thus many Socialists, increasingly frustrated, turn increasingly to violence to obtain what they cannot obtain at the polls.

But why can't the government use its unquestionably loyal police force and its army to sweep away the rioters?

The answer is that there is a genuine fear that any such strong methods would recall the hated militaristic days of the Tojo period and cost the government its only real asset, the good will of the much-persecuted common people.

Thus the government backs away, hoping that the violence of the rioters will turn the people against the rioters and give the government a stronger mandate.

It is a dangerous game and the risks are only too clear.

Either the government has got to pull itself together at some point and assert its authority in a way that will command the respect and approval of its majority supporters, or—

Through failure of leadership and lack of moral courage, it will continue to back away until it breaks into a run and collapses in spiritual bankruptcy.

If that happens, Japan will either stumble into the arms of the Communists, or else there will be a bloody repression by the remaining forces of order that will poison Japan's history for decades to come.

Either way, this is freedom's first real test in Japan.

THE STORY OF THE WEEK

Personal Diplomacy Ends In Search For World Peace

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Eisenhower this week abandoned use of "personal diplomacy" in his search for world peace.

He also will make no more goodwill trips abroad during his remaining months in office.

This was made crystal-clear by Secretary of State Christian A. Herter in the wake of violent Communist-led anti-American riots which forced cancellation of the President's visit to Tokyo.

Herter was questioned by Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (Texas) and other members of a Senate subcommittee. They wanted to know how badly American prestige had been damaged by the Tokyo debacle which came a month after the Paris summit blow up and Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's unprecedented attempt to debase Eisenhower in the eyes of the world.

Herter insisted that despite the diplomatic disasters, "basic conditions of the world situation have not so far been greatly changed."

But he also admitted the Eisenhower era of personal diplomacy had failed in vital areas. He said that henceforth the emphasis will be on "traditional channels and procedures of international contact."

What this means for the man-in-the-street is that Eisenhower will now insist that there be careful preparation at the diplomatic level, plus advance guarantees of good results, before he projects himself into a potentially explosive picture.

Herter conceded under critical questioning from Johnson that the State Department had misgauged the force behind the Communist-led mobs in Tokyo.

Johnson commented acidly that "not only our judgment was bad but our information was bad." He also reminded Herter that influential Senators had advised against the trip when the demonstrations first cropped up.

The secretary said the recommendations were considered and rejected.

When Johnson demanded to know who made the incorrect evaluation, Herter said that "from all the information we received, it was a collective judgment" but "you can pin it on me if you like."

Herter maintained that despite the Tokyo setback, "the damage to our prestige in the Far East has been definitely overdrawn" although "there was no question that withdrawal of the invitation was a very unfortunate development."

The President's personal diplomacy has triumphed in some areas, notably in Western Europe and South America and more recently in the Philippines, South Korea and Formosa. But this admittedly has been offset to an uncertain degree by the summit disaster, Khrushchev and Japan.

Herter offered to go into more detail behind closed doors. But he said:

"As President Eisenhower has made clear, we must continue to do all we can to increase communication between ourselves and the Soviet Union, and to resolve outstanding issues. For this purpose it appears that increased emphasis should be placed upon traditional channels . . . rather than on more informal methods."

Bridge

HONG KONG (AP) — A road and rail bridge across the Pearl River near Canton has been completed by Red China six months behind schedule. Hong Kong newspapers reported the half-mile span is still not open to traffic because of servicing work. The original Peping Radio announcement had said the bridge would be open at the end of 1959 and would utilize new caisson techniques developed by Soviet and Red Chinese engineers.

State Wins In Mississippi Attack Case

GREENVILLE, Miss. (AP) — The state won its case Saturday against three Washington County teenagers accused of raping a 19-year-old Mathiston girl while she was visiting her sister in Greenville.

The jury found the trio guilty, but were unable to agree on the sentence. Under state law, an automatic life sentence results when the jury cannot decide punishment for rape.

The three convicted were Robert Earl Blade, 19; Billy Huggins, 18, and O'Neal Luke, 18.

Defense Attorneys E. B. Taylor and Joe Biggers said they would file a motion for a new trial.

The defense maintained the girl submitted willingly and then took money.

Circuit Judge Arthur Clark cleared the courtroom when the trial started because of the girl's unwillingness to testify before a crowd. He did not allow any spectators or newsmen to witness the trial.

According to a courtroom source, the defendants showed little concern about court proceedings and sat chewing gum throughout the trial. All three testified.

Streamlined GOP Meeting Planned

By EVERETT IRWIN
United Press International

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Republican National Convention — opening July 25 — will be geared to the theme "100 Years of Progress" in this city where Abraham Lincoln was nominated for the presidency 100 years ago.

It will be the 14th time the Republican Party has held its national gathering in Chicago, beginning with the wigwam convention in 1856 in which "The Great Emancipator" first gained national political stature.

The Republicans will spend "between $500,000 and $600,000" on an efficiently streamlined nominating session designed to transact business with dispatch and hold the attention of the millions of voters watching it on thir TV sets.

Despite recent statements and political maneuvers by Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York, most of the nation's political observers still see the selection of Vice President Richard M. Nixon to carry the GOP presidential standard as a virtual certainty.

Considerable agitation at the convention itself for a draft nomination of Rockefeller would appear to offer the only possibility of any old - fashioned political fireworks.

But convention planners are ready with "canned" whoopee—stunts, parades, rallies and demonstrations, mostly by the younger Republicans — to provide suitable atmosphere and color if no balloting contest developes.

The convention will be held in the International Amphitheater, the stockyard - area where both parties held their 1952 conclaves, and where the Democrats gathered four years ago when the GOP met in San Francisco.

Convention headquarters will be at the Conrad Hilton Hotel, the world's largest, on Michigan Ave.

Jaren L. Jones, vice chairman of the arrangements committee and Republican national committeeman from Utah, said only one daytime business session is planned. It will be opening day.

All other sessions, he said, will take place in the evening and night hours when the nation's television audiences are at their largest.

It also is planned to use giant-screen, closed - circuit television in the convention hall itself, according to Mrs. Webster Todd, chairman of the program planning subcommittee and Republican national committeewoman from New Jersery.

Republican National Chairman Thruston B. Morton, with Jones, Mrs. Todd and others of the 50-member arrangements committee, have been working more than a year in putting the nominating session together.

The full committee will have held at least four meetings prior to convention kick - off day, and the executive committee at least six. The full convention staff, an estimated 200 persons, will occupy the entire eighth floor at convention headquarters.

Much of the convention's detail work and general housekeeping have failed on Thomas G. Judd, executive secretary of the arrangements committee, and Robert L. Pierce, chairman of the housing subcommittee.

"Chicago is the ideal convention city," said Judd. "Although Mayor (Richard J.) Daley is a Democrat, his office is co - operating 100 per cent to make a successful convention."

A Chicago Citizens Committee, headed by Fred G. Gurley, retired board chairman of the Santa Fe Railroad, is charged with raising $400,000 towards defraying convention costs.

The remainder of the convention tab, which may "run to $600,000" will be picked up by the national party organization, reported Judd.

Convention planners have been able to play Santa Claus with hotel room allocations to the 50 state delegations and their retinues but turn Scrooge at mere mention of arena seats for the presidential nominating sessions.

Arranging housing for the 20,000-plus persons expected is "running smoother than silk" in this city of big hotels. The Chicago Convention Bureau alone handed the housing subcommittee a pool of 14,480 hotel and motel rooms.

But space at the International Amphitheater?

"We don't have a ticket left," said Judd, "and nobody got as many seats as he needed."

At San Francisco's spacious Cow Palace in 1956 the Republicans had some 17,000 seats to allocate. The year, at the arena, they will have bue 12,000.

The 1,331 delegates and 1,331 alternate delegates, plus their accompanying spouses, will occupy some 4,000 seats. Newspaper, wire service, radio, television and magazine correspondents will account for another 2,000.

"There go half of our seats right there," Judd said.

In addition, the arrangements committee has set aside about 400 seats for members of the executive branch of the U. S. government.

"We're very happy we have this problem," Judd added. "We didn't have it when we met here in 1952."

Tickets also have been given to Republican National Committee members, convention officers, state Republican committees, the Republican finance committee, Chicago Citizens Committee, special party organizations, labor and farm organizations, former officers of the GOP convention committee and senators, representatives and governors.

With these allotments made, only 2,800 tickets were available to state party officials for distribution to the public.

Judd offered two "consolation possibilities" to party faithfuls unable to come by one of the prized ducats.

The Young Republicans, which will operate a "TV lounge" in an adjoining hall, will have 100 tickets to be rotated among persons who desire to sit in on convention happenings for brief periods of time.

The Young Republicans also will have a limited supply of "hunting licenses." With a "hunting license," a person may enter the arena, slip into an empty seat and occupy it until its owner reappears to claim it.

All members of each of the state delegations have been assigned to the same individual hotel. All delegations but two will be housed in the immediate Loop area. The exceptions are the New York aggregation, which will occupy the Sheraton Towers, and the California group, which is scheduled for the Drake.

The sixth floor and half of the seventh of the Sheraton Blackston is reserved for Nixon and his organization. A suite has been set aside, just in case, for Rockefeller at the Hilton. The fifth floor of the Blackstone, with its luxurious Presidential Suite, is being held for President Eisenhower.

The International Amphitheater on Chicago's South Side is being transformed by workmen to house the sessions.

In the huge, sprawling arena where bluebloods of the livestock world parade during the International Livestock Exposition every November, workmen are erecting TV and radio studios and building the speakers' platform on which the nation's attention will be focused.

The Amphitheater, offered free to the Republicans by the Union Stock Yard and Transit Co., boasts:

— So much overall space that the delegates, reporters and their equipment and all the other myriad elements that make up a national nominating convention will occupy only half its 585,000 square feet.

— Two rooftop heliports that will be used by helicopters to shuttle film from the convention sssions to the city's airports.

— An air conditioning plant which changes the air in the Amphitheater 72 times daily and provides cooling equivalent to 2 million pounds of ice daily.

— Parking space for 4,650 automobiles.

Space actually is at a premium only in the Amphitheater's main arena which seats 12,000. Vast, two - story wings will provide ample room for the thousands of non - delegates who will work at the convention.

The nation's press, with its multitude of teletypes and maze of communications lines, will occupy the first floor of the south wing. The first floor north wing will house the telephone center, caucus rooms, dressing rooms for entertainers and headquarters for police guards and ushers.

Upstairs north will quarter the television studios and control rooms. Upstairs south will hold a TV lounge.

Andy Frain Crowd Engineers will have 172 gatemen and ushers on hand to guide ticket - holders and keep gate - crashers out.

The Amphitheater management has retained concession rights and will be responsible for keeping the convention - goers from getting hungry.

"Republicans don't eat as much as Democrats," said Robert Foss, supervisor of concessions.

Even so, Foss said he'll order 40,000 hot dogs, 1,200 pounds of ha.n, 1,000 pounds of cheese for concession stands and 20 tons of steaks, chops and roasts for the Stockyard Inn next door.

To quench Republican throats he'll have 45,000 bottles of soft drinks, 20,000 cups of coffee and 2,500 cartons of milk.

George Murphy of Desilu Productions promises top - flight convention entertainment.

But the convention will be no Hollywood extravaganza. The delegates will be there for serious business.

U.S. Rapped By Mikoyan

OSLO, Norway (AP)—Anastas I. Mikoyan lashed out anew Saturday at the United States, prompting annoyed reproaches from his Norwegian hosts.

The visiting Soviet first deputy premier used as his platforms a dinner in his honor, a garden party at the Soviet Embassy and a Soviet industrial exhibition he came here to open.

At the exhibition, he gave a long account of Soviet economic advancement and then said Washington "has made itself look ridiculous before the whole world and received what it deserved."

This remark followed the standard Soviet accusation that the United States wrecked the Paris summit meeting and "elevated espionage to the status of state policy."

"To deceive peoples thirsting for peace," Mikoyan continued, "vicious circles in the United states have started spreading rumors that the Soviet Union is not interested in a summit meeting any more and has dropped its policy of peaceful coexistence altogether. This is obviously untrue propaganda."

GOT A PHONE BOOTH

What An Unusual Dad's Day Gift!

By SARAH LITTLE
Staff Writer

And how many fathers do you know who got a telephone booth for a Father's Day present — in their den, ready for service?

Well, that's exactly what Jack Smith, 2019 Valencia St., got for his Father's Day gift, with the brain work of Harry Addison behind it.

Sitting in the den of the Smith home is an aqua and white telephone booth, with a strange series of events leading to its installation.

Smith, president of a local realty firm and father of three children, was having trouble hearing reports from his salesmen at home. And who wouldn't — with two boys and a girl, aged seven, three and two, besides a wife and a maid, to make noise.

COULDN'T HEAR

It seems that Addison, a salesman for Smith, called about a month ago to talk to Smith about some business. After trying unsuccessfully to hear what Addison had to say, Smith was heard muttering — "One day I'm going to get me a telephone booth of my own!"

This was the beginning of a long chain of happenings, eventually leading to the surprise Father's Day gift, all of which Addison dreamed up and engineered with the help of fellow employees and friends.

With only a month before Father's Day, Addision began his search for the telephone booth that was eventually to wind up in the Smith den. He called a friend, Clark Williams, who has a telephone exchange in Oak Ridge, to see if Williams had an extra phone booth handy.

Addison said that even though Williams didn't have one himself, he helped locate one in Plain Dealing. So Addison, along with a fellow employee, Welzie Garrett, went to fetch the empty booth.

Addison said he and Garrett left Monroe in a Buick automobile with the intention of getting a rental trailer to bring the coffin-like booth back in. To their dismay, they found out that Plain Dealing had no trailer rental places, and that they would have to bring the phone booth back part of the way in the trunk of the car.

So, with more of the booth sticking out of the car than was in the trunk, they began their drive back. Addision said that people lined the streets of the towns, apparently thinking that they were lugging a coffin around the country.

Upon reaching Monroe with the phone booth, Addison took it to a sign painter, Harry Graham. Graham, along with O. D. Westbrook, renovated the phone booth to fit into the Smith furnishings.

"AIN'T LIVED"

The outside received a coating of aqua paint, and the inside a coating of bone white. Graham's only remark concerning the painting of the booth was—"If you ain't never sprayed inside a telephone booth with the doors closed, you ain't lived!"

Addison added that Graham looked like a June Santa Claus.

After the painting was done, Addison began adding the little extra's "for the man who has everything, including ulcers."

The first thing built was a snack bar. Smith, who is on a diet of grits, milk, crackers and cocoa (according to Addison) for ulcers, was amply taken care of in this area.

The snack bar contained packages of instant cocoa, crackers, milk and a "Grit" newspaper (with the notation — "Heres a Grit you can fully digest"), a cup to hold the cocoa, and an electric outlet with three plugs for warming the cocoa, and grits. A place for "ulcer" pills was also provided.

To take care of all other little extra's, one plug was provided for Smith's electric shaver, a mirror for shaving, a roll of toilet tissue and a baby blue baby pottie (with instructions, "for emergency use only, during long distance phone calls"), a pad and pencil for taking messages, a place for "sofe driks", a crying towel, a coat rack, a measuring stick (thrown in "for good measure"), a "wet" hemp rope (for beating the office force with), and a sign (ironically an advertising sign).

The beige telephone is wired and the electric light works in the booth. Here, Smith could make his home (for days if necessary) in complete peace and quiet from all the noise.

The wiring of the telephone presented a quixotic statement, overheard from a good friend and neighbor, Ruddy Cannon, from the lips of the serviceman who did the job. Cannon, who had just recently moved into a new home not far from Smith, had requested wiring of his home by the phone company.

The serviceman, who appeared several hours late to wire the Cannon home, had this excuse to offer.

"Sorry I'm late! I have been installing a telephone in a telephone booth in some nut's den!" with the expression on his face of — if you can imagine that!

INTRIGUE

The actual installing of the booth in the Smith den was done the Saturday before Father's Day, at great expense to Smith's wife, Alice.

Mrs. Smith planned a picnic up the river for her husband and family, in order to get Smith out of the house. The only stipulation was that she have him back by 2 p.m., a request made by Addison.

Shortly after arrival on the beach, Mrs. Smith began to find numerous reasons for going back home, only to meet the stubborn obstinancy of her husband. Having tried all other tricks to no avail, Mrs. Smith became violently ill.

Upon arrival at home, Smith was confronted with his entire office force in his den, and a sheet - enshrouded apparition bearing the note —

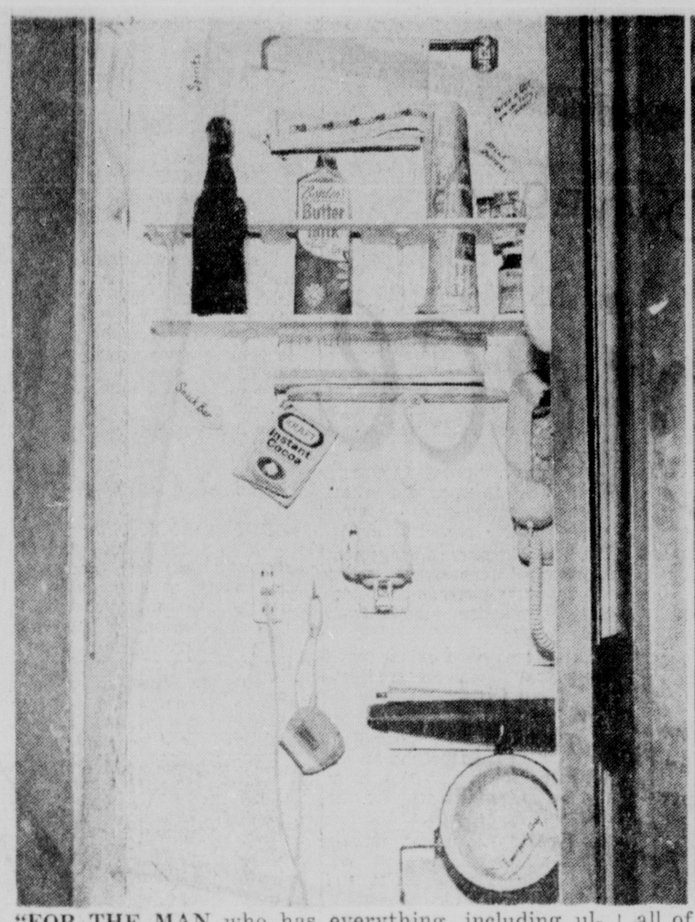

"Happy Father's Day, Dad! This should solve all your problems!"

Only the ringing of the phone inside the booth, caused Smith to unveil the strange gift.

His climactic words were — "That's the darndest thing I've ever seen!"

And we'll have to agree with Smith. In fact, the whole town is buzzing about the man with the phone booth in his den.

Says Smith — "I plan to make that a permanent fixture."

"FOR THE MAN who has everything, including ulcers," was the notation attached to the telephone booth which was a surprise Father's Day gift to a local young realtor, Jack Smith, from his office force and friends. Mrs. Smith demonstrates that the beige telephone actually works, and Smith can now handle all of his business calls in peace and quiet. Capture Pair Of Escapees From Prison

Two escapees from Angola State Penitentiary were arrested around 1 p.m. yesterday by the Ouachita Parish Sheriff's Department, according to Frank Kirby, Chief Criminal Deputy Sheriff.

The two escapees were Bobby Joe Ross, 24, and Kenner Edward Jones, 21. Ross was serving a five year term for burglary in Monroe. He had served approximately 28 months of the five-year sentence.

Jones was serving a 13-year sentence for auto theft and burglary in Baton Rouge. He said that he had been in since 1955.

The two, who escaped from the penitentiary Monday, June 20, were picked up by deputies in the 3100 block of Dick Taylor Street, and taken to the parish jail, where they were held until Baton Rouge deputies could take them back to Baton Rouge.

They are wanted in Baton Rouge for burglary and auto theft, crimes they are suspected of committing since their escape from prison Monday.

Kirby said they were arrested in a 1956 Oldsmobile Holiday coupe, which was reportedly stolen from Joneses' Used Car Lot in Baton Rouge Friday morning at 3.

Deputies said that the men offered no resistance, and were clad in new looking civilian clothes, which they believed to have been taken in the burglary in Baton Rouge. Kirby said that they had about 100 nickels in their pockets.

When asked why they had come to Monroe, Ross, who is originally from Monroe, said that he has a sister living somewhere no Dick Taylor Street, and that they were looking for her.

Kirby said that Ross and Jones will be tried in Baton Rouge for the theft and burglary committed in their brief period of freedom.

GOT A PHONE BOOTH

What An Unusual Dad's Day Gift!

By SARAH LITTLE
Staff Writer

And how many fathers do you know who got a telephone booth for a Father's Day present — in their den, ready for service?

Well, that's exactly what Jack Smith, 2019 Valencia St., got for his Father's Day gift, with the brain work of Harry Addison behind it.

Sitting in the den of the Smith home is an aqua and white telephone booth, with a strange series of events leading to its installation.

Smith, president of a local realty firm and father of three children, was having trouble hearing reports from his salesmen at home. And who wouldn't — with two boys and a girl, aged seven, three and two, besides a wife and a maid, to make noise.

COULDN'T HEAR

It seems that Addison, a salesman for Smith, called about a month ago to talk to Smith about some business. After trying unsuccessfully to hear what Addison had to say, Smith was heard muttering — "One day I'm going to get me a telephone booth of my own!"

This was the beginning of a long chain of happenings, eventually leading to the surprise Father's Day gift, all of which Addison dreamed up and engineered with the help of fellow employees and friends.

With only a month before Father's Day, Addision began his search for the telephone booth that was eventually to wind up in the Smith den. He called a friend, Clark Williams, who has a telephone exchange in Oak Ridge, to see if Williams had an extra phone booth handy.

Addison said that even though Williams didn't have one himself, he helped locate one in Plain Dealing. So Addison, along with a fellow employee, Welzie Garrett, went to fetch the empty booth.

Addison said he and Garrett left Monroe in a Buick automobile with the intention of getting a rental trailer to bring the coffin-like booth back in. To their dismay, they found out that Plain Dealing had no trailer rental places, and that they would have to bring the phone booth back part of the way in the trunk of the car.

So, with more of the booth sticking out of the car than was in the trunk, they began their drive back. Addision said that people lined the streets of the towns, apparently thinking that they were lugging a coffin around the country.

Upon reaching Monroe with the phone booth, Addison took it to a sign painter, Harry Graham. Graham, along with O. D. Westbrook, renovated the phone booth to fit into the Smith furnishings.

"AIN'T LIVED"

The outside received a coating of aqua paint, and the inside a coating of bone white. Graham's only remark concerning the painting of the booth was—"If you ain't never sprayed inside a telephone booth with the doors closed, you ain't lived!"

Addison added that Graham looked like a June Santa Claus.

The beige telephone is wired and the electric light works in the booth. Here, Smith could make his home (for days if necessary) in complete peace and quiet from all the noise.

The wiring of the telephone presented a quixotic statement, overheard from a good friend and neighbor, Ruddy Cannon, from the lips of the serviceman who did the job. Cannon, who had just recently moved into a new home not far from Smith, had requested wiring of his home by the phone company.

Mrs. Inez Faust Displays Two Of Her Oil Paintings.
(Photos By Ezra Adams)

FOR AREA TEACHER

Creative Art Easy

She paints in all media — ink, pastels and oils. She can paint a scene, a portrait. Murals come easy — "The balancing is easy."

WITH EASE

By EZRA ADAMS

Talent, that's what it is.

That's what Mrs. Herbert (Inez) Faust of Holly Ridge has.

Housewife, school teacher, music teacher, but most of all she is an artist. And she teaches that, too.

life, she says.

Mrs. Faust tried her hand in a contest about 10 years ago — a national contest, with one picture in each of two categories. And she placed within the top three in each category. "Haven't taken the time again," she says.

A busy woman, Mrs. Faust teaches music at home and Rayville and Delhi schools, art at Delhi and home. She's been painting over 30 years.

In music, she teaches piano and accordion; in art, she teaches it in all media, but prefers new students not to paint in oils until they have acquired a certain amount of skill.

Classes are regular and private, for children and adults.

IDEA

"Just give me an idea for a picture," she says, "and I'll give you a picture you can be proud of." In other words, she paints on order from you.

Prices for her art vary with the size, detail and amount of work generally called for. She was asked:

"Mrs. Faust, a picture of a person, or say a dog, from which the subject looks at you no matter from what angle you approach it — how does an artist accomplish this?"

"It's a matter of knowing the aesthetic center. Simple," she says.

Murals she paints on the rough side of masonite board, which she says is almost as good as canvas. Several of her murals hang in churches and schools of the area.

Mrs. Faust lives three miles north of Holly Ridge.

FRANK LLOYD WRIGHT

His Ideas Live On

By RELMAN MORIN

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — In the drafting room, two architects develop blueprints for a church, working from a design drawn by a departed hand.

The telephone rings in the front office. "Long distance from Honolulu." There is a long conversation about the plans for an exotic hotel on the Kona coast of Hawaii.

This is Taliesin West in Arizona.

ONE OF SITES

It is one of the two sites of the school of architecture founded 27 years ago by the late Frank Lloyd Wright, dean of American architects. The other, Taliesin East, is in Wisconsin.

Frank Lloyd Wright died April 9, 1959.

Today, just over a year later, his many-sided organization is operating exactly as though he were still alive and guiding it.

Plans for a civic center, churches, homes, many other buildings that were on the drawing boards when Wright died have largely been completed. New orders come in a steady flow. Wright's principal lieutenants, who now head his organization, execute them. From all over the world, candidates apply to study in his school — some of them already graduates of architectural schools.

In a word, Wright lives on today through the force and originality of his ideas, and the determination of a small group of people to continue his work.

AT CENTER

At the center of this group is his widow, Serbian-born Olgivanna Lloyd Wright. She is the moving spirit.

"We have not been standing still," she says. "Frank could not endure inactivity. We have plans —so many plans. And we have made changes."

Even the architect's own room at Taliesin has been slightly changed.

"Frank believed in eternal change," she says, "in the constant development of higher and more beautiful forms from the existing forms."

So while the organic design of Taliesin remains unchanged, some of its features have been improved.

Wright considered this site almost a camp. He used native stone from the nearby McDowell Mountains, wood, and even canvas in some of the buildings. Today, steel beams are replacing the wood, and glass is being fitted into open window spaces — all toward the end of making his desert camp a permanent complex of structures.

SCREENS

His widow now screens, and accepts or rejects, the men and women who apply to enroll in the school.

It is limited to about 60. The quota is filled today, and although Wright is not present to instruct the students, applications still pile up. The present class includes two students from India, two from South America, a Swiss, an Egyptian and a Chinese.

Every Sunday morning, Wright would talk to the whole group in the beautiful little theater that huddles against a hillside.

To the newest arrivals he would say: "We don't have a curriculum. We have only an ideal based upon thought.

"And being around here in these hills, you are free as I think no scholastic institution in the world is as yet free. You are free to fail. You are free to succeed. You are free to be what you are and that is what I want you all to be."

Some of the students are graduate architects. They came to Wright to study his principles of architecture—what he called "organic design."

He believed that a building should blend into its surroundings so that the structure and the landscape would complement each other, parts of the same whole. For example, he used desert stone and desert colors in Taliesin West. (Taliesin is Indian for "shining brow.")

The pattern as a whole seems so much a part of the mountains and desert that, at a relatively short distance, it all but disappears into the surrounding terrain.

Other students have had no training whatever. Many start from scratch, learning the A-B-C of architecture.

Some are married and have their families with them. Some live in tents in preference to the apartments. They do all the cooking and serving in the refectory. They have an orchestra and a dance group. They design and paint the sets, and make their own costumes, for their theatrical presentations.

"Mr. Wright believed that, in addition to being architects, they should be acquainted with all phases of the operation of the school," says Wesley Peters, vice president of the organization.

Peters, 48, was with Wright for 28 years. He is a native of Terre Haute, Ind., and a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Two other directors of the organization, Eugene Masselink and John Howe, joined Wright 27 years ago. Another, Allan L. Davison, graduate of Cornell University, has been with the school since 1938.

PROJECTS

Among the various projects on the drawing boards now are a hotel for Hawaii, a plan to build a resort city on Ellis Island, the former federal immigration reception center, and numerous churches.

Mrs. Wright recalls the inception of the idea for a church that has since become almost a hallmark of Frank Lloyd Wright design. The incident happened 10 years ago. She says he turned to her one day and said: "Mother, what kind of a church do you visualize in which you like to pray?"

"You remember how often we have spoken of the idea of the Trinity as being universal in all branches of the Christian faith," she replied, "and of course the Trinity is symbolized by the triangle. I can see the preacher standing at the apex of the triangle with the congregation facing him. I would like to be in a church, the roof of which might somehow resemble hands held together forward and upward in the gesture of prayer."

WENT TO BOARD

She says Wright went straight to the drawing board.

"Within another hour, the plan of a church was on the board. The great sheltering roof of the church was raised toward the sky, looking like two hands joined in prayer."

It became the meeting house of the First Unitarian Society of Madison, Wis., and has since been widely copied.

Wright himself used to say: "Every idea that is a true idea is capable of many forms. According to the variety of forms of which it is capable is the value of the idea.

"What makes a master of design? He's a master of the idea?"

Hollywood's Ideas Change With Air Age

By NATALIE WOOD

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) —For a world that is speeding along in the space travel-push button atmosphere of the 20th Century, many of our ideas are frighteningly reminiscent of the 19th Century Victorian morals.

One of these outdated ideas is the old saw that career and marriage don't mix. That may have been true 50 or 25 years ago, but today it is as far behind the times as the crank-it-yourself auto.

WORK

It is a fact that the majority of American wives work. Moreover, a good percentage of American mothers have another job in addition to their main one of running the family.

So why must actresses be the only exceptions?

When Bob Wagner and I married, some acquaintances optimistically predicted that I was throwing away my career and others predicted that if I didn't throw away my career, I would be throwing away our marriage.

Fortunately, both predictions have proven incorrect.

TECHNOLOGY

And why not? Modern technology has made the physical running of a home a fraction as demanding as it was 25 or even 10 years ago. The modern wife can budget her time and energies to make a success of both marriage and career.

Admittedly, it is no simple juggling feat, but it can be done and is done by millions of couples every day. Requires constant concentration, and if the woman finds she must emphasize one above the other, it must be the marriage... but then that is a female instinct.

FILMING

Currently I am filming "Splendor in the Grass" for Warner Bros. and director Elia Kazan in New York. My schedule includes early rising. Bob is up with me, even though he is taking a short vacation now. When he is filming and I am able to be lazy, I'm still up in time to have breakfast with him. We concentrate on spending as much time together as possible.

It is the same in the evenings, which are usually devoted to homework. We make a point of helping each other so that we can integrate career with marriage as much as possible.

Of course, the ideal solution is to co-star in a film as we did in "All the Fine Young Cannibals."

Dog Raising Poses Problem

By JIMMIE KENTON
Special Correspondent

Nobody told me that beagles were hard to raise. After successfully growing one litter and getting well started on another, I learned about feeding, worm treatments, shots and their high mortality rate.

My first acquaintance with the long - eared, sad - eyed, rabbit machines, came when my husband brough home a puppy with a pedigree longer than she was. I put my foot down before he could put her down — no more hounds in the Kenton household! He had recently disposed of a pack of Black and Tan monsters that almost ate us out of house and home during their years with us, and I had promised myself that never again would I feed another hound.

REASONED

"Beagles are little. They won't eat as much as the Black and Tans", my husband reasoned.

I later learned thot was the understatement of the century.

But "Beagie" rolled her sad eyes; flopped her long ears, nuzzled my hand and therewith established herself as a member of the family.

Someone was always ready with a plate of food for her, and she was always ready for it. She grew rapidly, both in stature and charm, increasing the niche she had made for herself in our hearts.

In due time she was transported 30 miles to be bred to a field trial champion.

FIRST LITTER

Her first litter was two boys and two girls — the littlest, cutest, most playful animals I had ever seen. The puppies grew, began to eat and the hunters come to look them over.

"They're wormy", the men said. "Just look at their stomachs."

I knew better. Any time a pint sized animal consumes a quart of bread and milk at one sitting, it is impossible for it to retain it's school girl figure.

"Two are runts," said the hunters.

That seemed to be true. Two were quite small, slender built, with dainty features. Two were husky, arrogant and masculine.

We were later to learn that there are two sizes of beagles. "Beagie" was of the smaller breed, while the sire of the puppies was of the large typer. One might think that breeding a small dog to a large dog would give middle sized puppies. But not our puppies! Every litter that we have grown has been half large and half small. The females are almost all of the small size.

"Beagles are hard to raise. If you can raise them, I want to buy a pair," offered the hunters.

"Nothing doing. I'm going to keep all of these," stated my husband.

INSPIRATION

It was then that I had my inspiration. We would keep the first litter; my husband could hunt them and I would raise puppies for sale. At twenty - five dollars a pup, my mental calculation was that three girl dogs would bring me at least a dozen puppies worth $300.

"Here's where I make a mint! I'll go into the beagle business," I said to myself.

Considering the possibliity of many dogs led me to notice that the five were eating as much as a small army, so I set about finding a cheaper way to feed them. It would take all of the gold in Fort Knox to buy dog food. Watching them munch an apple core, a lettuce leaf or a raw potato with all of the relish of a child with an ice cream cone led me to a vague remembrance of my grandmother's "slop can" which she kept for the pigs.

In this generation of garbage disposals, the "slop can" is extinct, but there was a time when it was a permanent fixture in a farm kitchen. Into it went every scrap of left over food; the raw vegetable trimmings, scraps of fruit and cold bread. It was marinated in any left over juice, broth or milk.

My first batch was a gourmand's delight for the beagles. We supplemented it with dog food. They supplemented it with chicken feed, calf feed, wheat shorts, corn, in fact, everything edible was sampled by the pack.

OPINION

It is my opinion that the archaeologists have missed a bet by not employing beagles in their search for bones. A beagle can litter a yard with a greater variety of bones than a professional bone collector.

The nearest I ever came to voluntary entry into a mental institution was once when I opened my door to find a small skull on the top step. Surely this time they had invaded the cemetry! My husband arrived just in time to save me from the little men in white coats. He identified it as a goat's skull. However, I have never been the same since.

When our second litter was about two months old, the owner of the sire drove down to see the pups.

"Have you wormed them"? he asked.

"No."

"You can't raise them without worming them," he told me.

Then he gave me instructions about worming, shots, feeding and other things essential to growing healthy hunting dogs. I was ashamed to tell him about my "slop can" which has become a permanent part of my feeding equipment.

According to him, growers had to get a high price for the pups because the mortality rate was so high.

TWO KINDS

There are two kind of people in the world — those who love dogs and those who do not. Those who love dogs will know what I mean; those who do not will never understand.

Our puppies have thrived on their "slop can" formula and plenty of loving. They are given distinguished names like Flip; Flop; Slip; Slide; Sad, and Toughie. We call them by name, talk to them, love them, and pet them until they obey when spoken to. We never strike a dog. The puppies are given to boys who will love them as well as hunt them.

The mother dog is fed well before the puppies come and expecially heavy while the puppies nurse. The little ones are left with their mother until she weans them. Food is kept where the little ones can get to it when they want it. They eat a little bit at a time and eat often. When they are older they are fed three times a day — as long as the "slop" holds out. I have never seen a beagle leave food in a pan. They will eat until they can hardly walk. The vegetable season on the farm makes the feeding program easy. They will eat pots of greens or any other vegetable in season. They will drink the watermelon juice, eat the watermelon down to the green part, and eat a cantaloupe, peel and all.

Perhaps we have just had good "dog luck", but we never have a sick dog; one that is gun shy; nor one that will not hunt. Don't tell this — but we have never bought a worm pill.

OTHER SIDE

On the other side of the ledger, a beagle makes an excellent hunting dog. They are the family pet in the morning and a "rabbit machine" in the afternoon. Some hunters are finding them useful in hunting deer and fox. In this area they are used primarily for rabbit dogs.

In addition to their value as a hunting dog, they are the cutest, most affectionate bundle of perpetual motion that one can have for a pet. They will bark at anything from a shadow to the moon when they are not on a hunt. Around the house they will chase everything from a moving leaf to the largest animal on the farm — that is until something starts chasing them. Then they become great cowards. At the first sign of aggression, they will back up into their house, put their heads on each others shoulders, and raise the dead with their din.

How many $300 litters have I sold? None. For every litter there are two young hunters who view the babies and say "which pair are you going to give me?" How many teen - aged hunters would understand their friend selling them puppies?

My next litters will be for sale . . . I think. That is unless two more boys show up, with sparkling eyes, whose faces light up when they see the minature dogs. Then the bright - eyed boys will take away the sad - eyed pups and new hunting stories will be born.

When they ask, "Which pair is mine?" tell me, how do you answer, "Do you want to buy a dog?"

life, she says.

Mrs. Faust tried her hand in a contest about 10 years ago — a national contest, with one picture in each of two categories. And she placed within the top three in each category. "Haven't taken the time again," she says.

A busy woman, Mrs. Faust teaches music at home and Rayville and Delhi schools, art at Delhi and home. She's been painting over 30 years.

In music, she teaches piano and accordion; in art, she teaches it in all media, but prefers new Classes are regular and private, for children and adults.

"Just give me an idea for a picture," she says, "and I'll give you a picture you can be proud of." In other words, she paints on order from you.

Prices for her art vary with the size, detail and amount of work generally called for. She was asked:

"Mrs. Faust, a picture of a person, or say a dog, from which the subject looks at you no matter from what angle you approach it — how does an artist accomplish this?"

"It's a matter of knowing the aesthetic center. Simple," she says.

Murals she paints on the rough side of masonite board, which she says is almost as good as canvas. Several of her murals hang in churches and schools of the area.

His Ideas Live On

By RELMAN MORIN

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — In the drafting room, two architects develop blueprints for a church, working from a design drawn by a departed hand.

The telephone rings in the front office. "Long distance from Honolulu." There is a long conversation about the plans for an exotic hotel on the Kona coast of Hawaii.

This is Taliesin West in Arizona.

ONE OF SITES

It is one of the two sites of the school of architecture founded 27 years ago by the late Frank Lloyd Wright, dean of American architects. The other, Taliesin East, is in Wisconsin.

Frank Lloyd Wright died April 9, 1959.

Today, just over a year later, his many-sided organization is operating exactly as though he were still alive and guiding it.

Plans for a civic center, churches, homes, many other buildings that were on the drawing boards when Wright died have largely been completed. New orders come in a steady flow. Wright's principal lieutenants, who now head his organization, execute them. From all over the world, candidates apply to study in his school — some of them already graduates of architectural schools.

In a word, Wright lives on today through the force and originality of his ideas, and the determination of a small group of people to continue his work.

AT CENTER

At the center of this group is his widow, Serbian-born Olgivanna Lloyd Wright. She is the moving spirit.

"We have not been standing still," she says. "Frank could not endure inactivity. We have plans —so many plans. And we have made changes."

Even the architect's own room at Taliesin has been slightly changed.

"Frank believed in eternal change," she says, "in the constant development of higher and more beautiful forms from the existing forms."

So while the organic design of Taliesin remains unchanged, some of its features have been improved.

Wright considered this site almost a camp. He used native stone from the nearby McDowell Mountains, wood, and even canvas in some of the buildings. Today, steel beams are replacing the wood, and glass is being fitted into open window spaces — all toward the end of making his desert camp a permanent complex of structures.

SCREENS

His widow now screens, and accepts or rejects, the men and women who apply to enroll in the school.

It is limited to about 60. The quota is filled today, and although Wright is not present to instruct the students, applications still pile up. The present class includes two students from India, two from South America, a Swiss, an Egyptian and a Chinese.

Every Sunday morning, Wright would talk to the whole group in the beautiful little theater that huddles against a hillside.

To the newest arrivals he would say: "We don't have a curriculum. We have only an ideal based upon thought.

"And being around here in these hills, you are free as I think no scholastic institution in the world is as yet free. You are free to fail. You are free to succeed. You are free to be what you are and that is what I want you all to be."

Some of the students are graduate architects. They came to Wright to study his principles of architecture—what he called "organic design."

He believed that a building should blend into its surroundings so that the structure and the landscape would complement each other, parts of the same whole. For example, he used desert stone and desert colors in Taliesin West. (Taliesin is Indian for "shining brow.")

The pattern as a whole seems so much a part of the mountains and desert that, at a relatively short distance, it all but disappears into the surrounding terrain

Other students have had no training whatever. Many start from scratch, learning the A-B-C of architecture.

Some are married and have their families with them. Some live in tents in preference to the apartments. They do all the cooking and serving in the refectory. They have an orchestra and a dance group. They design and paint the sets, and make their own costumes, for their theatrical presentations.

"Mr. Wright believed that, in addition to being architects, they should be acquainted with all phases of the operation of the school," says Wesley Peters, vice president of the organization.

Peters, 48, was with Wright for 26 years. He is a native of Terre Haute, Ind., and a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Two other directors of the organization, Eugene Masselink and John Howe, joined Wright 27 years ago. Another, Allan L. Davison, graduate of Cornell University, has been with the school since 1938.

PROJECTS

Among the various projects on the drawing boards now are a hotel for Hawaii, a plan to build a resort city on Ellis Island, the former federal immigration reception center, and numerous churches.

Mrs. Wright recalls the inception of the idea for a church that has since become almost a hallmark of Frank Lloyd Wright design. The incident happened 10 years ago. She says he turned to her one day and said: "Mother, what kind of a church do you visualize in which you like to pray?"

"You remember how often we have spoken of the idea of the Trinity as being universal in all branches of the Christian faith," she replied, "and of course the Trinity is symbolized by the triangle. I can see the preacher standing at the apex of the triangle with the congregation facing him. I would like to be in a church, the roof of which might somehow resemble hands held together forward and upward in the gesture of prayer."

WENT TO BOARD

She says Wright went straight to the drawing board.

"Within another hour, the plan of a church was on the board. The great sheltering roof of the church was raised toward the sky, looking like two hands joined in prayer."

It became the meeting house of the First Unitarian Society of Madison, Wis., and has since been widely copied.

Wright himself used to say: "Every idea that is a true idea is capable of many forms. According to the variety of forms of which it is capable is the value of the idea.

"What makes a master of design? He's a master of the idea?"

Judge Jones Worthy

On Saturday, July 23, the qualified voters of the fifth State Supreme Court district will go to the polls to elect a man to succeed the late Justice Amos L. Ponder.

That district covers 12 parishes —Washington, St. Tammany, Tangipahoa, Livingston, East Feliciana, West Feliciana, St. Helena, East Baton Rouge, West Baton Rouge, Iberville, Pointe Coupee and St. Landry.

The voters, however, will elect a justice to serve not only their district but all of Louisiana. That is why this newspaper which is located outside the district is noting editorially this very important election.

The Louisiana Supreme Court should be composed of the finest judges available—men of unquestioned integrity, ability, experience and dedication. Fortunately for Louisiana, just such a man is in this race, and we speak of Judge Robert D. Jones of Bogalusa.

He has served in the Legislature and has been an outstanding district judge for 25 years. During that period as a judge, he has tried every conceivable type of case—family, criminal, civil. He has deported himself with wisdom, honor and dignity, and he has tempered justice with humanity.

His opponent, a family court judge, aspires to the supreme court, but does not have either the broad experience or the maturity of Judge Jones.

It is extremely noteworthy that every one of the 52 attorneys who practices in the district court that Judge Jones presided over so long petitioned him to seek the seat left open by the death of Justice Ponder. It is also interesting to note that Justice Ponder's son, who is first assistant attorney general of Louisiana, decided not to seek the seat but to support Judge Jones. Another attorney who was aspiring to the position also withdrew, realizing the calibre of Judge Jones.

Judge Jones was elected without opposition to be judge of the First circuit court of appeal and the term starts on July 1 (1960). At the time Judge Jones ran for the court of appeal, Justice Ponder was alive. An act of God has changed this situation, and Judge Robert D. Jones is the best man for the supreme court. This is a case of the job truly seeking the man.

Judge Jones is in the prime of life and will be a pillar of strength in the Louisiana state supreme court at a time in our history when we need the finest justices we can elect.

In World War I, Judge Jones served overseas. He volunteered when he was 16 years old and served for two years, after which he returned to high school. The judge is a member of the American Legion and Past Commander of Magic City Post 24 in Bogalusa.

Judge Jones is a member of the Sullivan Methodist Church in Bogalusa, and is a member of its Official Board.

He is a member of the Washington Parish Bar Association, the Louisiana State Bar Association, the Chamber of Commerce of Bogalusa and headed civilian defense. The Judge has headed numerous civic drives and is a past chairman of a Community Chest campaign in Bogalusa.

We urge the people of his district to aid all of Louisiana by going to the polls on Saturday, July 23, to vote for Judge Jones for the Louisiana Supreme Court.

Six Hoodlum Years

Although the law never had done so effectively, "justice" recently caught up with a New York youngster who began a life of crime at 12 years old and who was the victim of a gang-style killing at 18. Justice was done insofar as retribution for crime was concerned but not in regard to lack of parental training or proper court discipline as the young hoodlum cut a ruthless swath and went virtually unpunished.

Some six years ago a 12-year-old boy ducked under a turnstile in New York and got a free ride. So far as is known, that was the first time he had ever been guilty of an act of dishonesty. That was his first step toward taking things that did not belong to him.

By the time he was 15 he had compiled a long record of petty offenses. At that age he broke into a school, shattered a lot of windows, smashed furniture and tore up books.

At 16, the boy had bigger ideas and was arrested for assaulting a man. When he was 17 he was charged with attempted burglary and possessing a gun.

In all the cases mentioned the boy was freed without penalty either because of his youth or because the complainants were sympathetic with his parents.

Recently the young hoodlum, now 18, was dragged from an automobile near his home and was kicked and beaten and shot to death in a brutal and thorough manner. He paid the supreme penalty for his crimes against society, dying the death of a gangster, although he had not yet reached the legal age of maturity.

Few, other than his parents, could mourn his passing and even to them it must have been something of a bitter relief, as they could have had little hope that his life would be anything other than crime-strewn and the time when he could be excused on account of his youth or sympathy for his parents had run out.

The youngster was killed a short time before he was scheduled to appear in court with four friends to answer charges of owning and using a large cache of burglar tools. His comrades in crime admitted he had led them on numerous forays.

Parents who encourage their children to commit small acts of dishonesty, such as that in which the boy ducked under the turnstile to get a free ride, should consider the case of this boy. Instead of acting as if such a deed were funny, parents should tell their children calmly and clearly that such acts are wrong. Then is a time when parents can turn their children away from crime.

Traffic Exemption

Further study of the bill in the Louisiana legislature to disqualify those convicted of a felony or of a misdemeanor from voting, and of amendments to the bill, show that the measure, as approved does not attempt to disqualify all those guilty of misdemeanors. Specific exemption is given for those convicted of traffic and game law violations and other offenses must be of a serious nature before disqualification is effective.

The new law, authorities say, would not apply to any traffic case, including drunk driving, nor to any game violation case, even though a jail sentence were imposed. Nor would it apply to any other case in which no jail sentence of considerable length was imposed.

This makes the bill less onerous and more in conformity with voting laws of other states than it first appeared to be. The purpose of the measure, sponsors say, is to see that only honorable and upright citizens vote, an objective also sought in many other states.

Khrushchev Hate Speech

Talks Of Taking Americans By Scruff Of Neck And Giving Them Shaking To Stop 'Aggression

How to Lose the Cream

Nikita Sergeivich Khrushchev, in one of his hate speeches about the United States, told this story:

"I remember during my youth I was born in a very poor family and it was only very rarely that my mother could buy us some cream. But sometimes when she did our cat would creep up and eat some of the cream. Then my mother usually took the cat by the scruff of the neck and gave it a good shaking and in the end would poke its nose into the cream to make it understand that such stealing was not allowed.

"Wouldn't it be better, ladies and gentlemen, to take the American aggressors by the scruff of the neck also and give them a little shaking and make them understand they must not commit such acts of aggression against the Soviet Union?"

Of course, what happened was that the cream was spoiled. No self-respecting cat would learn not to eat cream because a mere human took it by the scruff of the neck and shook it. A cat is reputed to have nine lives and what does a mere shaking amount to? Besides, Khrushchev's mother was undoubtedly a kindly peasant woman whom the cat loved.

What Khrushchev actually accomplished at Paris, in the Tokyo riots and in his Cuban adventures is that he exposed the chances of finding a road to peaceful co-existence between Soviet Russia and the United States. Before the events developed into the crescendo of insults to the President of the United States, many Americans felt that the time had come for an end to the separation between the two leading countries. Today only a few doctrinaire Communists or pro-Russians dare to whisper a justification of Khrushchev's boorishness. The honeymoon arranged by such men as Robert Dowling, Eric Johnston, Farmer Garst, and Cyrus Eaton, is over. The businessmen who thought there were contracts in grovelling before Communists may have learned a lesson—maybe not.

The anti-Communists who have been in bad odor since the failure of Senator Joe McCarthy's efforts, always felt that the Russians having a clear target in view, would become impudent and would ultimately disgust the American people. That time has now come. How deep is the resentment is still to be seen. It is shocking that the attacks on Eisenhower were taken so lightly.

Candidates for the presidency, particularly those who like to walk on both sides of every street, find themselves in difficulties. Chester Bowles, who is expected to be secretary of state should John Kennedy be elected, has destroyed his usefulness by proposing a two-China acceptance in the United Nations. Who can propose any such concept after the Red Chinese bombarded Quemoy while President Eisenhower was in Formosa or in Chinese waters? It was a display of impudence. It was designed to humiliate the President of the United States—to make him lose face.

Well, the President of the United States did lose face. The United States lost face. But what did Khrushchev and Mao Tze-tung gain? What benefit came to them or their countries?

Actually, they shall have to pay a very heavy bill for all of this. The bill will be the unwillingness of the American people to do business with Russia or Red China. No President of this country in any reasonable period will be able to meet with any Russian at what has come to be called a summit. No President of this country will be able to accept an invitation to visit Russia or to invite the head of the Russian state to visit this country until the insult to Eisenhower has been removed in some satisfactory manner.

The so-called "peoples to peoples" nonsense will not be pursued much longer. While Americans, suffering from curiosity, will continue to try to visit Russia, the number of Russians who will come here will be progressively less numerous. Exchange students will be fewer. The Russians have cut off their noses to spite their faces.

Khrushchev did not lose his temper at Paris; otherwise his conduct in Cuba and Tokyo is not explicable. He knew exactly what he was doing. He was saving his own political neck and sacrificed President Eisenhower and the American people for his own ends. He may also have sacrificed Soviet Russia.

Woman's World

Ladies In Unprecedented Numbers Taking Part-Time Jobs

It's becoming more of a woman's world all the time.

The ladies, in unprecedented numbers, are taking part - time jobs in an increasing variety of occupations.

The Womens' Bureau of the Department of Labor, in an unusual report, says women are entering the part - time field nearly twice as fast as they are taking on full - time jobs.

Most are married, too. The report says that in addition to being housewives they are becoming sales clerks, waitresses, practical nurses, beauty operators, teachers, nurses and librarians.

Also policewomen, clerical and postal workers, and elevator operators.

The typical woman part - time worker in the United States today is married and between 35 and 44. Mostly she will be found working in a service or trade industry, rather than in agriculture, manufacturing or public administration.

The older her children, the greater number of weeks per year she will work.

She is sometimes a student as well as a housewife. She may be combining studies with work to help meet expenses and obtain valuable experience for the years ahead.

Or she may combine her role of wife and mother with that of worker in order to contribute to the family income, broaden her interests outside the home and keep intact her work skills.

Often she is a mature woman who has found that grown - up children mean less home responsibility, thus freeing her of other tasks.

And she may be a retired person who needs the extra money.

More women are now working part - time than ever before in the nation's history. During the past decade their number has increased faster than that of part-time men workers.

From 1955 to 1957, the number of part - time women workers is expected to have increased by more than 75 per cent, in contrast to an advance of 50 per cent among those working full-time.

About 600,000 women are working part - time in professional and technical fields alone at last count.

Teachers made up the largest single group — about 165,000. Included in this classification were teachers and administrators in secondary and elementary schools and kindergartens, as well as teachers of such diverse subjects as driving, first - aid and sewing.

Many of the part - time teachers were employed as substitute teachers. Some cities and towns maintain lists of women willing to work as substitutes, and call them as the need arises.

A survey showed that in 1000 colleges and degree - granting institutions there were 50,000 part-time teachers, or about 30 per cent of all those employed.

Nursing provides another large field of opportunity for the part-time woman worker. The American Hospital Association estimated recently that two - fifths of all general duty nurses employed in hospitals were part-timers.

In all, more than nine million women are expected to be working part - time within 15 years.

The Department of Labor is paying increasing attention to this vast reservoir of national talent and skill. The part - time woman worker is now represented in virtually every occupation group.

The department says these women "fill a real need" in the nation's labor supply picture. Many trade and service industries need the part - time woman worker to meet peak business periods, to relieve regular employees from unusually long hours, and to perform duties which require less than a full week's work.

Rayville, La.

To The Editor:

In your today's (6-22) Morning World is the following editorial: (quote) "If all the restrictive and compulsive laws proposed by members of congress and of the various state legislatures were enacted this country would be as devoid of individual freedom as was Germany under the rule of the late Adolf Hitler. How people raised in a free country can propose such limitations on individual liberty is inconceivable." (End quote).

First, I want to give my hearty endorsement to your statement. Only, there comes to my mind one, to me, painful exception which your record for the past many months since I have been a regular reader of your paper, makes, namely: except when such "restrictive and compulsive laws" are made to apply only to the Negro race; of course it is all right then.

Why do I say this? Because in the nearly two years that I have been a regular reader of your paper, I cannot recall a single instance where you have lifted your editorial voice in defense of the rights of colored people, who are citizens of the United States the same as we are, to the same measure of "individual liberty" that we claim for ourselves.

In the same issue of your good paper from which the above quotation is taken, and on the first page, and under rather heavy headlines, is the story of how the "House Passes 15 New Bills On Segregation."

Maybe your editorial, quoted above, was meant to apply to the batch of "restrictive" legislation, as to all other "compulsive laws" hinted at by you. If so, why do you not say so? Why beat around the bush, if you mean to include all citizens in your editorial defense of individual liberties?

I know such a course would not be popular with those who are bent on maintaining the racial dictatorship that we have had in this country so long, and intend to keep, if we can. It was not popular to be called "a Christian" in Paul's day; nor is it always popular to be Christian in our attitudes and expressions of opinion in our day.

WRITER IN ERROR

Mer Rouge, La.

To The Editor:

The interesting article, "The Bearded Brigand" by Janice Clark, was in error in one particular. She thinks John Murrell was slain and buried by his own men up in Ashley County. The facts in the case are that he was captured by a party of horsemen from some place in Mississippi and hanged on an oak tree near the present home of R. L. Norsworthy. John was visiting in the home of a cousin of his who lived on what is now a part of a farm owned by Dr. E. M. Clark on Bayou Bonne Idee. Ben Murrell lived just about two miles south of the place of hanging.

The late R. K. Harp, father of the former Sheriff of Morehouse, R. E. Harp, claimed it was the first white man hanged in Morehouse Parish. Morehouse was formed from Ouachita Parish some time in 1844. That would make John alive sometime after that date.

The party of Mississippians was a silent set of men. After the hanging they left immediately without giving any hint of their place of residence.

The cousin, Ben Murrell, was a good man and an honest one. He later operated a Ferry across Bayou Bartholomew at where now stands the Knox Ferry bridge. He was kicked and killed by a mule while making a crossing. The writer has Ben Murrell's signature as a witness to a business transaction.

John Murrell was hanged for his abortive attempt to cause the slaves to murder their masters. He operated all over north and central Louisiana. There is a place in Vernon Parish known as Murrell's Cave. This place is in the National Forest, Kisatchie, the spelling of which appears above may need amending. It was not a natural cave but one that John caused to be dug in a hillside. It collapsed long ago, but, I am told, the ruins are still in evidence.

It was 60 or more years ago that the writer, as an indifferent student in L.S.U., heard Col. J. W. Nicholson, former president of that school and author of a series of mathematical text books, relate some englightening facts concerning John Murrell's original way of operating. The colonel stated John would hold "protracted meetings" and when he had his audience worked up the right pitch of hysteria pass the signal for his men to steal the horses of the worshippers. Afterwards John would boast: "I preached a hell of a fine sermon" or "I preached a damn fine sermon."

John Murrell's father was a good man by repute and a preacher of a sort. He was "hen - pecked" and thoroughly dominated by his courtesan wife. The old man was afraid to make any kind of protest over the way his boy was raised.

Food Item Less

Amount Spent On Eating Declines From 46 To 30 Per Cent

If your grandparents were a normal middle - income family living in an American city in 1900, they spent a huge 46 per cent of their yearly income just to feed themselves and their children.

If your parents were a normal middle income family living in a leading U. S. city in 1917, they still were spending more than 42 per cent of their yearly earnings simply to feed themselves and you.

If you now head a similar family, you're probably spending less than 30 per cent of your annual earnings for food.

Nothing dramatizes the upsurge in the average American's standard of living in these years as much as the spectacular decline in the proportion of income which must be used for such necessities as food. Obviously, as your buying power rises, the amount you must spend for food and other basic essentials declines. Even though you may increase the quantity of food you consume as your income climbs, upgrade the quality of the food you buy, shift from inexpensive eating at home to expensive eating out, there is a limit to the quantity and quality of food consumption by the average family.

And the smaller percentage of your income which you must spend for food, shelter, clothing, the more you'll have left for other goods and services — secondary necessities, conveniences, luxuries.

Finally, the Bureau of Labor Statistics has obtained the funds to overhaul the vitally important consumer price index — the index which measures changes in the prices of goods and services the average city family buys and which last was revised over 10 years ago. In this decade the purchasing power of U. S. families has soared and, "There is no doubt the surveys will show the buying patterns of city families have undergone significant changes," a BLS spokesman remarked. "Some of the changes may startle even the most informed economists."

To suggest what might be revealed I've been digging into the Dept. of Labor's records of buying patterns on past key survey dates — 1901, 1917-19, 1934-36, 1950 — and making projections for 1960. I suspect you'll find it fascinating to estimate your own spending percentages and compare them with those you'll read below.

1901: The average city worker's family spent 46.2 per cent for food, 24.6 per cent for shelter, 12 per cent for clothing, had only 17.2 per cent left for all the rest — transportation, medical care, personal care, recreation, education, etc., etc.

1917-19: The average city worker's family spent 42.4 per cent for food, including alcoholic beverages, 20.5 per cent for housing, including fuel and light, 16.7 per cent for clothing had less than 21 per cent left for transportation, medical care, recreation, etc.

1934-36: Food, including alcoholic beverages, was down to 35.4 per cent, housing was up to 26.4 per cent, clothing was down to 10.2 per cent and now 28 per cent was left for all the rest.

1950: Food was down to 33.5 per cent, housing was down to 15.5 per cent, clothing took about the same percentage—10.8. A full 40.2 per cent was left for other goods and services — with the automobile alone taking 11.8 per cent, medical care 5.4 per cent, recreation figured at 4.3 per cent.

1960: Now the informed guess is food is taking less than 30 per cent of the city worker's pay, underlining the spurt in our real buying power. Housing is taking 18 to 19 per cent, reflecting how home ownership has soared in our land. Clothing probably is taking only 8 per cent or so, emphasizing the comparative stability in clothing prices. And the percentage we're spending on all other goods and services well may be up to 44 per cent or more.

The achievement pinpointed by these percentages stands without parallel in any nation ever. The Americans of the first half of this century fought unceasingly to give us these standards. We'll have to fight with equal determination to live up to the pace they set.

Judge Jones Worthy

On Saturday, July 23, the qualified voters of the fifth State Supreme Court district will go to the polls to elect a man to succeed the late Justice Amos L. Ponder.

That district covers 12 parishes —Washington, St. Tammany, Tangipahoa, Livingston, East Feliciana, West Feliciana, St. Helena, East Baton Rouge, West Baton Rouge, Iberville, Pointe Coupee and St. Landry.

The voters, however, will elect a justice to serve not only their district but all of Louisiana. That is why this newspaper which is located outside the district is noting editorially this very important election.

The Louisiana Supreme Court should be composed of the finest judges available—men of unquestioned integrity, ability, experience and dedication. Fortunately for Louisiana, just such a man is in this race, and we speak of Judge Robert D. Jones of Bogalusa.

He has served in the Legislature and has been an outstanding district judge for 25 years. During that period as a judge, he has tried every conceivable type of case—family, criminal, civil. He has deported himself with wisdom, honor and dignity, and he has tempered justice with humanity.

His opponent, a family court judge, aspires to the supreme court, but does not have either the broad experience or the maturity of Judge Jones.

It is extremely noteworthy that every one of the 52 attorneys who practices in the district court that Judge Jones presided over so long petitioned him to seek the seat left open by the death of Justice Ponder. It is also interesting to note that Justice Ponder's son, who is first assistant attorney general of Louisiana, decided not to seek the seat but to support Judge Jones. Another attorney who was aspiring to the position also withdrew, realizing the calibre of Judge Jones.

Judge Jones was elected without opposition to be judge of the First circuit court of appeal and the term starts on July 1 (1960). At the time Judge Jones ran for the court of appeal, Justice Ponder was alive. An act of God has changed this situation, and Judge Robert D. Jones is the best man for the supreme court. This is a case of the job truly seeking the man.

Judge Jones is in the prime of life and will be a pillar of strength in the Louisiana state supreme court at a time in our history when we need the finest justices we can elect.

In World War I, Judge Jones served overseas. He volunteered when he was 16 years old and served for two years, after which he returned to nigh school. The judge is a member of the American Legion and Past Commander of Magic City Post 24 in Bogalusa.

Judge Jones is a member of the Sullivan Methodist Church in Bogalusa, and is a member of its Official Board.

He is a member of the Washington Parish Bar Association, the Louisiana State Bar Association, the Chamber of Commerce of Bogalusa and headed civilian defense. The Judge has headed numerous civic drives and is a past chairman of a Community Chest campaign in Bogalusa.

We urge the people of his district to aid all of Louisiana by going to the polls on Saturday, July 23, to vote for Judge Jones for the Louisiana Supreme Court.

Six Hoodlum Years

Although the law never had done so effectively, "justice" recently caught up with a New York youngster who began a life of crime at 12 years old and who was the victim of a gang-style killing at 18. Justice was done insofar as retribution for crime was concerned but not in regard to lack of parental training or proper court discipline as the young hoodlum cut a ruthless swath and went virtually unpunished.

Some six years ago a 12-year-old boy ducked under a turnstile in New York and got a free ride. So far as is known, that was the first time he had ever been guilty of an act of dishonesty. That was his first step toward taking things that did not belong to him.

By the time he was 15 he had compiled a long record of petty offenses. At that age he broke into a school, shattered a lot of windows, smashed furniture and tore up books.

At 16, the boy had bigger ideas and was arrested for assaulting a man. When he was 17 he was charged with attempted burglary and possessing a gun.

In all the cases mentioned the boy was freed without penalty either because of his youth or because the complainants were sympathetic with his parents.

Recently the young hoodlum, now 18, was dragged from an automobile near his home and was kicked and beaten and shot to death in a brutal and thorough manner. He paid the supreme penalty for his crimes against society, dying the death of a gangster, although he had not yet reached the legal age of maturity.

Few, other than his parents, could mourn his passing and even to them it must have been something of a bitter relief, as they could have had little hope that his life would be anything other than crime-strewn and the time when he could be excused on account of his youth or sympathy for his parents had run out.

The youngster was killed a short time before he was scheduled to appear in court with four friends to answer charges of owning and using a large cache of burglar tools. His comrades in crime admitted he had led them on numerous forays.

Parents who encourage their children to commit small acts of dishonesty, such as that in which the boy ducked under the turnstile to get a free ride, should consider the case of this boy. Instead of acting as if such a deed were funny, parents should tell their children calmly and clearly that such acts are wrong. Then is a time when parents can turn their children away from crime.

To The Editor:

In your today's (6-22) Morning World is the following editorial: (quote) "If all the restrictive and compulsive laws proposed by members of congress and of the various state legislatures were enacted this country would be as devoid of individual freedom as was Germany under the rule of the late Adolf Hitler. How people raised in a free country can propose such limitations on individual liberty is inconceivable." (End quote).

First, I want to give my hearty endorsement to your statement. Only, there comes to my mind one, to me, painful exception which your record for the past many months since I have been a regular reader of your paper, makes, namely: except when such "restrictive and compulsive laws" are made to apply only to the Negro race: of course it is all right then.

Why do I say this? Because in the nearly two years that I have been a regular reader of your paper, I cannot recall a single instance where you have lifted your editorial voice in defense of the rights of colored people, who are citizens of the United States the same as we are, to the same measure of "individual liberty" that we claim for ourselves.

In the same issue of your good paper from which the above quotation is taken, and on the first page, and under rather heavy headlines, is the story of how the "House Passes 15 New Bills On Segregation."

Maybe your editorial, quoted above, was meant to apply to the batch of "restrictive" legislation, as to all other "compulsive laws" hinted at by you. If so, why do you not say so? Why beat around the bush, if you mean to include all citizens in your editorial defense of individual liberties?

I know such a course would not be popular with those who are bent on maintaining the racial dictatorship that we have had in this country so long, and intend to keep, if we can. It was not popular to be called "a Christian" in Paul's day; nor is it always popular to be Christian in our attitudes and expressions of opinion in our day.

WRITER IN ERROR
Mer Rouge, La.

To The Editor:

The interesting article, "The Bearded Brigand" by Janice Clark, was in error in one particular. She thinks John Murrell was slain and buried by his own men up in Ashley County. The facts in the case are that he was captured by a party of horsemen from some place in Mississippi and hanged on an oak tree near the present home of R. L. Norsworthy. John was visiting in the home of a cousin of his who lived on what is now a part of a farm owned by Dr. E. M. Clark on Bayou Bonne Idee. Ben Murrell lived just about two miles south of the place of hanging.

The late R. K. Harp, father of the former Sheriff of Morehouse, R. E. Harp, claimed it was the first white man hanged in Morehouse Parish. Morehouse was formed from Ouachita Parish some time in 1844. That would make John alive sometime after that date.

The party of Mississippians was a silent set of men. After the hanging they left immediately without giving any hint of their place of residence.

The cousin, Ben Murrell, was a good man and an honest one. He later operated a Ferry across Bayou Bartholomew at where now stands the Knox Ferry bridge. He was kicked and killed by a mule while making a crossing. The writer has Ben Murrell's signature as a witness to a business transaction.

John Murrell was hanged for his abortive attempt to cause the slaves to murder their masters. He operated all over north and central Louisiana. There is a place in Vernon Parish known as Murrell's Cave. This place is in the National Forest, Kisatchie, the spelling of which appears above may need amending. It was not a natural cave but one that John caused to be dug in a hillside. It collapsed long ago, but, I am told, the ruins are still in evidence.

It was 60 or more years ago that the writer, as an indifferent student in L.S.U., heard Col. J. W. Nicholson, former president of that school and author of a series of mathematical text books, relate some englightening facts concerning John Murrell's original way of operating. The colonel stated John would hold "protracted meetings" and when he had his audience worked up the right pitch of hysteria pass the signal for his men to steal the horses of the worshippers. Afterwards John would boast: "I preached a hell of a fine sermon" or "I preached a damn fine sermon."

John Murrell's father was a good man by repute and a preacher of a sort. He was "henpecked" and thoroughly dominated by his courtesan wife. The old man was afraid to make any kind of protest over the way his boy was raised.

Food Item Less

Amount Spent On Eating Declines From 46 To 30 Per Cent

If your grandparents were a normal middle - income family living in an American city in 1900, they spent a huge 46 per cent of their yearly income just to feed themselves and their children.

If your parents were a normal middle income family living in a leading U. S. city in 1917, they still were spending more than 42 per cent of their yearly earnings simply to feed themselves and you.

If you now head a similar family, you're probably spending less than 30 per cent of your annual earnings for food.

Nothing dramatizes the upsurge in the average American's standard of living in these years as much as the spectacular decline in the proportion of income which must be used for such necessities as food. Obviously, as your buying power rises, the amount you must spend for food and other basic essentials declines. Even though you may increase the quantity of food you consume as your income climbs, upgrade the quality of the food you buy, shift from inexpensive eating at home to expensive eating out, there is a limit to the quantity and quality of food consumption by the average family.

And the smaller percentage of your income which you must spend for food, shelter, clothing, the more you'll have left for other goods and services — secondary necessities, conveniences, luxuries.

Finally, the Bureau of Labor Statistics has obtained the funds to overhaul the vitally important consumer price index — the index which measures changes in the prices of goods and services the average city family buys and which last was revised over 10 years ago. In this decade the purchasing power of U. S. families has soared and, "There is no doubt the surveys will show the buying patterns of city families have undergone significant changes," a BLS spokesman remarked. "Some of the changes may startle even the most informed economists."

To suggest what might be revealed I've been digging into the Dept. of Labor's records of buying patterns on past key survey dates — 1901, 1917-19, 1934-36, 1950 — and making projections for 1960. I suspect you'll find it fascinating to estimate your own spending percentages and compare them with those you'll read below.

1901: The average city worker's family spent 46.2 per cent for food, 24.6 per cent for shelter, 12 per cent for clothing, had only 17.2 per cent left for all the rest — transportation, medical care, personal care, recreation, education, etc., etc.

1917-19: The average city worker's family spent 42.4 per cent for food, including alcoholic beverages, 20.5 per cent for housing, including fuel and light, 16.7 per cent for clothing had less than 21 per cent left for transportation, medical care, recreation, etc.

1934-36: Food, including alcoholic beverages, was down to 35.4 per cent, housing was up to 26.4 per cent, clothing was down to 10.2 per cent and now 28 per cent was left for all the rest.

1950: Food was down to 33.5 per cent, housing was down to 15.5 per cent, clothing took about the same percentage—10.8. A full 40.2 per cent was left for other goods and services — with the automobile alone taking 11.8 per cent, medical care 5.4 per cent, recreation figured at 4.3 per cent.

1960: Now the informed guess is food is taking less than 30 per cent of the city worker's pay, underlining the spurt in our real buying power. Housing is taking 18 to 19 per cent, reflecting how home ownership has soared in our land. Clothing probably is taking only 8 per cent or so, emphasizing the comparative stability in clothing prices. And the percentage we're spending on all other goods and services well may be up to 44 per cent or more.

The achievement pinpointed by these percentages stands without parallel in any nation ever. The Americans of the first half of this century fought unceasingly to give us these standards. We'll have to fight with equal determination to live up to the pace they set.

Columnist Believes

1908 Denver Meet Was Demos' Best

By BASCOM N. TIMMONS
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, D. C. — History has not exalted it as one of the most notable of our quadrennial major party conclaves. Even I have seen some that outshone it. But if I ever start forgetting national political conventions I think the last one I will ever forget was the one held by the Democrats at Denver in 1908.

I was 18 years old and was covering the first of 27 consecutive national political conventions, which through 1956 have run 13 Democratic, 12 Republican, a Theodore Roosevelt Bull Moose and a LaFollette Progressive.

At Denver I saw William Jennings Bryan nominated for the third time. I watched the party's most famed warhorses in action. But the one thing I saw which is most indelibly engraved in memory was a sightless man, afterwards famous in American politics, but then attending his first national convention. He stood before an immense throng of people and set off the most thrilling single episode I have ever seen in any national political convention.

The blind man was United States Senator Thomas Pryor Gore of Oklahoma, just then the newest star in the sisterhood of States and thus represented for the first time in a national convention. In reality Oklahoma was so lately admitted to the Union that a convention rollcall clerk called out "Indian Territory," only to get a response, "She's married now."

That is what had happened, for Indian Territory and Oklahoma Territory together had come into the Union as Oklahoma.

To understand how one man with one word, uttered almost casually it seemed, set off one of the most remarkable scenes in the annals of national party conventions it is necessary to recapture the situation that then existed.

It was no certainty that Bryan would be given his third nomination when delegates began to gather in Denver on July 4, 1908. He had twice been nominated and twice defeated — in 1896 and 1900. In 1904 Judge Alton B. Parker of New York had been nominated by the Democrats and defeated by Theodore Roosevelt in November. Now at Denver in 1908 thousands of telegrams were coming in entreating the delegates not to invite defeat by nominating Bryan again.

Under consideration in 1908 in addition to Bryan were Governor John A. Johnson of Minnesota and Judge George Gray of Delaware. Johnson's vociferous supporters were making the claim that Johnson could carry all the states Bryan could and get an additional 100 electoral votes from States that Bryan never had and never would carry. These glibly promised electoral votes were from Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, and some eastern States.

The Gray supporters were conservatives, mostly from eastern States, but with some Southern strength. Two weeks before Secretary of War William Howard Taft had been nominated by the Republicans at Chicago — a nomination forced by President Theodore Roosevelt.

Oklahoma, as the newest in the constellation of States, was being accorded deluxe attention by the party bigwigs at Denver. Its first Governor, Charles N. Haskell, was chairman of the Platform and Resolutions Committee. Its senior United States Senator, Robert L. Owen, had a big hand among the kingmakers. Five hundred Oklahomans, with a half dozen brass bands, swarmed into town.

Junior United States Senator Thomas Pryor Gore was the only man from Oklahoma who seemed to be ignored at Denver. A Mississippian and blind from childhood, he had lived for a while in Texas and was an unsuccessful candidate for Congress from that State on the Populist ticket. He moved to Lawton, Oklahoma, in 1901 and had an active part in the Statehood efforts.

In the parcelling out of offices for the new State Gore was disregarded. One Senatorial nomination was handed to Robert L. Owen. Two millionaires were designated to contest for the other. Gore mortgaged his home to raise $1,000, made it a threesome and won. His term was the short one and the ruling Oklahoma powers hoped to defeat him for re-election.

His great opportunity came on July 8, just after noon. The Credentials Committee was conducting a hearing, which was to result in the unseating of Col. Joseph M. Guffey of Pennsylvania who had been a powerful party figure.

With nothing to do until the committee reported the convention marked time for awhile. Weary of the idling the crowd began calling for speeches. It yelled for Governor Joseph W. Folk of Missouri. Folk was not present. It demanded Governor Robert L. "Piddling Bob" Taylor of Tennessee. Neither was he in the hall, nor was Mayor Tom Johnson of Cleveland.

There was a call for "Oklahoma Owen." Owen was at a luncheon, in honor of Bryan's daughter, Mrs. Ruth Bryan Leavitt, at the Brown Palace Hotel.

Some one shouted for Gore. The temporary chairman was Theodore A. Bell, a tall, black-[illegible] Congressman from California. Bell stood on the platform, wearing a long frock coat over striped trousers, a fashionable high collar turned over at the corners and a somber black ascot tie.

Bell may have looked like a parson instead of a politician, but he knew the score. Gore was a lover in Oklahoma. Therefore, the chairman had difficulty hearing the call. When the clamor grew so insistent he could no longer ignore it Bell beckoned to Gore, who was sitting with his comely wife in the gallery just back of the platform. Mrs. Gore led her blind husband forward.

Gore seemed modest and diffident, but it soon became evident that he had a voice which rolled to the fartherest corners of the Auditorium, its tonal qualities hardly inferior to Bryan's own matchless silver ones. Gore knew that national convention delegates dote on familiar platitudes.

In the time - yellowed "proceedings" of the Denver Convention this is the way the first part of the Gore speech was recorded:

"Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, and fellow Democrats of this convention and of the United States: Oklahoma rejoices to make her debut, to have her coming out, under circumstances so auspicious (Applause). Oklahoma rejoices in the privilege of putting on long dresses and of eating at the first table with the grown folks (Applause and Laughter). Oklahoma, confidentially, would rather be on the inside looking out than on the outside looking in. (Laughter)

"Oklahoma brings greetings and good cheer to her elders in this splendid Union. I come to you, my fellow Democrats, not only from the youngest state, but I come from the most Democratic state in this mighty Republic (Applause). I come to you from a state where Democracy is a fact and not a figure of speech (Applause). I come to you from a state where the principles of Jeffersonian Democracy have been written into the fundamental law of the land (Applause). It is true that the President of the United States said that his opinion of our Constitution was not fit for publication. That, however, is true of a great many opinions of the President of this country (Laughter).

"My fellow Democrats, the great Secretary of War waged war against our Constitution. He came to Oklahoma and told us to do what liberty - loving freemen, what the Anglo - Saxon race has never done reject the opportunity for self - government when the opportunity is presented (Applause). But the greatest living apostle of human liberty came to Oklahoma and advised us to avail ourselves of the opportunity to secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and to our posterity (Applause), and with a majority of more than 100,000 Oklahomans rejected the advice of Taft and accepted the advice of Bryan."

That was the word that did it —"Bryan."

It was 1:19 (Denver time) in the afternoon of July 8. "Bedlam reigned" said the newspapers reporting it, and up to June, 1960, no better word to describe the scene has come into usage. Mere dementia was quickly followed by acute dementia.

The parade of the State banners began. Ordinarily calm Massachusetts was first in line, waving its standard crazily. Then North Carolina, Nebraska, Texas, Mississippi, Oklahoma, until 41 of the 46 states were marching. Only Minnesota, New York, Deleware, New Jersey, and Georgia held out.

Mrs. Mary C. C. Bradford of Colorado, who the press section was informed was the first woman delegate ever elected to a national political convention, carried her Colorado standard to the platform. Chairman Bell hoisted her to a chair. Flushed and excited she stood there in a white dress, a beautiful picture.

A tall man with a big moustache broke out of the Texas group in the front row of delegate seats, vaulted to the platform and was yelling "Bryan! Bryan! Bryan!"

My seat mate, a Milwaukee editor named Henry Campbell, confided to me that he didn't believe a giant standing on Pike's Peak with the biggest megaphone in the world could make more noise than the Texan was making. (The megaphone in that year was the ultimate contrivance for making the voice carry.)

Most of the time the band was playing "Dixie," the tune that could always call forth the greatest cheering at a Democratic convention until the last few. (Bulletin: "Dixie" won't be played much at Los Angeles.)

At intervals the band would swing into "Maryland, My Maryland." Perhaps some Bryanite had bribed the band which now began to play "Tammany," hoping to get New York into the hysteria. It failed. An outsider tried to grab the New York banner. Some one knocked him down. We were told the blow was delivered by Charles White, the ex-prize fighter.

All around Murphy were the Sachems and Braves of Tammany Hall, whom Murphy had brought across the prairies and through the mountains to a point further west of their 14th Street wigwam than most of them had ever been. And scattered around in the New York seats were the likes of Bird S. Coler, Martin Littleton, "Blue-eyed Billy" Sheehan, Bourke Cockran, Charles T. Towne and Judge Alton B. Parker, "the sage of Esopus."

Parked at the Shirley Arms Hotel was the shipment of silk hats, which the Tammany Indians had brought along to wear in a George Gray parade, which it was becoming more evident by the minute would never come off.

Three - quarters of an hour had gone by and the din was increasing. A Massachusetts contingent brushed aside the guards and stormed through the press section, one delegate yelling so loudly that his upper false teeth flew out. (Dentists do a better job now.) The teeth hit the writing stand of Samuel G. Blythe of the New York World and went ricocheting under a seat. The delegate, in hot pursuit, was down on his hands and knees, retrieved the denture and rejoined his noisy cohorts.

Jim Dahlman, the cowboy mayor Omaha, was on the platform now, a rope in hand. As the Nebraska delegation came by he dropped a lasso over the shoulders of a pretty Cornhusker maiden and she was lifted to the stand.

Another mighty roar and the word ran through the hall that Bryan had entered. It was false. Bryan was at Fairview, his country place near Lincoln.

Josiah Marvel of Wilmington, manager of the Gray forces, and Frederick B. Lynch of St. Paul, who had a similar role for Johnson, sat glumly beside the Delaware and Minnesota banners which had remained firmly in their sockets. A convention was being stampeded before it was even organized for business.

An hour had gone by and the official band had thumped out all its repertoire, save one. That one was banned. It was "Waltz Me Around Again, Willie," which was Blnache Ring's hit song in the musical comedy Miss Dolly Dollars. Only in 1908 were there two Presidential nominees with the same first name and "Waltz Me Around Again, Willie" had been the Taft theme song at the Republican convention.

At first only delegates had paraded. Now there were Uncompaghe Indians, Cripple Creek Miners, North Dakota cowboys, Wyoming cowgirls, and Kentucky Colonels. Although it was out-of-bounds for all except delegates nearly everybody in the hall, including this writer, had been on the platform by now.

In all the shrieking din one man stood silently and rooted to the same spot. It was the blind Senator who was responsible for it. To protect him from the jostling platform invaders Chairman Bell stood beside him for a few minutes. Then Mrs. Gore came forward and took his arm.

There had been everything in that parade except Bryan posters and placards. The turbulent event had come unexpectedly, and at a time the Bryan people themselves would not have chosen. I have seen innumerable pumped - up demonstrations since but don't tell any graybeard who was at Denver in July, 1908, that the one there was not the genuine article.

At 2:46 p.m., after 1 hour and 27 minutes, Chairman Bell had restored order. Gore whose speech had been interrupted when he told how Oklahoma has followed Bryan's advice, now finished in a sentence:

"My countrymen, to the others of the older States in this self-governing Republic, Oklahoma has but this to say: "Go thou, and do likewise.' "

The next day came the nominating speeches and another Gore nifty in a Bryan seconding speech: "Louis XVI said: 'I am the State.' " Theodore Roosevelt goes him forty-five better and said: "I am the United States'."

At 3:40 a.m., July 10, portly Chairman Henry D. Clayton of Alabama, the man who was later to write an anti-trust law, declared William Jennings Bryan the Presidential nominee. On the one roll call he had received the votes of 892½ of the 1008 delegates. Gray had received 59½ and Johnson, 46.

There are other vivid memories of that Denver convention:

Tom Taggert of Indiana, who as Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, opened the convention. Bryan had called Tom Taggert "a political train robber," and I thought this Hoosier must be a loathsome creature, indeed. Later Taggert was to become my friend and remained so for life. And I learned to make my own judgement of men.

The beards and handlebar moustaches of many of the delegates, with the luminous beard of J. Ham Lewis of Illinois drawing especial notice. Then there was the glory of the Lewis' wearing apparel — a suit of vivid gray, pearl spats over black high-button shoes, a waistcoast to match the spts and a red tie. They nominated John W. Kern of Indiana, a man with a most elegant beard, to be Bryan's Vice Presidential ticket mate.

The party wheel horses: The inseparable Ollie James of Kentucky and Tom Heflin of Alabama; Senator Charles A. Culberson of Texas; Roger Sullivan of Illinois; Governor George W. Peck of Wisconsin, author of "Peck's Bad Boy:" William J. "Gum Shoe Bill" Stone, Champ Clark and James A. Reed from Missouri, Governor Newton C. Blanchard of Louisiana, and Irving Handy of Delaware.

The woman suffragist paraders and the short shrift they got from the Platform Committee. The interview with Mrs. Haskell, the wife of the Oklahoma Governor who was the committee chairman, and Mrs. Haskell saying: "I don't believe in woman suffrage and we won't have it in Oklahoma. We have fixed that in our Constitution which bars women from voting."

Richmond Pearson Hobson, the hero of the Merrimac in the Spanish - American War, predicting a war with Japan. (It did not come for 3 years.)

Colonel George Harvey, editor of Harper's Weekly, and the brisk Southern editors, Josephus Daniels of North Carolina, Robert Ewing of Louisiana and Clark Howell of Georgia. Being told the Marse Henry Watterson of Kentucky had cancelled his intended visit to Denver because of the illness and death of his friend Murat Halstead of Cincinnati.

Ned McLean, son of John R. McLean of the Cincinnati Enquirer and the Washington Post, who spent part of the time in the press section, part of it in the gallery, part in a special railway car and part at Wolhurst, the home of Thomas F. Walsh, the miner who had struck it rich.

Ned McLean's engagement to Evelyn Walsh, the miner's daughter, had been announced that week. The special railway car was strictly Republican. It belonged to Mrs. Medill McCormick, the daughter of Mark Hanna. Her guests were a young Republican Congressman from Ohio, Nicholas Longworth, and his wife, who was the daughter of the Redoubtable Teddy and had been the Princess Alice of the White House. Alice Longworth missed few of the Democratic daily sessions at Denver.

The strangely named delegates Hinky Dink Kenna and Bathhouse John Coughlin from Chicago's First Ward and Fingy Connors from Buffalo.

The quartet from San Francisco which at all hours of the night sang the new "Sweet Adeline" down he corridor in the Brown Palace Hotel and the quartet from Lincoln, Nebraska, down the corridor the other way, singing "Sweet Genevieve," which was somewhat older, and was supposed to be a Bryan favorite.

And I remember that Oklahoman who kept saying that he was going to carry the Oklahoma standard which had stood in the convention hall down Pennsylvania avenue in Washington at the head of the Bryan parade come March 4, 1909. His name was Sidney Suggs and his home was in Ardmore.

Perhaps it was just as well for his comfort that Sidney Suggs did not have to go to Washington for the inaugural parade. That March 4, 1909, when William Howard Taft was installed as President was the snowiest, slushiest, day of all time. Telegraph wires were down, and it was next day before the nation knew whether Taft had been inaugurated or not.

Ignorant Armies Listed Among The Recent Top Works

The Ignorant Armies, by E. M. Halliday (Harper): A report on one of the 20th Century's greatest missed opportunities — the failure of the Allies to smash Russia's year-old Soviet regime in the summer and early fall of 1918. There were sizable Russian anti-Communist armies in the field at the time, and it seems possible that a resolute Allied force might have wrecked the Soviet system before it got well started. At is was, only about 15,000 men were sent to Murmansk and Archangel in 1918, and their orders were contradictory. Even this small force inflicted some stinging defeats on the armed rabble that was all the Reds had initially. Winston Churchill, then Britain's war secretary, and Maj. Gen. Edmund Ironside, the Allied field commander, never doubted that "strangling bolshevism at birth would have been an untold blessing to the human race." (Churchill's words). Arrayed against them were President Woodrow Wilson and Prime Minister David Lloyd George. Wilson doomed the campaign by ordering the withdrawal of the U. S. Infantry regiment which was the force's combat spearhead. This book is the product of extensive research by Halliday.

The Night They Raided Minsky's Excellent Book

The Night They Raided Minsky's, by Rowland Barber (Simon & Schuster): An account of a notable day in the history of Minksy's National Winter Garden Theater combined with a history of the Minsky family and of the art form of which they became the most noted exponents — the burlesque show. As the reader moves steadily towards the raid he knows is coming, he moves also through a review of the whole range of popular entertainment on New York's Lower East Side in the early 20th Century. Burlesque had always been a rowdy form of entertainment, but the form in which it existed at the time when it was banned in New York City was a relatively new departure. There are plenty of real people in this book (including pioneer Communist Leon Trotsky, oddly enough). There also are some who are presumably apocryphal — but fact here shades so delicately off into fiction that it is not always easy to tell where the dividing line is. But it is not a book meant to be analyzed. Just read it for pleasure and enjoy its construction of a gritty, vital type of entertainment that was part and parcel of the pre - Depression American scene.

Before starting an out - door meal, fill a toy water pistol with water. It will come in handy in putting out unwanted flames from dripping juices.

A Light That Never Dims - Times Square

CARNIVAL CROSSROADS: The Story of Times Square. By W. G. Rogers and Mildred Weston. Doubleday. $3.50.

Most looked-at but overlooked of New York tourist spectacles is the frantic triangle that begins where Broadway crosses 42nd Street. For a good half-century, everybody has been rushing there but only occasionally has anyone paused long enough to pen a memo on some part of its mammoth confusion.

Now for this first time, a full kaleidoscope of the contrary, pell-mell place is assembled between book covers. The authors call their aim evocative rather than minutely historic. The result is swift, lively fascinating.

The penning pair — Rogers, arts editor of The Associated Press, and Mildred Weston, his wife — are frequent obligatory visitors. The pursuit of higher culture takes one straight through the Times Square hurly-burly, for one main haven of art, the Metropolitan Opera House, is just south of the frenzy zone, and another, Carnegie Hall, is tucked just north.

Digging beneath the present glitter, "Carnival Crossroads" traces back to the long ago (ragged Continentals fired muskets there), rounds up main events as the place volved into the spirit and being of show world's Great White Way.

Dark and bright, blatant and brilliant, sublime and ridiculous — all are represented. Without overwhelming detail, the short volume well tabs the spirit of Times Square for veteran denizen or casual visitor.

Guide To Good Reading

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

The long hot days of summer bring more and more people to the Library. Many people have extra time for reading in the summer and we are exerting every effort to supply the public with the books they want. During the past week a number of new books arrived at the Library. Some will appeal to one group of readers and the others to other readers, but each book will find it's proper place.

Let's first take a look at the new books of fiction. Since the admission of Hawaii as the fiftieth state of our union, there have been a number of books written about this beautiful country. The latest one is "Diamond Head" by Peter Gilman. The author is a newspaperman who knows and loves the islands. He has included so many different angles in the story, that the reader may choose to view it in a variety of ways. It is first of all a novel, but it includes a great deal of historical background also. It is not as good book as James Michener's "Hawaii", but it is easier reading. Either of these books gives a very good picture of life in the islands. A new historical novel is "The Last Gentleman" by Shirley Barker. This is a warm and sympathetic story and she presents an interesting period of the history of our country. The setting is New Hampshire and the time is the years just before the Revolution. It is a story of confused loyalties, but the spirit of the times and the way of life in a young nation, emerge clearly.

A new book by Frank G. Slaughter is always eagerly received and there are many readers who will welcome his "Pilgrims in Paradise." It has it's setting on an island of the Bahamas, early in the 17th century. It is a story of two brothers and their many conflicts over many things, including the woman whom they both loved. Two excellent new mystery stories are among this weeks addition. They are "Death Wish Green" by Frances Crane and "The Case of the Duplicate Daughter" by Erle Stanley Gardner. Sometimes I wonder how he writes them so fast.

In this election year many people will want to read "Mr. Citizen" written by Ex - President Harry S. Truman. It is an account of the years since he left office. He takes up many of the problems which beset a former President. He is not literary genius, but his integrity and sincerity come through his writing. A book of reminiscences, which makes good reading is "This was Hollywood" by Beth Day. She looks back with nostalgia to the Hollywood of the 1930's and 1940's, but many people prefer life in the movie colony as it is today. "Dynasty" by Thomas Martin is an account of the Long family of Louisiana. It will interest many people in this area and adds new material to the account in "Longs of Louisiana" by Stan Opotowsky, which appeared in March.

"The Way Things Are" by Percy W. Bridgam is an interesting account of the philosophy of science. It is beautifully written and will appeal to the serious reader. A perfectly beautiful book is "Gemstones of North America" written by John Sinkankas. It is profusely illustrated and is a beautiful and permanent addition to the Library Collection. The Library never has enough books on the subject of flower arrangement. The latest is "The Driftwood Book" by Mary E. Thompson. It is well done and has many excellent and clear illustrations. Coin collectors will welcome a new book on the subject called "Coin Collector's Handbook." It will interest the initiate.

Travel books are always popular, especially when they deal with exotic countries. "Kings and Camels" by Grant C. Butler is an account of the experiences of an American in Saudi Arabia. It is a colorful and interesting account of life in a turbulent and strange land. Our neighbor to the North is a very interesting country and a complete history of Canada is a welcome addition to our subject collection. Is is called simple "Canada" and was written by John B. Brebner. Books about Alaska are also very popular this year. The latest one is the life story of Sheldon Jackson, who did so much to bring Christianity to this country.

A great many of the books we add each week are memorial books and we are always happy to have them, for we desperately need more books, especially since we are preparing a book collection for the Anna Meyer Branch, which is to be opened in the early fall. Please remember the Library, when next you wish to honor a departed friend or relative.

6. BURNING BRIDGES, Jack Scott
7. PAPER ROSES, ANITA Bryant

Boyhood Book Makes For Top Reading

Three Circles of Light, by Pietro di Donato (Messner): A novel based on the author's boyhood in West Hoboken, N. J., before World War I shook the world out of a post-Victorian pattern that can never return. The characters are mainly immigrants or children of immigrants from Vasta, Italy, who had brought their religion, superstitions, customs and culture to "the America" intact. The growing boy takes part in his teeming world of parents, uncles, aunts and other relatives and their emotion - charged lives not realizing that he is growing up and away from it all — until the death of his father and a visit to the neighborhood witch brings a sudden end to innocence and a beginning of maturity. Donato draws his pictures with uncanny skill and economy.

Abraham Lincoln was rather informal about writing his bank checks. In 1860 he wrote one signed "A. Lincoln." It was for $3 and was made payable to "Mr. Johns (a sick man)."

Coexistence As The Reds Appear To Recognize It

THE GREAT CONTEST: Russia and the West. By Isaac Deutscher. Oxford. $2.75.

Western statesmen might profit from paying closer attention to the Communists tortured explanations of what they contend will be the inevitable course of history. In these exercises in deliberately clouded prose lie the hopes and fears of Communits policy.

What, for example, do the Communists mean by peaceful coexistence? Isaac Deutscher, author of many competent studies of Russian affairs, poses this question in his new book. He sees peaceful coexistence, from the Soviet standpoint, as an enormous challenge to the West, whose economic leaders all too often view armaments as a stimulus to economic growth, while, Deutscher adds, "The East recognizes it for what it is — the irrational waste of immense resources and energies."

"The effective Western answer to the Soviet challenge can lie only in a genuine demonstration of superior efficiency, that is, of the West's ability to secure, without the 'help' of armament, full employment and continuously rising standards of living, and to secure these while preserving and enlarging his heritage of political freedom."

Deutscher sees peaceful co - existence, too, as a policy having an immense effect upon prime Communist targets: The underdeveloped nations. People in those countries have watched the development of Russia from a backward country to the second most powerful nation in the world, with well - supported ambitions to be the first.

"They may not be aware of the price in suffering and oppression the Russians have paid for their ascendancy," Deutscher writes. "But even if they are aware of it, they have ground for hope that they, themselves, would not need to pay in full the price that Russia as the pioneer in socialization and planning had to pay. And to people without the tradition of bourgeois democracy, the price may not seem at all prohibitive."

Deutscher, whose book is made of lectures delivered in Canada last fall, refers frequently to the underdeveloped nations as they figure in Moscow's plans. He finds deep meaning in the recent revisions of Marxist dogma regarding the possibility of "peaceful transition" from capitalism to a dictatorship of the proletariat. In effect, he says, Khrushchev is telling the Communists in those countries:

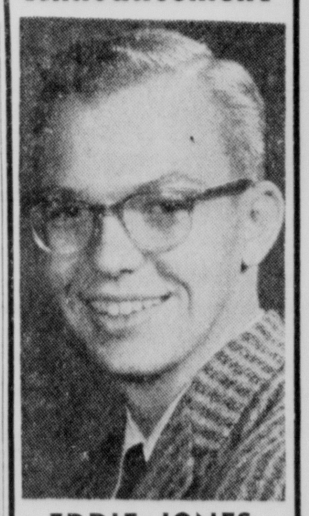

"There is no need for you to engage immediately in any decisive struggle for power. Wait until we have created conditions in which you will be able to resume the struggle for power without the least danger and risk to yourselves and ourselves, conditions in which your victory will be assured."'

That, in the view of Deutscher and many other students of Soviet policies, is the essence of peaceful coexistence as the Russians see it eventual worldwide victory without risk of self - destruction.

1908 Denver Meet Was Demos' Best

By BASCOM N. TIMMONS
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, D. C. — History has not exalted it as one of the most notable of our quadrennial major party conclaves. Even I have seen some that outshone it. But if I ever start forgetting national political conventions I think the last one I will ever forget was the one held by the Democrats at Denver in 1908.

I was 18 years old and was covering the first of 27 consecutive national political conventions, which through 1956 have run 13 Democratic, 12 Republican, a Theodore Roosevelt Bull Moose and a LaFollette Progressive.

At Denver I saw William Jennings Bryan nominated for the third time. I watched the party's most famed warhorses in action. But the one thing I saw which is most indelibly engraved in memory was a sightless man, afterwards famous in American politics, but then attending his first national convention. He stood before an immense throng of people and set off the most thrilling single episode I have ever seen in any national political convention.

The blind man was United States Senator Thomas Pryor Gore of Oklahoma, just then the newest star in the sisterhood of States and thus represented for the first time in a national convention. In reality Oklahoma was so lately admitted to the Union that a convention rollcall clerk called out "Indian Territory," only to get a response, "She's married now."

That is what had happened, for Indian Territory and Oklahoma Territory together had come into the Union as Oklahoma.

To understand how one man with one word, uttered almost casually it seemed, set off one of the most remarkable scenes in the annals of national party conventions it is necessary to recapture the situation that then existed.

It was no certainty that Bryan would be given his third nomination when delegates began to gather in Denver on July 4, 1908. He had twice been nominated and twice defeated — in 1896 and 1900. In 1904 Judge Alton B. Parker of New York had been nominated by the Democrats and defeated by Theodore Roosevelt in November. Now at Denver in 1908 thousands of telegrams were coming in entreating the delegates not to invite defeat by nominating Bryan again.

Under consideration in 1908 in addition to Bryan were Governor John A. Johnson of Minnesota and Judge George Gray of Delaware. Johnson's vociferous supporters were making the claim that Johnson could carry all the states Bryan could and get an additional 100 electoral votes from States that Bryan never had and never would carry. These glibly promised electoral votes were from Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, and some eastern States.

The Gray supporters were conservatives, mostly from eastern States, but with some Southern strength. Two weeks before Secretary of War William Howard Taft had been nominated by the Republicans at Chicago — a nomination forced by President Theodore Roosevelt.

Oklahoma, as the newest in the constellation of States, was being accorded deluxe attention by the party bigwigs at Denver. Its first Governor, Charles N. Haskell, was chairman of the Platform and Resolutions Committee. Its senior United States Senator, Robert L. Owen, had a big hand among the kingmakers. Five hundred Oklahomans, with a half dozen brass bands, swarmed into town.

Junior United States Senator Thomas Pryor Gore was the only man from Oklahoma who seemed to be ignored at Denver. A Mississippian and blind from childhood, he had lived for a while in Texas and was an unsuccessful candidate for Congress from that State on the Populist ticket. He moved to Lawton, Oklahoma, in 1901 and had an active part in the Statehood efforts.

In the parcelling out of offices for the new State Gore was disregarded. One Senatorial nomination was handed to Robert L. Owen. Two millionaires were designated to contest for the other. Gore mortgaged his home to raise $1,000, made it a threesome and won. His term was the short one and the ruling Oklahoma powers hoped to defeat him for re-election.

His great opportunity came on July 8, just after noon. The Credentials Committee was conducting a hearing, which was to result in the unseating of Col. Joseph M. Guffey of Pennsylvania who had been a powerful party figure.

With nothing to do until the committee reported the convention marked time for awhile. Weary of the idling the crowd began calling for speeches. It yelled for Governor Joseph W. Folk of Missouri. Folk was not present. It demanded Governor Robert L. "Piddling Bob" Taylor of Tennessee. Neither was he in the hall, nor was Mayor Tom Johnson of Cleveland.

There was a call for "Oklahoma Owen." Owen was at a luncheon, in honor of Bryan's daughter, Mrs. Ruth Bryan Leavitt, at the Brown Palace Hotel.

Some one shouted for Gore. The temporary chairman was Theodore A. Bell, a tall, black-[illegible] Congressman from California. Bell stood on the platform, wearing a long frock coat over striped trousers, a fashionable high collar turned over at the corners and a somber black ascot tie.

Bell may have looked like a parson instead of a politician, but he knew the score. Gore was a lover in Oklahoma. Therefore, the chairman had difficulty hearing the call. When the clamor grew so insistent he could no longer ignore it Bell beckoned to Gore, who was sitting with his comely wife in the gallery just back of the platform. Mrs. Gore led her blind husband forward.

Gore seemed modest and diffident, but it soon became evident that he had a voice which rolled to the farthest corners of the Auditorium, its tonal qualities hardly inferior to Bryan's own matchless silver ones. Gore knew that national convention delegates dote on familiar platitudes.

In the time - yellowed "proceedings" of the Denver Convention this is the way the first part of the Gore speech was recorded:

"Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, and fellow Democrats of this convention and of the United States: Oklahoma rejoices to make her debut, to have her coming out, under circumstances so auspicious (Applause). Oklahoma rejoices in the privilege of putting on long dresses and of eating at the first table with the grown folks (Applause and Laughter). Oklahoma, confidentially, would rather be on the inside looking out than on the outside looking in. (Laughter)

"Oklahoma brings greetings and good cheer to her elders in this splendid Union. I come to you, my fellow Democrats, not only from the youngest state, but I come from the most Democratic state in this mighty Republic (Applause). I come to you from a state where Democracy is a fact and not a figure of speech (Applause). I come to you from a state where the principles of Jeffersonian Democracy have been written into the fundamental law of the land (Applause). It is true that the President of the United States said that his opinion of our Constitution was not fit for publication. That, however, is true of a great many opinions of the President of this country (Laughter).

"My fellow Democrats, the great Secretary of War waged war against our Constitution. He came to Oklahoma and told us to do what liberty - loving freemen, what the Anglo - Saxon race has never done reject the opportunity for self - government when the opportunity is presented (Applause). But the greatest living apostle of human liberty came to Oklahoma and advised us to avail ourselves of the opportunity to secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and to our posterity (Applause), and with a majority of more than 100,000 Oklahomans rejected the advice of Taft and accepted the advice of Bryan."

That was the word that did it —"Bryan."

It was 1:19 (Denver time) in the afternoon of July 8. "Bedlam reigned" said the newspapers reporting it, and up to June, 1960, no better word to describe the scene has come into usage. Mere dementia was quickly followed by acute dementia.

The parade of the State banners began. Ordinarily calm Massachusetts was first in line, waving its standard crazily. Then North Carolina, Nebraska, Texas, Mississippi, Oklahoma, until 41 of the 46 states were marching. Only Minnesota, New York, Deleware, New Jersey, and Georgia held out.

Mrs. Mary C. C. Bradford of Colorado, who the press section was informed was the first woman delegate ever elected to a national political convention, carried her Colorado standard to the platform. Chairman Bell hoisted her to a chair. Flushed and excited she stood there in a white dress, a beautiful picture.

A tall man with a big moustache broke out of the Texas group in the front row of delegate seats, vaulted to the platform and was yelling "Bryan! Bryan! Bryan!"

My seat mate, a Milwaukee editor named Henry Campbell, confided to me that he didn't believe a giant standing on Pike's Peak with the biggest megaphone in the world could make more noise than the Texan was making. (The megaphone in that year was the ultimate contrivance for making the voice carry.)

Most of the time the band was playing "Dixie," the tune that could always call forth the greatest cheering at a Democratic convention until the last few. (Bulletin: "Dixie" won't be played much at Los Angeles.)

At intervals the band would swing into "Maryland, My Maryland." Perhaps some Bryanite had bribed the band which now began to play "Tammany," hoping to get New York into the hysteria. It failed. An outsider tried to grab the New York banner. Some one knocked him down. We were told the blow was delivered by Charles White, the ex-prize fighter.

Perhaps "Big Tim" cogitated that the same sort of person who had tried to snatch the New York banner might want to purloin that hat and he was taking no chances.

All around Murphy were the Sachems and Braves of Tammany Hall, whom Murphy had brought across the prairies and through the mountains to a point further west of their 14th Street wigwam than most of them had ever been. And scattered around in the New York seats were the likes of Bird S. Coler, Martin Littleton, "Blue-eyed Billy" Sheehan, Bourke Cockran, Charles T. Towne and Judge Alton B. Parker, "the sage of Esopus."

Parked at the Shirley Arms Hotel was the shipment of silk hats, which the Tammany Indians had brought along to wear in a George Gray parade, which it was becoming more evident by the minute would never come off.

Three - quarters of an hour had gone by and the din was increasing. A Massachusetts contingent brushed aside the guards and stormed through the press section, one delegate yelling so loudly that his upper false teeth flew out. (Dentists do a better job now.) The teeth hit the writing stand of Samuel G. Blythe of the New York World and went ricocheting under a seat. The delegate, in hot pursuit, was down on his hands and knees, retrieved the denture and rejoined his noisy cohorts.

Jim Dahlman, the cowboy mayor Omaha, was on the platform now, a rope in hand. As the Nebraska delegation came by he dropped a lasso over the shoulders of a pretty Cornhusker maiden and she was lifted to the stand.

Another mighty roar and the word ran through the hall that Bryan had entered. It was false. Bryan was at Fairview, his country place near Lincoln.

Josiah Marvel of Wilmington, manager of the Gray forces, and Frederick B. Lynch of St. Paul, who had a similar role for Johnson, sat glumly beside the Delaware and Minnesota banners which had remained firmly in their sockets. A convention was being stampeded before it was even organized for business.

An hour had gone by and the official band had thumped out all its repertoire, save one. That one was banned. It was "Waltz Me Around Again, Willie," which was Blnache Ring's hit song in the musical comedy Miss Dolly Dollars. Only in 1908 were there two Presidential nominees with the same first name and "Waltz Me Around Again, Willie" had been the Taft theme song at the Republican convention.

At first only delegates had paraded. Now there were Uncompaghe Indians, Cripple Creek Miners, North Dakota cowboys, Wyoming cowgirls, and Kentucky Colonels. Although it was out-of-bounds for all except delegates nearly everybody in the hall, including this writer, had been on the platform by now.

In all the shrieking din one man stood silently and rooted to the same spot. It was the blind Senator who was responsible for it. To protect him from the jostling platform invaders Chairman Bell stood beside him for a few minutes. Then Mrs. Gore came forward and took his arm.

There had been everything in that parade except Bryan posters and placards. The turbulent event had come unexpectedly, and at a time the Bryan people themselves would not have chosen. I have seen innumerable pumped - up demonstrations since but don't tell any graybeard who was at Denver in July, 1908, that the one there was not the genuine article.

At 2:46 p.m., after 1 hour and 27 minutes, Chairman Bell had restored order. Gore whose speech had been interrupted when he told how Oklahoma has followed Bryan's advice, now finished in a sentence:

"My countrymen, to the others of the older States in this self-governing Republic. Oklahoma has but this to say: "Go thou, and do likewise." "

The next day came the nominating speeches and another Gore nifty in a Bryan seconding speech: "Louis XVI said: 'I am the State." Theodore Roosevelt goes him forty-five better and said: "I am the United States'."

At 3:40 a.m., July 10, portly Chairman Henry D. Clayton of Alabama, the man who was later to write an anti-trust law, declared William Jennings Bryan the Presidential nominee. On the one roll call he had received the votes of 892½ of the 1008 delegates. Gray had received 59½ and Johnson, 46.

There are other vivid memories of that Denver convention:

Tom Taggert of Indiana, who as Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, opened the convention. Bryan had called Tom Taggert "a political train robber," and I thought this Hoosier must be a loathsome creature, indeed. Later Taggert was to become my friend and remained so for life. And I learned to make my own judgement of men.

The beards and handlebar moustaches of many of the delegates, with the luminous beard of J. Ham Lewis of Illinois drawing especial notice. Then there was the glory of the Lewis' wearing apparel — a suit of vivid gray, pearl spats over black high-button shoes, a waistcoast to match the spts and a red tie. They nominated John W. Kern of Indiana, a man with a most elegant beard, to be Bryan's Vice Presidential ticket mate.

The party wheel horses: The inseparable Ollie James of Kentucky and Tom Heflin of Alabama; Senator Charles A. Culberson of Texas; Roger Sullivan of Illinois; Governor George W. Peck of Wisconsin, author of "Peck's Bad Boy;" William J. "Gum Shoe Bill" Stone, Champ Clark and James A. Reed from Missouri, Governor Newton C. Blanchard of Louisiana, and Irving Handy of Delaware.

The woman suffragist paraders and the short shrift they got from the Platform Committee. The interview with Mrs. Haskell, the wife of the Oklahoma Governor who was the committee chairman, and Mrs. Haskell saying: "I don't believe in woman suffrage and we won't have it in Oklahoma. We have fixed that in our Constitution which bars women from voting."

Richmond Pearson Hobson, the hero of the Merrimac in the Spanish - American War, predicting a war with Japan. (It did not come for 3 years.)

Colonel George Harvey, editor of Harper's Weekly, and the brisk Southern editors, Josephus Daniels of North Carolina, Robert Ewing of Louisiana and Clark Howell of Georgia. Being told the Marse Henry Watterson of Kentucky had cancelled his intended visit to Denver because of the illness and death of his friend Murat Halstead of Cincinnati.

Ned McLean, son of John R. McLean of the Cincinnati Enquirer and the Washington Post, who spent part of the time in the press section, part of it in the gallery, part in a special railway car and part at Wolhurst, the home of Thomas F. Walsh, the miner who had struck it rich.

Ned McLean's engagement to Evelyn Walsh, the miner's daughter, had been announced that week. The special railway car was strictly Republican. It belonged to Mrs. Medill McCormick, the daughter of Mark Hanna. Her guests were a young Republican Congressman from Ohio, Nicholas Longworth, and his wife, who was the daughter of the Redoubtable Teddy and had been the Princess Alice of the White House. Alice Longworth missed few of the Democratic daily sessions at Denver.

The strangely named delegates Hinky Dink Kenna and Bathhouse John Coughlin from Chicago's First Ward and Fingy Connors from Buffalo.

The quartet from San Francisco which at all hours of the night sang the new "Sweet Adeline" down he corridor in the Brown Palace Hotel and the quartet from Lincoln, Nebraska, down the corridor the other way, singing "Sweet Genevieve," which was somewhat older, and was supposed to be a Bryan favorite.

And I remember that Oklahoman who kept saying that he was going to carry the Oklahoma standard which had stood in the convention hall down Pennsylvania avenue in Washington at the head of the Bryan parade come March 4, 1909. His name was Sidney Suggs and his home was in Ardmore.

Perhaps it was just as well for his comfort that Sidney Suggs did not have to go to Washington for the inaugural parade. That March 4, 1909, when William Howard Taft was installed as President was the snowiest, slushiest, day of all time. Telegraph wires were down, and it was next day before the nation knew whether Taft had been inaugurated or not.

Ignorant Armies Listed Among The Recent Top Works

The Ignorant Armies, by E. M. Halliday (Harper): A report on one of the 20th Century's greatest missed opportunities — the failure of the Allies to smash Russia's year-old Soviet regime in the summer and early fall of 1918. There were sizable Russian anti-Communist armies in the field at the time, and it seems possible that a resolute Allied force might have wrecked the Soviet system before it got well started. At is was, only about 15,000 men were sent to Murmansk and Archangel in 1918, and their orders were contradictory. Even this small force inflicted some stinging defeats on the armed rabble that was all the Reds had initially. Winston Churchill, then Britain's war secretary, and Maj. Gen. Edmund Ironside, the Allied field commander, never doubted that "strangling bolshevism at birth would have been an untold blessing to the human race." (Churchill's words). Arrayed against them were President Woodrow Wilson and Prime Minister David Lloyd George. Wilson doomed the campaign by ordering the withdrawal of the U. S. Infantry regiment which was the force's combat spearhead. This book is the product of extensive research by Halliday.

The Night They Raided Minsky's Excellent Book

The Night They Raided Minsky's, by Rowland Barber (Simon & Schuster): An account of a notable day in the history of Minksy's National Winter Garden Theater combined with a history of the Minsky family and of the art form of which they became the most noted exponents — the burlesque show. As the reader moves steadily towards the raid he knows is coming, he moves also through a review of the whole range of popular entertainment on New York's Lower East Side in the early 20th Century. Burlesque had always been a rowdy form of entertainment, but the form in which it existed at the time when it was banned in New York City was a relatively new departure. There are plenty of real people in this book (including pioneer Communist Leon Trotsky, oddly enough). There also are some who are presumably apocryphal — but fact here shades so delicately off into fiction that it is not always easy to tell where the dividing line is. But it is not a book meant to be analyzed. Just read it for pleasure and enjoy its construction of a gritty, vital type of entertainment that was part and parcel of the pre - Depression American scene.

Before starting an out - door meal, fill a toy water pistol with water. It will come in handy in putting out unwanted flames from dripping juices.

A Light That Never Dims — Times Square

CARNIVAL CROSSROADS: The Story of Times Square. By W. G. Rogers and Mildred Weston. Doubleday. $3.50.

Most looked-at but overlooked of New York tourist spectacles is the frantic triangle that begins where Broadway crosses 42nd Street. For a good half-century, everybody has been rushing there but only occasionally has anyone paused long enough to pen a memo on some part of its mammoth confusion.

Now for this first time, a full kaleidoscope of the contrary, pell-mell place is assembled between book covers. The authors call their aim evocative rather than minutely historic. The result is swift, lively fascinating.

The penning pair — Rogers, arts editor of The Associated Press, and Mildred Weston, his wife — are frequent obligatory visitors. The pursuit of higher culture takes one straight through the Times Square hurly-burly, for one main haven of art, the Metropolitan Opera House, is just south of the frenzy zone, and another, Carnegie Hall, is tucked just north.

Digging beneath the present glitter, "Carnival Crossroads" traces back to the long ago (ragged Continentals fired muskets there), rounds up main events as the place volved into the spirit and being of show world's Great White Way.

Dark and bright, blatant and brilliant, sublime and ridiculous — all are represented. Without overwhelming detail, the short volume well tabs the spirit of Times Square for veteran denizen or casual visitor.

Guide To Good Reading

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

The long hot days of summer bring more and more people to the Library. Many people have extra time for reading in the summer and we are exerting every effort to supply the public with the books they want. During the past week a number of new books arrived at the Library. Some will appeal to one group of readers and the others to other readers, but each book will find it's proper place.

Let's first take a look at the new books of fiction. Since the admission of Hawaii as the fiftieth state of our union, there have been a number of books written about this beautiful country. The latest one is "Diamond Head" by Peter Gilman. The author is a newspaperman who knows and loves the islands. He has included so many different angles in the story, that the reader may choose to view it in a variety of ways. It is first of all a novel, but it includes a great deal of historical background also. It is not as good book as James Michener's "Hawaii", but it is easier reading. Either of these books gives a very good picture of life in the islands. A new historical novel is "The Last Gentleman" by Shirley Barker. This is a warm story and she presents an interesting period of the history of our country. The setting is New Hampshire and the time is the years just before the Revolution. It is a story of confused loyalties, but the spirit of the times and the way of life in a young nation, emerge clearly.

A new book by Frank G. Slaughter is always eagerly received and there are many readers who will welcome his "Pilgrims in Paradise." It has it's setting on an island of the Bahamas, early in the 17th century. It is a story of two brothers and their many conflicts over many things, including the woman whom they both loved. Two excellent new mystery stories are among this weeks addition. They are "Death Wish Green" by Frances Crane and "The Case of the Duplicate Daughter" by Erle Stanley Gardner. Sometimes I wonder how he writes them so fast.

In this election year many people will want to read "Mr. Citizen" written by Ex - President Harry S. Truman. It is an account of the years since he left office. He takes up many of the problems which beset a former President. He is not literary genius, but his integrity and sincerity come through his writing. A book of reminiscences, which makes good reading is "This was Hollywood" by Beth Day. She looks back with nostalgia to the Hollywood of the 1930's and 1940's, but many people prefer life in the movie colony as it is today. "Dynasty" by Thomas Martin is an account of the Long family of Louisiana. It will interest many people in this area and adds new material to the account in "Longs of Louisiana" by Stan Opotowsky, which appeared in March.

"The Way Things Are" by Percy W. Bridgam is an interesting account of the philosophy of science. It is beautifully written and will appeal to the serious reader. A perfectly beautiful book is "Gemstones of North America" written by John Sinkankas. It is profusely illustrated and is a beautiful and permanent addition to the Library Collection. The Library never has enough books on the subject of flower arrangement. The latest is "The Driftwood Book" by Mary E. Thompson. It is well done and has many excellent and clear illustrations. Coin collectors will welcome a new book on the subject called "Coin Collector's Handbook." It will interest the initiate.

Travel books are always popular, especially when they deal with exotic countries. "Kings and Camels" by Grant C. Butler is an account of the experiences of an American in Saudi Arabia. It is a colorful and interesting account of life in a turbulent and strange land. Our neighbor to the North is a very interesting country and a complete history of Canada is a welcome addition to our subject collection. Is is called simple "Canada" and was written by John B. Brebner. Books about Alaska are also very popular this year. The latest one is is the life story of Sheldon Jackson, who did so much to bring Christianity to this country.

A great many of the books we add each week are memorial books and we are always happy to have them, for we desperately need more books, especially since we are preparing a book collection for the Anna Meyer Branch, which is to be opened in the early fall. Please remember the Library, when next you wish to honor a departed friend or relative.

Boyhood Book Makes For Top Reading

Three Circles of Light, by Pietro di Donato (Messner): A novel based on the author's boyhood in West Hoboken, N. J., before World War I shook the world out of a post-Victorian pattern that can never return. The characters are mainly immigrants or children of immigrants from Vasta, Italy, who had brought their religion, superstitions, customs and culture to "the America" intact. The growing boy takes part in his teeming world of parents, uncles, aunts and other relatives and their emotion - charged lives not realizing that he is growing up and away from it all — until the death of his father and a visit to the neighborhood witch brings a sudden end to innocence and a beginning of maturity. Donato draws his pictures with uncanny skill and economy.

Abraham Lincoln was rather informal about writing his bank checks. In 1860 he wrote one signed "A. Lincoln." It was for $3 and was made payable to "Mr. Johns (a sick man)."

Coexistence As The Reds Appear To Recognize It

THE GREAT CONTEST: Russia and the West. By Isaac Deutscher. Oxford. $2.75.

Western statesmen might profit from paying closer attention to the Communists tortured explanations of what they contend will be the inevitable course of history. In these exercises in deliberately clouded prose lie the hopes and fears of Communits policy.

What, for example, do the Communists mean by peaceful coexistence? Isaac Deutscher, author of many competent studies of Russian affairs, poses this question in his new book. He sees peaceful coexistence, from the Soviet standpoint, as an enormous challenge to the West, whose economic leaders all too often view armaments as a stimulus to economic growth, while, Deutscher adds, "The East recognizes it for what it is — the irrational waste of immense resources and energies."

"The effective Western answer to the Soviet challenge can lie only in a genuine demonstration of superior efficiency, that is, of the West's ability to secure, without the 'help' of armament, full employment and continuously rising standards of living, and to secure these while preserving and enlarging his heritage of political freedom."

Deutscher sees peaceful co - existence, too, as a policy having an immense effect upon prime Communist targets: The underdeveloped nations. People in those countries have watched the development of Russia from a backward country to the second most powerful nation in the world, with well - supported ambitions to be the first.

"They may not be aware of the price in suffering and oppression the Russians have paid for their ascendancy," Deutscher writes. "But even if they are aware of it, they have ground for hope that they, themselves, would not need to pay in full the price that Russia as the pioneer in socialization and planning had to pay. And to people without the tradition of bourgeois democracy, the price may not seem at all prohibitive."

Deutscher, whose book is made of lectures delivered in Canada last fall, refers frequently to the underdeveloped nations as they figure in Moscow's plans. He finds deep meaning in the recent revisions of Marxist dogma regarding the possibility of "peaceful transition" from capitalism to a dictatorship of the proletariat. In effect, he says, Khrushchev is telling the Communists in those countries:

"There is no need for you to engage immediately in any decisive struggle for power. Wait until we have created conditions in which you will be able to resume the struggle for power without the least danger and risk to yourselves and ourselves, conditions in which your victory will be assured.'"

That, in the view of Deutscher and many other students of Soviet policies, is the essence of peaceful coexistence as the Russians see it eventual worldwide victory without risk of self - destruction.

Investigators at the scene said the child suffered from cuts and bruises while Mrs. Ruggs had no evident injuries, but complained of pains. Neither was believed seriously injured.

Their truck was knocked approximately 15 feet from where it had been parked on the side of the street when an auto driven by Robert S. Witt, 24, 115 Malvern St., Monroe struck it from the rear, police said.

They concluded that reasonably stable prices are possible in a period of dynamic growth and low unemployment. But, if we are ever to reach this goal, all of us must strive together to assure a steady rise in productivity.

IN QUEST FOR NOMINATION

News Is Good For Kennedy

By J. W. DAVIS

WASHINGTON (AP) — From coast to coast, the news was good this week for Sen. John F. Kennedy in his quest for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Still, none of his rivals showed the slightest sign of giving up.

Some supporters of the Massachusetts senator were talking of a first ballot nomination for him a little over two weeks from now at Los Angeles.

Among the opposition, the no-surrender stand was expressed most pungently by former President Harry S. Truman, a supporter of Sen. Stuart Symington of Missouri.

"I am for Stu," Truman declared, "and I am going to be for him until the last dog dies."

Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas shrugged off the news that Kennedy had landed 91½ of New York's 114 nominating votes.

"I don't go around counting Delegates," Johnson said, disparagingly.

James Doyle, a Wisconsin Democrat setting up a national organization to win the nomination for Adlai E. Stevenson, said the Kennedy claims were badly inflated.

Doyle made one statement nobody would challenge:

"Gov. Stevenson's strength on the initial ballots will not be of massive proportions."

Kennedy's capture of the great bulk of New York's delegates had been forecast, most recently in the announcement three days earlier by Mayor Robert F. Wagner of New York City: "I am supporting Kennedy."

This would indicate that Wagner believes Kennedy has the nomination just about sewed up.

The mayor had hoped for the vice presidential nomination and that's out of the question now, since the man he's backing for No. 1 is, like himself, an Easterner and a Roman Catholic.

Counting 91½ votes from New York, The Associated Press Tally showed this division: Kennedy 523, Johnson 204½, Symington 73½, Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota 53½, Stevenson 33½, favorite sons 205 and uncommitted 357. A total of 761 is needed to nominate.

These are bedrock figures — not claims or wishful thinking — and are based on primary results, state convention actions and polls of delegates as to their preference.

If Johnson does not go around counting delegates, he has someone who does.

The Johnson camp put out a tabulation saying that on the first ballot Kennedy will be only 100½ votes ahead of their man, 602½ to 502.

Gov. G. Mennen Williams of Michigan took with him to the annual governors conference, in Montana this year, a state-by-state listing claiming Kennedy can expect 789 votes on the first ballot.

WITH NIXON

Rockefeller Steps Up War Of Words

NEW YORK (AP)—Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller Saturday stepped up his war of words with Vice President Richard M. Nixon in their debate over the nation's economic policies and what Nixon calls the game of "growthmanship."

Rockefeller, attending a governors' conference in Montana, said in a statement issued here that America's future economic growth rate is of paramount importance. "This issue," he said, "therefore must not be confused."

"Too much is at stake," he added. "Public understanding is essential. To muddy the waters is to do the nation a disservice."

Although not mentioning the vice president by name, Rockefeller apparently referred to a recent Nixon barb. Nixon accused critics of the administration of making false comparisons between the economies of the United States and the Soviet Union.

These critics, said Nixon, had invited the administration to join them "in playing what is rapidly becoming the most fashionable political game of our time—a game we might call growthmanship."

The governor had countered that the nation's economic growth was "far more important than a parlor game."

Rockefeller amplified his economic views Saturday with this statement:

"Accelerated economic growth is essential to meet the growing national security needs, to provide increasing job opportunities and to achieve a rising standard of living for every American. . .

"It cannot be obtained by programs of lavish government spending and controls. It can be obtained by encouraging an accelerated rate of capital investment by private enterprise in new and more efficient plants and machinery through changes in the federal and state tax structures and through cooperation on the part of local communities."

The Rockefeller-Nixon debate flared open June 8 when the governor demanded that Nixon outline his views on major issues. The vice president, who has supported the Eisenhower administration on foreign policy, said his stand was a matter of record.

Nixon, outlining his own economic credo in St. Louis last Tuesday, said administration critics contend that the Soviets are growing at a rate of 8 per cent a year compared with "our own long-term economic growth which has been running about 3 per cent and now appears to be accelerating toward 4 per cent."

Nixon pointed out that the critics wanted the rate of growth stepped up to 5 or 6 per cent. These were the same figures used by Rockefeller in his June 8 manifesto.

Castro's Enemies Plotting

HAVANA (UPI) — Enemies of the Fidel Castro regime have launched a major campaign of sabotage against rail communications in Eastern Cuba, it was reported Saturday.

Reports from the interior said a wave of "inspired accidents" has broken out in the provinces of Oriente, Camaguey and Las Villas.

News of the open anti-Castro activity in the interior coincided with a bitter internal debate in the bicentennial University of Havana over radical students' demands for the ouster of virtually the entire faculty of the school of engineering on grounds of counter-revolutionary thinking.

It followed Castro's television warning Friday night that any U.S. action to cut Cuba's sugar quota in that country would mean the seizure of an estimated 700 million dollars in American assets here.

Castro pledged an eye-for-an-eye and tooth-for-a-tooth economy policy against any "economic aggression" by the United States against his regime. If President Eisenhower is authorized by Congress to reduce the Cuban sugar quota in the American market, Castro said, the president of Cuba will similarly be authorized to arbitrarily decree the expropriation of U.S. properties here.

Castro called U.S. State Secretary Christian A. Herter "a liar" for saying Cuba faced sugar production losses and was greeted by thunderous applause from the studio audience when he repeated Soviet Premier Nikita Khruschev's comment that it was fortunate the United States would have a new administration next year.

The new anti-Castro activity in the Cuban interior was cited by private sources who related major sabotage against rail communications over a wide area in the span of a single week.

The main track was sabotaged in Camaguey, a bridge burned on the main line of the northern railway in Las Villas and plates were removed from the main line of the Cuba railroad company near San Luis in Oriente, the reports said.

Doctor Says Driving Leads To Heart Ills

BOISE, Idaho (AP)—The doctor says driving all day makes a man's heart sluggish and causes "little strokes and heart attacks" which in turn cause accidents.

"Get out every hour and walk around the car," says Dr. Richard G. Kloss of the Veterans Administration hospital in Boise. "And take a few sitting up exercises."

So Idaho state police are going to stop motorists on long stretches.

"We will ask the driver how long it has been since he's been out of the car and how far he intends to go before he has rest," state police Supt. A. E. Perkins said Saturday.

"If it's been quite a while, we'll advise him to pull over and rest."

Idaho is especially concerned about one-car accidents. This year the rate of fatal one-car accidents has doubled, as compared to last year.

Dr. Kloss says lack of exercise while driving cuts down the essential oxygen supply to the brain by reducing the output of the heart.

Backlog

HAVANA (AP) — The backlog of Cuban applicants for tourist and residence visas to the United States has been increasing steadily during the past six months. Tourist applicants now must wait until at least January, 1961.

Doctor Sure Enough Had Car Trouble

"Yes," answered McNamara, "I suppose that's a fair statement."

The engine of McNamara's car had caught fire on Chicago's South Shore Drive, badly damaging the car and tying up rush hour traffic for miles. Coast Guardsmen put out the blaze.

U.S. Attacks By Castro Follow Reds'

HAVANA (AP)—Fidel Castro's new attacks on the United States seem to follow almost line by line the critical words of Soviet Premier Khrushchev.

The bearded Cuban Prime Minister went far back into history to open his blast Friday night, accusing the United States of having no justification of any sort for dropping atomic bombs on two Japanese cities in World War II.

"Humanity has never witnessed a worse massacre than those at Hiroshima and Nagasaki," said Castro in a TV broadcast, his eighth public address in the last 20 days.

Then he went on to echo Khrushchev's denunciation of the U2 spy plane, Eisenhower's ill-fated plan for a visit to Japan, the fall of pro-American governments in South Korea and Turkey, and the assertion that the United States is governed today by a military oligarchy.

Persons who studied Castro's words carefully said his latest speech convinced them:

1. Castro will not wait for a reduction of Cuba's sugar quota to the United States to carry out his threat to seize U. S. property in Cuba. They expressed the belief he will make that move as soon as the U. S. Congress authorizes the President to reduce sugar quotas in "the national interest of the United States."

2. Personal pride, plus the problem of finding storage space for Soviet crude oil now following into Cuba, will force Castro to act—probably before the end of June—against the foreign oil companies who rejected his orders to process the Soviet oil.

3. That there is no apparent hope—short of American surrender to Castro and his Soviet-oriented program—of an improvement in relations between Cuba and the United States. Many sources here say a complete break in relations, only a slight possibility a month ago, is now a possibility.

The mission is being sent in response to invitations from the Czech government and from U.A.R. President Gamal Abdel Nasser, Fidel Castro told his TV audience.

Dividing the rental spaces will be double stud partitions with masonry exterior on back and side walls, he concluded.

Castro's Enemies Plotting

HAVANA (UPI) — Enemies of the Fidel Castro regime have launched a major campaign of sabotage against rail communications in Eastern Cuba, it was reported Saturday.

Reports from the interior said a wave of "inspired accidents" has broken out in the provinces of Oriente, Camaguey and Las Villas.

News of the open anti-Castro activity in the interior coincided with a bitter internal debate in the bicentennial University of Havana over radical students' demands for the ouster of virtually the entire faculty of the school of engineering on grounds of counter-revolutionary thinking.

It followed Castro's television warning Friday night that any U.S. action to cut Cuba's sugar quota in that country would mean the seizure of an estimated 700 million dollars in American assets here.

Castro pledged an eye-for-an-eye and tooth-for-a-tooth economy policy against any "economic aggression" by the United States against his regime. If President Eisenhower is authorized by Congress to reduce the Cuban sugar quota in the American market, Castro said, the president of Cuba will similarly be authorized to arbitrarily decree the expropriation of U.S. properties here.

Castro called U.S. State Secretary Christian A. Herter "a liar" for saying Cuba faced sugar production losses and was greeted by thunderous applause from the studio audience when he repeated Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's comment that it was fortunate the United States would have a new administration next year.

The new anti-Castro activity in the Cuban interior was cited by private sources who related major sabotage against rail communications over a wide area in the span of a single week.

The main track was sabotaged in Camaguey, a bridge burned on the main line of the northern railway in Las Villas and plates were removed from the main line of the Cuba railroad company near San Luis in Oriente, the reports said.

Doctor Says Driving Leads To Heart Ills

BOISE, Idaho (AP)—The doctor says driving all day makes a man's heart sluggish and causes "little strokes and heart attacks" which in turn cause accidents.

"Get out every hour and walk around the car," says Dr. Richard G. Kloss of the Veterans Administration hospital in Boise. "And take a few sitting up exercises."

So Idaho state police are going to stop motorists on long stretches.

"We will ask the driver how long it has been since he's been out of the car and how far he intends to go before he has rest," state police Supt. A. E. Perkins said Saturday.

"If it's been quite a while, we'll advise him to pull over and rest."

Idaho is especially concerned about one-car accidents. This year the rate of fatal one-car accidents has doubled, as compared to last year.

Dr. Kloss says lack of exercise while driving cuts down the essential oxygen supply to the brain by reducing the output of the heart.

Backlog

HAVANA (AP) — The backlog of Cuban applicants for tourist and residence visas to the United States has been increasing steadily during the past six months. Tourist applicants now must wait until at least January, 1961.

WITH NIXON

Rockefeller Steps Up War Of Words

NEW YORK (AP)—Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller Saturday stepped up his war of words with Vice President Richard M. Nixon in their debate over the nation's economic policies and what Nixon calls the game of "growthmanship."

Rockefeller, attending a governors' conference in Montana, said in a statement issued here that America's future economic growth rate is of paramount importance. "This issue," he said, "therefore must not be confused."

"Too much is at stake," he added. "Public understanding is essential. To muddy the waters is to do the nation a disservice."

Although not mentioning the vice president by name, Rockefeller apparently referred to a recent Nixon barb. Nixon accused critics of the administration of making false comparisons between the economies of the United States and the Soviet Union.

These critics, said Nixon, had invited the administration to join them "in playing what is rapidly becoming the most fashionable political game of our time—a game we might call growthmanship."

The governor had countered that the nation's economic growth was "far more important than a parlor game."

Rockefeller amplified his economic views Saturday with this statement:

"Accelerated economic growth is essential to meet the growing national security needs, to provide increasing job opportunities and to achieve a rising standard of living for every American. . .

"It cannot be obtained by programs of lavish government spending and controls. It can be obtained by encouraging an accelerated rate of capital investment by private enterprise in new and more efficient plants and machinery through changes in the federal and state tax structures and through cooperation on the part of local communities."

The Rockefeller-Nixon debate flared open June 8 when the governor demanded that Nixon outline his views on major issues. The vice president, who has supported the Eisenhower administration on foreign policy, said his stand was a matter of record.

Nixon, outlining his own economic credo in St. Louis last Tuesday, said administration critics contend that the Soviets are growing at a rate of 8 per cent a year compared with "our own long-term economic growth which has been running about 3 per cent and now appears to be accelerating toward 4 per cent."

Nixon pointed out that the critics wanted the rate of growth stepped up to 5 or 6 per cent. These were the same figures used by Rockefeller in his June 8 manifesto.

Doctor Sure Enough Had Car Trouble

"Yes," answered McNamara, "I suppose that's a fair statement."

The engine of McNamara's car had caught fire on Chicago's South Shore Drive, badly damaging the car and tying up rush hour traffic for miles. Coast Guardsmen put out the blaze.

For added protection when packing china and crystal for moving, dampen the excelsior. It will shape itself to each piece.

U.S. Attacks By Castro Follow Reds'

HAVANA (AP)—Fidel Castro's new attacks on the United States seem to follow almost line by line the critical words of Soviet Premier Khrushchev.

The bearded Cuban Prime Minister went far back into history to open his blast Friday night, accusing the United States of having no justification of any sort for dropping atomic bombs on two Japanese cities in World War II.

"Humanity has never witnessed a worse massacre than those at Hiroshima and Nagasaki," said Castro in a TV broadcast, his eighth public address in the last 20 days.

Then he went on to echo Khrushchev's denunciation of the U2 spy plane, Eisenhower's ill-fated plan for a visit to Japan, the fall of pro-American governments in South Korea and Turkey, and the assertion that the United States is governed today by a military oligarchy.

Persons who studied Castro's words carefully said his latest speech convinced them:

1. Castro will not wait for a reduction of Cuba's sugar quota to the United States to carry out his threat to seize U. S. property in Cuba. They expressed the belief he will make that move as soon as the U. S. Congress authorizes the President to reduce sugar quotas in "the national interest of the United States."

2. Personal pride, plus the problem of finding storage space for Soviet crude oil now following into Cuba, will force Castro to act—probably before the end of June—against the foreign oil companies who rejected his orders to process the Soviet oil.

3. That there is no apparent hope—short of American surrender to Castro and his Soviet-oriented program—of an improvement in relations between Cuba and the United States. Many sources here say a complete break in relations, only a slight possibility a month ago, is now a possibility.

The mission is being sent in response to invitations from the Czech government and from U.A.R. President Gamal Abdel Nasser, Fidel Castro told his TV audience.

Meet The Next President

Thumbnail Sketch On Presidential People

By ARTHUR EDSON

WASHINGTON (AP) -- In our long and colorful political history, it has rarely been like this.

For months presidential candidates have peddled their wares from Laconia, N.H., to Wausau, Wis., to Scapoose, Ore., doing their difficult homework for the national political conventions next month.

Traditionally the presidency sought the man. Those who yearned for it, no matter how anxiously they pulled strings privately, tried to appear aloof.

But these are more forthright times. Hardly a state has been missed, scarcely a hamlet safe from the vote hunters.

On trips adding up to thousands of miles—by plane, by bus, by car, through blizzards, in wearying heat, over icy roads, in relentless rain—this reporter has travelled with the seven men who have been most frequently mentioned for the presidency.

I've listened to scores of speeches, heard the candidates field questions by the hundreds, watched how they reacted to innumerable situations, including the ludicrous, and talked privately with most of them.

Except for a bad case of calloused eardrums, it was a rewarding enjoyable experience. Politicians by trade specialize in being liked.

Each has wide experience and knowledge of government. Each has at least a moderately curious mind. Each has what now seems to be an important ingredient in any presidential recipe: the relentless energy needed for a job monumentally taxing.

Here are a few individual impressions, with the candidates listed alphabetically:

SEN. HUBERT H. HUMPHREY (D-Minn) — Although Humphrey was shot down in West Virginia, he is included here because he illustrates a political paradox.

Most men are done in by their weaknesses: Humphrey, at least in part, was done in by his strength.

Politicians are badgered constantly.

"Come on, take a stand!"

Well, Humphrey took stands. On anything. On everything.

Each time a politician takes a stand, he unavoidably loses the support of all who don't agree with him.

Rightly or wrongly, Humphrey took stands until he got himself catalogued as too liberal, on everything from civil rights to organized labor.

There are many reasons for the Humphrey failure, but it probably is more than a coincidence that the man who took the most pronounced stands should be the first to go.

SEN. LYNDON B. JOHNSON (D-Tex)—If he ever makes it to the White House, Johnson will be the cartoonists' dream boy. No other candidate has so many mannerisms:

His big ranch hat, a reminder of the Johnson theme song—Why, he's not from the South, no, suh. He's from the Wild West, pardner, where they have fine stands of presidential timber.

His pausing in mid-sentence to take a deep nasal pull on his inhaler. His yanking off his glasses whenever a photographer appears. His loud applause, leading all the rest, whenever anyone else scores, however mildly, at a political rally.

His skill at telling stories. For hilarity and shrewd insights, it's hard to match an evening with Lyndon Johnson, an adroit mimic.

Each politician is liberally coated with egotism. He has to be, to remain convinced that he's the only answer to the taxpayer's prayers.

But they double-dipped Lyndon B. Johnson.

This hard driving, ambitious man still keeps almost as fast a pace as he did before his heart attack in 1955.

A session with Johnson can be disconcerting. He talks and talks, jabbing you with his finger, leaning so close you begin to feel like a mouse cornered by a cat.

Gradually as he gives an off-the-record rundown on what makes each senator tick, or keeps him from ticking, a fascinating picture emerges.

"We're all prima donnas in the Senate," Johnson says.

He takes a pull on the inhaler, and seems mentally to be calculating, again, what the prima donnas in the back room will have.

Others painstakingly size up issues. Johnson painstakingly sizes up men.

SEN. JOHN F. KENNEDY (D-Mass)—No public image is as incomplete as the one usually sketched for Jack Kennedy. Almost always he's presented as a bright, affable, rich, young man with an uncanny way with voters. Especially young voters.

Which is true.

But it's only part of the picture. It's like describing a handsome fighting cock and neglecting to mention his business-like spurs.

Kennedy has spurs—and he and his followers know how to use them.

Beneath that Ivy League exterior, behind that appealing, boyish grin, is a fierce competitor who grew up in the harsh, practical Boston school of politics.

The Kennedy organization is marvelous to behold. So many Kennedy men dart about it's difficult to keep them straight.

It's true that Kennedy has a lot of money. What's important is that his organization knows how to spend it to his advantage.

In the last few days of the West Virginia campaign, for example, it was impossible to pick up a newspaper, or to turn on the radio or television, and not see or hear a paid ad bragging about Kennedy.

While this was going on out front, the Kennedy men were busy with the county organizations, lining up their support.

This is known as the Kennedy blitz, and it's carefully tailor-made to fit each occasion and each state.

So far, in a business where nothing succeeds like success, it has worked perfectly. Seven primaries entered, seven primaries won. That's going to be hard to argue against in the National Democratic Convention.

VICE PRESIDENT RICHARD M. NIXON—No man studies the techniques of politics more carefully than Nixon.

So he admires the way Harry S. Truman campaigns, particularly that whistlestop business in 1948 which proved the undoing of Thomas E. Dewey.

When I was touring with Nixon, Kennedy was campaigning in the West. Nixon seemed to study reports of Kennedy's trip as carefully as a surgeon reads a medical journal on the latest developments in his field.

Nixon approved of the Kennedy approach. He mentioned how frequently Kennedy appeared before college groups, and wondered if we had noticed how few collegians are voters. Yet Nixon thought Kennedy was smart. What is important, he said, is the enthusiasm generated, and dutifully reported to the country.

Reporters are, in his words, "image makers."

So he carefully prepares what he says, although he uses no notes. He thinks they come between him and his audience.

"There's no such thing as a good, off-the-cuff speech," he says.

This doesn't mean that Nixon is interested only in the mechanics of politics. He does his homework on issues, too, and plans carefully ahead.

He has had one disappointment. He had figured that President Eisenhower's trip to the Soviet Union would be a great triumph, and that peace-in-our-time could be treated as if it were exclusive GOP property in the campaign.

Well, the trip is off, and the strategy now will be to sell himself as the man best able to stand up to Nikita Khrushchev.

GOV. NELSON A. ROCKEFELLER of New York—To those who haven't been around him much, the most surprising aspect of Rockefeller is his lack of self-consciousness.

Many who enter politics late are ill at ease in their new environment. Rockefeller can back-slap and hail-fellow as unabashedly as Harry Truman. And there's no denying his political charm.

In Williamsport, Pa., a woman who said she was an ardent Nixon fan went through the receiving line, got the grin and grip, and came out to announce breathlessly that she now was in Rockefeller's corner.

Although there's no guarantee that a jiffy convert won't flipflop again, Rockefeller has performed magic with sterner stuff.

George I. Bloom, Pennsylvania GOP chairman and a firm Nixon supporter, wasn't at the airport, and he seemed only lukewarm later in introducing Rockefeller. But as the day waned, Bloom waxed more enthusiastic. By nightfall he was saying he was sorry that Rockefeller hadn't remained in the running.

Such crumbs as these are about all Rockefeller can hope for at this time.

If Nixon should unaccountably stumble, Rockefeller is up there on the high road, waiting for the draft.

This was well illustrated earlier this month when Rockefeller said Nixon was avoiding some of the tough ones, and called on him to take a firm stand on all issues. Nixon calmly replied, thanks, but he had taken firm stands already. After a few juicy headlines, the Nixon bandwagon rolled on, maybe even more smoothly than before.

ADLAI E. STEVENSON — You know about Stevenson, the man who twice took on Eisenhower and twice was badly beaten.

His language is still graceful and challenging. He retains his fine sense of humor, his nice sense of proportion.

He even, alas, has the same failings.

During his campaigns Stevenson repeatedly wrote a strong, effective speech, and after considerable nitpicking over each word, finally gave it to newsmen to retail to the world. Then Stevenson would get up, and make a softer, watered-down version of his talk.

In Charlottesville, Va., this spring Stevenson showed he has not conquered this curious habit. Once again, his typewriter blistered the Republicans. Once again, he couldn't bring himself to say the harsh words. They were deleted, and tepid talk full of grace but devoid of fire, fell from his lips.

But Stevenson, waiting for the draft he himself doubts will ever come, has this to console him: spectators keep coming up to tell him they voted for him twice, and hope to vote for him again.

Probably no other active politician has such loyal supporters.

SEN. STUART SYMINGTON (D-Mo)—Here is a man with a mission.

Symington believes what he says about this country's weak defenses. It haunts him. He thinks he's the man to set things aright.

Maybe you don't spend every spare moment studying military affairs, but around Symington you have no other choice.

"Here, read this," Symington will say. And you read this, and it says what this country could use a lot more of is defense. When you're finished, Symington is ready. "Here, read this," he'll say, and hand you another batch.

Symington says that when he was in the Pentagon as Air Force secretary, the Eisenhowers and Symingtons were such close friends they took a vacation together.

But Symington's sharp criticism helped curdle all that.

At one point when I was out with Symington, Eisenhower was complaining that a layman — he apparently meant Symington — shouldn't mess around in military affairs.

Symington went back to the Civil War for an answer:

"If that Layman from Illinois hadn't interfered with George McClellan and some other generals, his side might not have won the war."

Symington's supporters like to say that their tiger, who has been a successful business man and government executive, has had more executive experience than all the other candidates rolled together.

Symington himself likes to say:

"There's never been a government in the United States that's been as badly run as this government."

But don't despair. Bad as it may (or may not) be, he and a lot of others are courageously willing to have a whack at it.

SEN. STUART SYMINGTON (D-Mo)—Here is a man with a mission.

Symington believes what he says about this country's weak defenses. It haunts him. He thinks he's the man to set things aright.

Maybe you don't spend every spare moment studying military affairs, but around Symington you have no other choice.

"Here, read this," Symington will say. And you read this, and it says what this country could use a lot more of is defense. When you're finished, Symington is ready. "Here, read this," he'll say, and hand you another batch.

Symington says that when he was in the Pentagon as Air Force secretary, the Eisenhowers and Symingtons were such close friends they took a vacation together.

But Symington's sharp criticism helped curdle all that.

At one point when I was out with Symington, Eisenhower was complaining that a layman — he apparently meant Symington — shouldn't mess around in military affairs.

Symington went back to the Civil War for an answer:

"If that Layman from Illinois hadn't interfered with George McClellan and some other generals, his side might not have won the war."

Symington's supporters like to say that their tiger, who has been a successful business man and government executive, has had more executive experience than all the other candidates rolled together.

Symington himself likes to say:

"There's never been a government in the United States that's been as badly run as this government."

But don't despair. Bad as it may (or may not) be, he and a lot of others are courageously willing to have a whack at it.

Patton At Tallulah

Halfback Jim Patton, speedy defensive star of the National Football League's New York Giants, will be guest speaker for the Tallulah Quarterback Club's meeting tomorrow evening, kicking off a membership drive for the Madison parish boosters of Tallulah High School athletics.

Wayne Harkey, president of the Tallulah Quarterbacks, announced assurance of Patton, former University of Mississippi great, for the meeting at the Tallulah Country Club tomorrow beginning at 8 o'clock.

N. A. "Bob" White, who spreads the word of Tallulah Trojan athletic prowess as a sports writer, furnishes us with this background:

"Patton, a native of Belzoni, Miss., works as a salesman for a tobacco company during the off-season, and it is through the courtesy of this company that the Tallulah Quarterback Club was able to get Patton as guest speaker.

"During the tension-packed championship playoff game with the Baltimore Colts, Coach Webb Ewbank observed, after Patton was hurt during the second period '... We got a break when Patton went out. I'm not knocking Stits (Bill Stits) who replaced Patton. He's a good boy, but Patton is great.'

"During his football days with Ole Miss he was tabbed the best collegiate defensive back in the Southeastern Conference.

"The Quarterback Club has made plans to support football, basketball, and track at Tallulah High from now on out, and Mr. Harkey says they are inviting all members and prospective members to attend this meeting.

"Along with Mr. Patton's program, which will consist of a 30-minute talk and a 30-minute film of New York Giant game highlights last season, a supper will be held."

Tickets were on sale all week for the supper. Harkey, Roe Cagnolatti, and White are handling details for the Quarterbacks.

Not Lake Providence

There's a story going about that a water skiier fell into a nest of cottonmouth snakes and was so badly bitten that he was dead before he could get medical attention.

Contrary to reports, it did NOT occur at Lake Providence where the Miss Louisiana Beauty Pageant is soon due to be held.

"Is there any way in which this mis-information can be corrected so that our town will not be hurt by this false publicity . . . it would certainly be appreciated by all of us in this immediate area," reads part of a letter crossing our desk from a Lake Providence resident.

We have heard the skier-snake story with the scenery different at least four times. Since we don't know how true the story is, and certainly the one that it was at Lake Providence is untrue, then we're not mentioning the other places we heard about. It would only hurt their recreation, too, and we know at least two of them are also erroneous.

An Appreciation Night

Ferriday, a hot bed of Little Boys baseball, holds its fifth annual "sponsor appreciation night" for sixteen team sponsors next Friday evening at 6 o'clock at Little Boys Baseball Park there.

The program will include the annual small fry beauty pageant in which "Miss Little Boys League of 1960" will be selected, followed by a baseball game involving all nine-year-old boys in the "Minor League."

Attention, Sportsmen

What about duck hunting plans, if any, for Cheniere Lake? What about the future of Cheniere Lake itself for fishing, hunting, or recreation? Are you interested in the water pollution abatement program? These and other items of interest to Ouachita parish sportsmen will be topics on the program at a public meeting of the Ouachita Unit of the Louisiana Wildlife Federation here Tuesday night at 7:30 o'clock at Virginia Hotel.

City Commissioner W. D. H. Rodriguez of Monroe and Mayor Allan Norris of West Monroe will report on their recent trip with A. S. "Bud" Tidwell, Jr., unit president, to Washington, D. C., where they attended the National convention of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress. They will discuss pollution abatement and recommendations for Ouachita river.

Plans for Cheniere Lake are expected to be offered for general discussion in helping sportsmen arrive at a conclusion in their search for plans that will be for the best interests of the most people. The unit's Cheniere proposals will be offered when the Cheniere Lake Commission holds its July meeting.

Berlo Closes Fast To Win 5th Straight

NEW YORK (AP)—Berlo, the favorite from the Foxcatcher Farms of William du Pont Jr. of Delaware, drew away in the final eight of a mile Saturday at Belmont Park and won the $86,250 Coaching Club American Oaks for 3-year-old fillies.

It was the fifth straight victory for the brown daughter of Heliopolis-Faberose, by Rosemont, four of the triumphs coming this year. Berlo came outside of Ogden Phipps's Sarcastic on the turn for home, and won by three quarters of a length in the field of eight. Hal Price Headley's Rash Statement finished third, another 3½ lengths away.

Jockey Eric Guerin rode Berlo, giving him his third victory in the Oaks, often called the Belmont Stakes for fillies. He had won with Next Move in 1950 and Grecian Queen in 1953. Both were champions of their division, and Berlo moved to the front of the class with Saturday's victory before a sun-splashed crowd of 35,278.

Edward Seinfeld's Clear Road took the early lead as the field broke from the gate in a chute leading into the backstretch. Berlo was well back as the Cain Hoy Stable's Make Sail and Sarcastic chased the pace-setter.

With about three quarters of a mile to go, Berlo was sent up to challenge Sarcastic and Clear Road for the lead. Sarcastic, with Henry Moreno up, held a length advantage rounding the turn for home, followed by Berlo and Irving David's Chalvedele, ridden by Bill Hartack.

Turning for home with a quarter mile remaining, Berlo began the payoff move. Chalvedele, who had finished second to Berlo in the Mother Goose Stakes June 8, tired, and Rush Statement moved into third under Ray Broussard.

Berlo finished the mile and one quarter in 2:04 1-5 on a fast track, and returned $2.90, $2.60 and $2.40. Sarcastic paid $6.80 and $5.10, and Rash Statement $8.20. All carried 121 pounds.

Chalvedele was fourth, followed by Clear Road, Make Sail, La Fuerza and Frimanaha. Monarchy was a late scratch.

The winner netted $55,262, running her 1960 total earnings to $80,162.

Entries Reach New Peak For Garden State

CAMDEN, N.J. (AP)—Nominations for Garden State Park's two big fall features, the Garden State and the Gardenia, have reached an all time high, racing secretary Ty Shea said Saturday.

Shea counted 232 nominations for the Garden State, and 233 for the Gardenia. The previous high was last year with 261 for the Garden State, a 1 1-16 mile run for 2-year-olds, and 222 for the Gardenia, the same distance for 2-year-old fillies.

The Garden State last year grossed $283,075, while the Gardenia was worth $134,215. Warfare, winner of the Garden State went on to be named 2-year-old of the year, while My Dear Girl, victoress in the Gardenia, wound up 2-year-old queen of 1959. Bally Ache, standout 3 - year - old this year, was second in the 1959 Garden State, the world's richest race.

Pappas Hurls Six-Hitter, Orioles Smash Athletics

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Milt Pappas held the Kansas City Athletics to six hits while his teammates pounded out 16 safeties Saturday for a 11-2 victory by the Baltimore Orioles.

The Birds moved to within three percentage points of the American League-leading New York Yankees, who lost to Cleveland.

Gus Triandos, who entered the game hitting a modest .226, led the Baltimore hit parade, pounding out a home run, two doubles and a single in five times at bat, driving in three runs and scoring three. Triandos' homer was only his second.

Brooks Robinson also drove in three runs, two with his fifth homer and one with a sacrifice fly.

The losing pitcher was Bud Daley (10-3) who had nine consecutive victories. He was 2-0 against the Birds this year and 8-1 against them over two seasons.

But Saturday he didn't have the touch and lasted only three innings in which he yielded six hits and six runs.

Pappas yielded two of his hits in the ninth inning, including a single to Harry Chiti, who had singled to drive in a run in the fourth.

The hard-throwing Baltimore right-hander struck out seven and walked three. His record now is 6-5.

FOR STATE JUNIOR MEET

Lyman's 69 Tops Practice Round

Chip Lyman of Baton Rouge shaved a stroke off par at Bayou Desiard Country Club course yesterday to stamp himself as a top contender in the third annual Louisiana Junior Golf Tournament which begins here Monday.

Lyman, a semifinalist in the state met last year, carded a sizzling 69 on the 35-35-70 par 6,255 - yard course to lead a field of approximately 35 entrants who toured the course for practice rounds yesterday. Heavy rains forced many off the course before completing 18 holes.

Qualifying for the meet, sponsored by the Louisiana Golf Association, is scheduled to begin Monday morning at 8:30, with two 18-hold matches slated Tuesday and the finals scheduled Wednesday.

The tournament limited to golfers under 18 years of age, is expected to draw some 75 entrants. A total of 57 golfers from 11 towns had registered late yesterday.

Russ Gaudin of Baton Rouge, the defending champion, arrived yesterday and finished eight holes before the rain came. He was one under par at the time.

Also expected to make a strong bid to lift Gaudin's crown are Ronnie Melancon of Baton Rouge and Jim Flagler of Shreveport. Flagler recently tied for medalist honors in the state amateur tourney and advanced to the semi-finals before being bounced out.

Other contenders who turned in complete rounds yesterday were Ricky Phillips of New Orleans with 75 and Dennis Marchman of Monroe with 77.

Players who completed nine holes were Brian Hirsch of Lake Charles, Hank Corder of New Orleans, Henry Hinkle of Monroe and Melancon, all with 36, and Tod Lusk, Ricky Comeaux of Lafayette, and Don Werner of Baton Rouge with 37.

Gaudin has elected to take the No. 1 position in the championship flight, leaving 15 places for qualifiers to fill Monday. Additional flights will be made up of 16 players each.

Pairings and starting times will be announced in Monday's Morning World.

Owen McClary and Joe Aillet are chairman and co-chairman, respectively, of the tournament. Official starter will be Tommy Atchison, assistant club pro at Bayou DeSiard.

New Policy Triumphs In Cinema 'Cap

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP)—Willie Shoemaker whipped Ralph Lowe's New Policy to a wire-to-wire victory in the $57,500 Cinema Handicap over a mile and one eighth at Hollywood Park Saturday.

Shoemaker took New Policy quickly from the gate and held on in the stretch despite a driving finish by Tempestuous, who finished second.

T.V. Lark, the betting choice, was third in the event, a stepping stone to the $100,000 Hollywood Derby in two weeks.

New Policy's time was 1:46 3-5, a track record. New Policy paid $13, $6.60 and $3.80. Tempestuous returned $10.80 and $6 and T.V. Lark $3.20.

A crowd of about 45,000 was on hand as New Policy, a swift son of Khaleb, showed his heels to the field. He was pressed by Tempestuous all down the backstretch, and moving into the stretch Tempestuous began to gain—whereupon Shoemaker tapped New Policy and the winner came on again.

T.V. Lark, high weighted at 126 pounds, and breaking from the outside post position, was caught in a jam most of the way around and did not make a move until just before the turn for home. Then Willie Harmatz, whipping furiously, tried to pick up the lost ground, but New Policy was too far away.

Tempestuous, with Pete Moreno in the irons, carried 113 pounds.

New Policy was saddled with 123 pounds, the same weight he carried when he ran third to T.V. Lark in the mile and one sixteenth Argonaut.

Dick Stigman Slows Down Yanks As Tribe Wins, 4-1

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland's Dick Stigman cooled off the New York bats Saturday, limiting the league-leading Yankees to four singles and striking out 10 as the Indians captured a 4-1 decision.

The 24-year-old southpaw got home run support from Vic Power and Harvey Kuenn, the latter with one on. Stigman (3-4) beat the Yanks for the second time this season.

For seven innings Stigman and Ralph Terry (3-3) engaged in a tight duel. Power's third homer of the season gave Cleveland a 1-0 lead in the first inning.

The Indians scored two more in the sixth on a single by Power and Kuenn's blast into the left field seats. Kuenn, hitting in his 10th straight game, boosted his average to .312. He has gained 34 points in that span as he sets out in defense of his American League batting championship.

The Yanks broke through Stigman in the seventh inning after he had held them to one hit—a third inning single by Bobby Richardson. Mickey Mantle walked with one out in the seventh and scored on back-to-back singles by Elston Howard and Bob Cerv.

The Indians added their final run, unearned, in the eighth off reliever Ryne Duren on a walk, Kuenn's single and a throwing error by Cerv, who played first base.

Stigman was in trouble in only the seventh. The Yanks had runners on first and second and one out after scoring one run. But Cletis Boyer bounced to third and Bubba Phillips stepped on the bag and fired to first to complete a double play.

Mixing a sweeping curve ball with a sizzling fast ball, Stigman had the Yanks swinging at air. He fanned eight in the first five innings, then added pinch-hitters Gil McDougald and Yogi Berra in the eighth inning. Stigman walked only two.

The Indians got five hits off Terry, who also hurled well. They added another single in the ninth off Duren.

VOLS HOST DUBACH

Rallying Ruston In Town Today

No, the Ruston Ramblers aren't dead yet. And if anybody is going to catch them, they better hurry up.

Billy Henderson's freshman La-Ark League club snapped out of a recent slump to maul Bastrop, 10-2, Friday night and enjoys a 2½-game lead over second-place West Monroe as the season approaches the halfway mark.

West Monroe's Vals lost a chance to pick up a half game on the leaders when their game with fifth-place Sterlington was rained out Saturday night. Vol General Manager L. E. Frith said the two teams would try to make up the game sometime this week.

Ruston invades Monroe this afternoon while West Monroe hosts third-place Dubach at Confederate Park and Sterlington entertains Bastrop.

Monroe, last year's pennant winner, slid into last place Friday night when Dubach handed the Sports' ace lefthander, Fred Southerland, his first defeat of the campaign. Southerland had won half of Monroe's four triumphs before Dubach Hornets whipped him, 5-1, on four unearned runs Friday. The defeat also spoiled Vivian Pettit's debut as the Sports' pilot. Pettit replaced Red Sims, who resigned in order to devote more time to his duties as Monroe's American Legion coach, last week.

Ruston banged out 12 hits in its rout of Bastrop while tall Ray Germany scattered eight safeties in winning his fourth game against only one defeat.

The Ramblers had lost three out of five prior to their victory over the Barons Friday.

Beatty Barely Edged In AAU

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP) — Bill Dellinger edged little Jim Beatty in the 5,000-meter run Saturday night as the National AAU Track and Field Championships went into the final night of competition.

Both Dellenger, from the Oregon Emerald Athletic Club, and Beatty, former Tar Heel from North Carolina now with the Santa Clara Valley Youth Center, were clocked in 14:26.4.

It appeared the two contrived to make it a dead-heat finish. They ran stride for stride, like a match team of horses, for the final 00 meters or more.

Pat Clohessy, an Australian running for the University of Houston, was third in 14:3.4.

It was the little regarded Clohessy who forced the pacesetting Beatty for ost of the long grind. At one stage, with five laps to go, it appeared Beatty and the Aussie were having a privae war of elbows.

But Clohessy faded in the final lap and then Dellinger and Beatty hooked up in their easy run to the tape.

Ois Davis, also of he Oregon Eerald club, won he 400 meters in :45.8. Dave Mills, Purdue, was second in :46.2, with Willie Williams, Southern California Striders, third in :46.3.

Davis equaled the National AAU record set by Tom Courtney of the New York Athletic Club in 1956.

Later Dellinger and Beatty in effect admitted the windup was something of a "you first, Gaston" agreement reached in the final 100 meters.

Beatty said he told Dellinger to "go on ahead" since he was the defending champion. But Dellinger declined the invitation and suggested they go in together.

But in the end, it was Beatty who "hesitated most" and Dellinger got the nod.

Both made it clear, however, that the Olympic tryouts next week pose a different metter.

Defending champion Eddie Southern of the Army, after qualifying Friday night, withdrew from the 400 meters because of a minor illness. The ex-Texas University athlete qualified for the final tryouts in the all-service meet.

Another AAU record fell when defending champion Al Oerter of the New York A.C. broke his own mark of 186 feet 5 inches with a discus throw of 193-9½.

Dick Cochran of the University of Missouri also bettered Oerter's record with a second-place throw of 188-10, and Rink Babka, southern California Striders, was third with 165-5.

Oerter also holds the Olympic record of 184-10½.

Dick Howard of Albuquerque, N.M., won the non-Olympic event 200-meter low hurdles in :23.3, with Roy Thompson of the Army second in :23.5 and Rex Stucker third in :23.5. Rex Cawley, Southern California freshman who has beaten Howard this season, finished fifth in :23.7.

Jim Grelle of the Oregon Emerald club established a National AAU record in winning the 1,500-meter runiin 342.7. It broke th:e time of 3:47.5 set last year by another Oregon star, Dyrol Burleson.

Grelle closed with a strong rush to beat Laszlo Tabori, timed in 3:43.5, and Ed Moran of the New York Athletic Club failed in a game bid to take second. Moran's time was 3:43.7.

PAUL MARTIN LOOKS 'EM OVER

Patton At Tallulah

Halfback Jim Patton, speedy defensive star of the National Football League's New York Giants, will be guest speaker for the Tallulah Quarterback Club's meeting tomorrow evening, kicking off a membership drive for the Madison parish boosters of Tallulah High School athletics.

Wayne Harkey, president of the Tallulah Quarterbacks, announced assurance of Patton, former University of Mississippi great, for the meeting at the Tallulah Country Club tomorrow beginning at 8 o'clock.

N. A. "Bob" White, who spreads the word of Tallulah Trojan athletic prowess as a sports writer, furnishes us with this background:

"Patton, a native of Belzoni, Miss., works as a salesman for a tobacco company during the off-season, and it is through the courtesy of this company that the Tallulah Quarterback Club was able to get Patton as guest speaker.

"During the tension-packed championship playoff game with the Baltimore Colts, Coach Webb Ewbank observed, after Patton was hurt during the second period '. . . We got a break when Patton went out. I'm not knocking Stits (Bill Stits) who replaced Patton. He's a good boy, but Patton is great.'

"During his football days with Ole Miss he was tabbed the best collegiate defensive back in the Southeastern Conference.

"The Quarterback Club has made plans to support football, basketball, and track at Tallulah High from now on out, and Mr. Harkey says they are inviting all members and prospective members to attend this meeting.

"Along with Mr. Patton's program, which will consist of a 30-minute talk and a 30-minute film of New York Giant game highlights last season, a supper will be held."

Tickets were on sale all week for the supper. Harkey, Roe Cagnolatti, and White are handling details for the Quarterbacks.

Not Lake Providence

There's a story going about that a water skier fell into a nest of cottonmouth snakes and was so badly bitten that he was dead before he could get medical attention.

Contrary to reports, it did NOT occur at Lake Providence where the Miss Louisiana Beauty Pageant is soon due to be held.

"Is there any way in which this mis-information can be corrected so that our town will not be hurt by this false publicity . . . it would certainly be appreciated by all of us in this immediate area." reads part of a letter crossing our desk from a Lake Providence resident.

We hope this serves to remove the cloud from beautiful Lake Providence where water sports is a major recreation

We have heard the skier-snake story with the scenery different at least four times. Since we don't know how true the story is, and certainly the one that it was at Lake Providence is untrue, then we're not mentioning the other places we heard about. It would only hurt their recreation, too, and we know at least two of them are also erroneous.

An Appreciation Night

Ferriday, a hot bed of Little Boys baseball, holds its fifth annual "sponsor appreciation night" for sixteen team sponsors next Friday evening at 6 o'clock at Little Boys Baseball Park there.

The program will include the annual small fry beauty pageant in which "Miss Little Boys League of 1960" will be selected, followed by a baseball game involving all nine-year-old boys in the "Minor League."

Attention, Sportsmen

What about duck hunting plans, if any, for Cheniere Lake? What about the future of Cheniere Lake itself for fishing, hunting, or recreation? Are you interested in the water pollution abatement program? These and other items of interest to Ouachita parish sportsmen will be topics on the program at a public meeting of the Ouachita Unit of the Louisiana Wildlife Federation here Tuesday night at 7:30 o'clock at Virginia Hotel.

City Commissioner W. D. H. Rodriguez of Monroe and Mayor Allan Norris of West Monroe will report on their recent trip with A. S. "Bud" Tidwell, Jr., unit president, to Washington, D. C., where they attended the National convention of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress. They will discuss pollution abatement and recommendations for Ouachita river.

Plans for Cheniere Lake are expected to be offered for general discussion in helping sportsmen arrive at a conclusion in their search for plans that will be for the best interests of the most people. The unit's Cheniere proposals will be offered when the Cheniere Lake Commission holds its July meeting.

Berlo Closes Fast To Win 5th Straight

NEW YORK (AP)—Berlo, the favorite from the Foxcatcher Farms of William du Pont Jr. of Delaware, drew away in the final eight of a mile Saturday at Belmont Park and won the $86,250 Coaching Club American Oaks for 3-year-old fillies.

It was the fifth straight victory for the brown daughter of Heliopolis-Faberose, by Rosemont, four of the triumphs coming this year. Berlo came outside of Ogden Phipps's Sarcastic on the turn for home, and won by three quarters of a length in the field of eight. Hal Price Headley's Rash Statement finished third, another 3½ lengths away.

Jockey Eric Guerin rode Berlo, giving him his third victory in the Oaks, often called the Belmont Stakes for fillies. He had won with Next Move in 1950 and Grecian Queen in 1953. Both were champions of their division, and Berlo moved to the front of the class with Saturday's victory before a sun-splashed crowd of 35,278.

Edward Seinfeld's Clear Road took the early lead as the field broke from the gate in a chute leading into the backstretch. Berlo was well back as the Cain Hoy Stable's Make Sail and Sarcastic chased the pace-setter.

With about three quarters of a mile to go, Berlo was sent up to challenge Sarcastic and Clear Road for the lead. Sarcastic, with Henry Moreno up, held a length advantage rounding the turn for home, followed by Berlo and Irving David's Chalvedele, ridden by Bill Hartack.

Turning for home with a quarter mile remaining, Berlo began the payoff move. Chalvedele, who had finished second to Berlo in the Mother Goose Stakes June 8, tired, and Rush Statement moved into third under Ray Broussard.

Berlo finished the mile and one quarter in 2:04 1-5 on a fast track, and returned $2.90, $2.60 and $2.40. Sarcastic paid $6.80 and $5.10, and Rash Statement $8.20. All carried 121 pounds.

Chalvedele was fourth, followed by Clear Road, Make Sail, La Fuerza and Frimanaha. Monarchy was a late scratch.

The winner netted $55,262, running her 1960 total earnings to $80,162.

Entries Reach New Peak For Garden State

CAMDEN, N.J. (AP)—Nominations for Garden State Park's two big fall features, the Garden State and the Gardenia, have reached an all time high, racing secretary Ty Shea said Saturday.

Shea counted 282 nominations for the Garden State, and 233 for the Gardenia. The previous high was last year with 261 for the Garden State, a 1 1-16 mile run for 2-year-olds, and 222 for the Gardenia, the same distance for 2-year-old fillies.

The Garden State last year grossed $283,075, while the Gardenia was worth $134,215. Warfare, winner of the Garden State went on to be named 2-year-old of the year, while My Dear Girl, victoress in the Gardenia, wound up 2-year-old queen of 1959. Bally Ache, standout 3 - year - old this year, was second in the 1959 Garden State, the world's richest race.

Pappas Hurls Six-Hitter, Orioles Smash Athletics

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Milt Pappas held the Kansas City Athletics to six hits while his teammates pounded out 16 safeties Saturday for a 11-2 victory by the Baltimore Orioles.

The Birds moved to within three percentage points of the American League-leading New York Yankees, who lost to Cleveland.

Gus Triandos, who entered the game hitting a modest .226, led the Baltimore hit parade, pounding out a home run, two doubles and a single in five times at bat, driving in three runs and scoring three. Triandos' homer was only his second.

Brooks Robinson also drove in three runs, two with his fifth homer and one with a sacrifice fly.

The losing pitcher was Bud Daley (10-3) who had nine consecutive victories. He was 2-0 against the Birds this year and 8-1 against them over two seasons.

But Saturday he didn't have the touch and lasted only three innings in which he yielded six hits and six runs.

Pappas yielded two of his hits in the ninth inning, including a single to Harry Chiti, who had singled to drive in a run in the fourth.

The hard-throwing Baltimore right-hander struck out seven and walked three. His record now is 6-5.

FOR STATE JUNIOR MEET

Lyman's 69 Tops Practice Round

Chip Lyman of Baton Rouge shaved a stroke off par at Bayou Desiard Country Club course yesterday to stamp himself as a top contender in the third annual Louisiana Junior Golf Tournament which begins here Monday.

Lyman, a semifinalist in the state met last year, carded a sizzling 69 on the 35-35-70 par 6,255 - yard course to lead a field of approximately 35 entrants who toured the course for practice rounds yesterday. Heavy rains forced many off the course before completing 18 holes.

Qualifying for the meet, sponsored by the Louisiana Golf Association, is scheduled to begin Monday morning at 8:30, with two 18-hold matches slated Tuesday and the finals scheduled Wednesday.

The tournament limited to golfers under 18 years of age, is expected to draw some 75 entrants. A total of 57 golfers from 11 towns had registered late yesterday.

Russ Gaudin of Baton Rouge, the defending champion, arrived yesterday and finished eight holes before the rain came. He was one under par at the time.

Also expected to make a strong bid to lift Gaudin's crown are Ronnie Melancon of Baton Rouge and Jim Flagler of Shreveport. Flagler recently tied for medalist honors in the state amateur tourney and advanced to the semi-finals before being bounced out.

Other contenders who turned in complete rounds yesterday were Ricky Phillips of New Orleans with 75 and Dennis Marchman of Monroe with 77.

Players who completed nine holes were Brian Hirsch of Lake Charles, Hank Corder of New Orleans, Henry Hinkle of Monroe and Melancon, all with 36, and Tod Lusk, Ricky Comeaux of Lafayette, and Don Werner of Baton Rouge with 37.

Gaudin has elected to take the No. 1 position in the championship flight, leaving 15 places for qualifiers to fill Monday. Additional flights will be made up of 16 players each.

Pairings and starting times will be announced in Monday's Morning World.

Owen McClary and Joe Aillet are chairman and co-chairman, respectively, of the tournament. Official starter will be Tommy Atchison, assistant club pro at Bayou DeSiard.

New Policy Triumphs In Cinema 'Cap

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP)—Willie Shoemaker whipped Ralph Lowe's New Policy to a wire-to-wire victory in the $57,500 Cinema Handicap over a mile and one eighth at Hollywood Park Saturday.

Shoemaker took New Policy quickly from the gate and held on in the stretch despite a driving finish by Tempestuous, who finished second.

T.V. Lark, the betting choice, was third in the event, a stepping stone to the $100,000 Hollywood Derby in two weeks.

New Policy's time was 1:46 3-5, a track record. New Policy paid $13, $6.60 and $3.80. Tempestuous returned $10.80 and $6 and T.V. Lark $3.20.

A crowd of about 45,000 was on hand as New Policy, a swift son of Khaleb, showed his heels to the field. He was pressed by Tempestuous all down the backstretch, and moving into the stretch Tempestuous began to gain—whereupon Shoemaker tapped New Policy and the winner came on again.

T.V. Lark, high weighted at 126 pounds, and breaking from the outside post position, was caught in a jam most of the way around and did not make a move until just before the turn for home. Then Willie Harmatz, whipping furiously, tried to pick up the lost ground, but New Policy was too far away.

Tempestuous, with Pete Moreno in the irons, carried 113 pounds.

New Policy was saddled with 123 pounds, the same weight he carried when he ran third to T.V. Lark in the mile and one sixteenth Argonaut.

Beatty Barely Edged In AAU

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP) — Bill Dellinger edged little Jim Beatty in the 5,000-meter run Saturday night as the National AAU Track and Field Championships went into the final night of competition.

Both Dellenger, from the Oregon Emerald Athletic Club, and Beatty, former Tar Heel from North Carolina now with the Santa Clara Valley Youth Center, were clocked in 14:26.4.

It appeared the two contrived to make it a dead-heat finish. They ran stride for stride, like a match team of horses, for the final 00 meters or more.

Pat Clohessy, an Australian running for the University of Houston, was third in 14:3.4.

It was the little regarded Clohessy who forced the pacesetting Beatty for ost of the long grind. At one stage, with five laps to go, it appeared Beatty and the Aussie were having a privae war of elbows.

But Clohessy faded in the final lap and then Dellinger and Beatty hooked up in their easy run to the tape.

Ois Davis, also of he Oregon Eerald club, won he 400 meters in :45.8. Dave Mills, Purdue, was second in :46.2, with Willie Williams, Southern California Striders, third in :46.3.

Davis equaled the National AAU record set by Tom Courtney of the New York Athletic Club in 1956.

Later Dellinger and Beatty in effect admitted the windup was something of a "you first, Gaston" agreement reached in the final 100 meters.

Beatty said he told Dellinger to "go on ahead" since he was the defending champion. But Dellinger declined the invitation and suggested they go in together.

But in the end, it was Beatty who "hesitated most" and Dellinger got the nod.

Both made it clear, however, that the Olympic tryouts next week pose a different metter.

Defending champion Eddie Southern of the Army, after qualifying Friday night, withdrew from the 400 meters because of a minor illness. The ex-Texas University athlete qualified for the final t ryouts in the all-service meet.

Another AAU record fell when defending champion Al Oerter of the New York A.C. broke his own mark of 186 feet 5 inches with a discus throw of 193-9½.

Dick Cochran of the University of Missouri also bettered Oerter's record with a second-place throw of 188-10, and Rink Babka, southern California Striders, was third with 185-5.

Oerter also holds the Olympic record of 184-10½.

Dick Howard of Albuquerque, N.M., won the non-Olympic event 200-meter low hurdles in :23.3, with Roy Thompson of the Army second in :23.5 and Rex Stucker third in :23.5. Rex Cawley, Southern California freshman who has beaten Howard this season, finished fifth in :23.7.

Jim Grelle of the Oregon Emerald club established a National AAU record in winning the 1,500-meter runiin 342.7. It broke th:e time of 3:47.5 set last year by another Oregon star, Dyrol Burleson.

Grelle closed with a strong rush to beat Laszlo Tabori, timed in 3:43.5, and Ed Moran of the New York Athletic Club failed in a game bid to take second. Moran's time was 3:43.7.

Lass Betters Standards In Century, 220

CLEVELAND (AP)—Wilma Rudolph bettered the American record in the women's 100 and 220-yard dashes Saturday as she led her Tennessee State teammates to victory in the Central States AAU championships and Midwest Olympic trpouts.

Miss Rudolph captured the 100 in :10.6, bettering by a tenth of a second the mark set by Mae Faggs of Tennessee State in 1955. In the 220, she ran her semifinal heat in the record-smashing time of :23.9, compared to the :24.3, set by Stella Walsh in 1935 and equaled by Lucinda Williams of Tennessee State two years ago.

Miss Rudolph won the 220 final in :24.2, edging Miss Williams, who was timed in :24.4

Miss Rudolph and Miss Williams reached the international Olympic standards in the 100, along with Barbara Jones (:10.6) and Martha Hudson (:10.9). Miss Rudolph and Miss Williams reached the international Olympic standards in the 100, along with Barbara Jones (:10.6) and Martha Hudson (:10.9). Miss Rudolph and Miss Williams also topped the Olympic standard in the 220.

Rose Lovelace of the Cleveland Recreation Division beat Grace Buocher of Cleveland's Magyar A.C. in the 880-yard run, cracking the record of 2:26.7 set by Flo McCardle in 1958. The winner was timed in 2:21.0.

Tennessee State's Joan Terry won the 80-yard hurdles in :11.5, shading teammate Shirley Crowder, who finished in :11.6.

The Tennessee State quartet of Misses Hudson, Crowder, Terry an Jones swept to victory in the 440-yard medley in :48.4.

ODESSA, Tex. (AP)—Don January of Dallas and amateur Dick Jennings of Lubbock, Tex., fired the lowest round—an 11-under-par 61—to move into a tie for the lead in the $15,000 Odessa pro-amateur golf tournament Saturday.

VOLS HOST DUBACH

Rallying Ruston In Town Today

No, the Ruston Ramblers aren't dead yet. And if anybody is going to catch them, they better hurry up.

Billy Henderson's freshman La-Ark League club snapped out of a recent slump to maul Bastrop, 10-2, Friday night and enjoys a 2½-game lead over second-place West Monroe as the season approaches the halfway mark.

West Monroe's Vals lost a chance to pick up a half game on the leaders when their game with fifth-place Sterlington was rained out Saturday night. Vol General Manager L. E. Frith said the two teams would try to make up the game sometime this week.

Ruston invades Monroe this afternoon while West Monroe hosts third-place Dubach at Confederate Park and Sterlington entertains Bastrop.

Monroe, last year's pennant winner, slid into last place Friday night when Dubach handed the Sports' ace lefthander, Fred Southerland, his first defeat of the campaign. Southerland had won half of Monroe's four triumphs before Dubach Hornets whipped him, 5-1, on four unearned runs Friday. The defeat also spoiled Vivian Pettit's debut as the Sports' pilot. Pettit replaced Red Sims, who resigned in order to devote more time to his duties as Monroe's American Legion coach, last week.

Ruston banged out 12 hits in its rout of Bastrop while tall Ray Germany scattered eight safeties in winning his fourth game against only one defeat.

The Ramblers had lost three out of five prior to their victory over the Barons Friday.

Dick Stigman Slows Down Yanks As Tribe Wins, 4-1

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland's Dick Stigman cooled off the New York bats Saturday, limiting the league-leading Yankees to four singles and striking out 10 as the Indians captured a 4-1 decision.

The 24-year-old southpaw got home run support from Vic Power and Harvey Kuenn, the latter with one on. Stigman (3-4) beat the Yanks for the second time this season.

For seven innings Stigman and Ralph Terry (3-3) engaged in a tight duel. Power's third homer of the season gave Cleveland a 1-0 lead in the first inning.

The Indians scored two more in the sixth on a single by Power and Kuenn's blast into the left field seats. Kuenn, hitting in his 10th straight game, boosted his average to .312. He has gained 34 points in that span as he sets out in defense of his American League batting championship.

The Yanks broke through Stigman in the seventh inning after he had held them to one hit—a third inning single by Bobby Richardson. Mickey Mantle walked with one out in the seventh and scored on back-to-back singles by Elston Howard and Bob Cerv.

The Indians added their final run, unearned, in the eighth off reliever Ryne Duren on a walk, Kuenn's single and a throwing error by Cerv, who played first base.

Stigman was in trouble in only the seventh. The Yanks had runners on first and second and one out after scoring one run. But Cletis Boyer bounced to third and Bubba Phillips stepped on the bag and fired to first to complete a double play.

Mixing a sweeping curve ball with a sizzling fast ball, Stigman had the Yanks swinging at air. He fanned eight in the first five innings, then added pinch-hitters Gil McDougald and Yogi Berra in the eighth inning. Stigman walked only two.

The Indians got five hits off Terry, who also hurled well. They added another single in the ninth off Duren.

FRIDAY NIGHT

Don Styron Gains Finals In 400-Meter Hurdles

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (Special) — Don Styron of Northeast Louisiana Track Club gained the finals of the 400-meter hurdles in the National AAU Track and Field Meet Friday night but finished last in a field of nine.

However, Northeast Louisiana State Coach Lew Hartzog said Don qualified for the Olympic trials despite his finish. Hartzog said Don clinched a chance in the trials by reaching the finals since several of the athletes who finished ahead of the Northeast hurdler had qualified for the Olympic tryouts at Palo Alto, Calif., next weekend in previous meets.

Hartzog said it was his understanding that the first six men in each event who had not previously qualified for the Olympic trials were eligible for the Palo Alto tryouts.

Don's twin, sprinter Dave, jumped the gun three times in the 100 meters and was disqualified. Dave was eliminated in the 400 meters when he finished fifth in the first heat. Only the top three in the heats qualified for the semifinals. Hartzog said Dave ran the 400 in 48.2.

Dave, however, had another chance to qualify for the Olympic trials when he ran in the 200 meters Saturday night.

Another Northeast athlete, field star Jerry Dyes also competed Saturday night in the hop-step-jump.

Don Styron was eliminated in the 110-meter high hurdles prelims, finishing just out of the money with a 14.3 clocking. Don finished second to Cliff Cushman of Kansas in a 400-meter hurdles Hartzog said.

High jumper John Thomas made the big news in the meet here Friday night.

The long, lean teen-ager from Boston University cleared 7 feet 2 inches at the National AAU Track and Field Championships Friday night, becoming the first jumper in history to scale that height outdoors.

But the summer is just beginning for the handsome, 19-year-old Negro, who will enter what he calls "the big one" next week and an even bigger one at the Rome Olympics in August.

The AAU meet, a generally unspectacular affair except for the towering leap by Thomas, winds up this evening. Sprinter Ray Norton, of Santa Clara, who won the 100-meter final, is performing near his peak and could steal much of the show with a victory tonight in the 200.

Thomas took three shots at 7-2. He appeared to make it on the second, but the bar came down moments after he did.

Thomas wouldn't say he cleared the standard easily on his third try. "But I didn't just make it over either," he said.

"I just had to make it," Thomas said later. "The second time," he said, "I cleared it and the wind knocked it off. I felt bad for a minute."

Thomas, who has gone 7-2½ indoors, said the last jump took so much out of him that he didn't feel like trying for anything above 7-2.

Asked how high he figures he can go in the next few years, Thomas responded elusively: "I can keep going up until I miss."

John's jump was a full inch better than the recognized world record, set by Russia's Yuri Stepanov in 1957, and a quarter of an inch better than Thomas' pending outdoor record. His indoor mark cannot be recognized.

Outside of Thomas, the only man to come really close to a world record was hammer thrower Hal Connolly. Connolly had a sore back—so sore he pulled out before the event concluded — but he heaved the ball and chain 224 feet 4½ inches—just 11½ inches short of his own world record.

Norton won the 100-meter dash without much trouble in :10.5, four tenths of a second off the world record. Saturday night he figures to be the class of a 200-meter field that includes world record-holder Dave Sime. Other in the field are Bobby Poynter, Dabe Styron, and Willie Williams.

Parry O'Brien defeated rival shot putters Bill Nieder and Dave Davis with a throw of 62 feet 6¼ inches. But, as O'Brien put it, the winning heave was "nothing to rave about." Parry's recognized world record is 63-4 and Nieder has a pending record of 65-7. Nieder putted 62-6 with a sore leg heavily bandaged.

The chief disappointment was Bobby Morrow's failure to qualify in the 100. Morrow, who won gold medals in both the 100 and 200 in the 1956 Olympics, has a chance to qualify in the 200 tonight.

Los Angeles Favored For Return Match

NEW YORK (UPI) —Promoter Bill Fugazy, fearing his relations with New York City police might become "even worse," said Saturday he is leaning toward Los Angeles in October for the third title bout between Floyd Patterson and Ingemar Johansson.

"There are two reasons why I am leaning toward Los Angeles at the present time," said young Fugazy, the majority stockholder in Feature Sports, Inc.

"For one thing," he said, "There's the matter of police protection. For another, Los Angeles never has had a heavyweight title bout like this one and I am sure the city would go all out to make the venture a success."

Fugazy, however, denied a report published here that a definite decision has been made to hold the bout in Los Angeles Coliseum on Oct. 17. He said that several other cities, "including Chicago", still are under consideration.

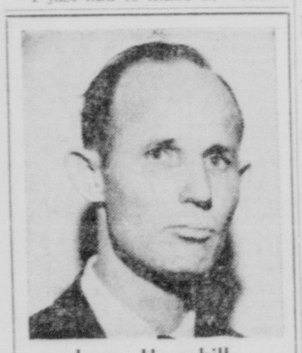

Fugazy, who charged after Patterson knocked out Johansson here last Monday to regain the crown and set up a "rubber match," that the New York City Police Department failed to provide enough police at the Polo Grounds, indicated that this dispute still is the chief stumbling block to holding the third bout here.

"I don't see a chance right now of holding the rematch here, although personally I would like to see it held in New York," said Fugazy.

WIMBLEDON TENNIS

MacKay, Hard Win Easily; Move Into Quarterfinals

By TOM OCHILTREE

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Barry MacKay and Darlene Hard, a pair of power-packed Americans waltzed ahead Saturday into the quarterfinals of the Wimbledon Tennis Championships before rain interrupted play for the third straight day.

A third Yank — Earl (Butch) Buchholz of St. Louis — had to scamper to the clubhouse to wait out a shower before wrapping up his match. He came back to whip Bert Gaertner of South Africa, 6-2, 6-4, 7-5.

MacKay, the pride of Dayton, Ohio, easily brushed aside Denmark's Jorgen Ulrich 6-2, 6-2, 8-6. The second-seeded slugger maneuvered to victory behind murderous serves and volleys which struck the court like bullets. He never was really pressed.

In the next round, he will meet Italy's classy Nicola Pietrangeli, who Saturday took out Jack Frost of Monterey, Calif., 6-4, 6-1, 6-2. Frost was a lost lamb up in the forecourt against Pietrangeli's angled stuff.

In the coed section, Miss Hard of Montebello, Calif., also banged away with great force to win her match once she firmly fixed in her mind where the service zones were.

She eliminated the Soviet Union's brightest hope in international tennis—Anna Dmitrieva, a 19-year-old art student from Moscow, 5-7, 6-2, 6-1.

Angela Mortimer of Britain, and South Africas Sandra Reynolds and Renee Schuurman joined Miss Hard in making the women's quarter-finals, reached Friday by defending champion Maria Bueno of Brazil, 17-year-old Karen Hantz of San Diego — the only other American woman survivor — and Britain's Ann Haydon.

Miss Schuurman eliminated U.S. Wightman Cup Captain Janet Hopps of Seattle, 6-3, 6-4, in the fourth round. Another American hope, Dorothy Head Knode of Panama and Forest Hills, N.Y., lost in a twice-postponed third round match to Britain's Christine Truman, 1-6, 6-0, 6-3.

MacKay, Buchholz, and Pietrangeli were joined in the men's quarterfinals by top-seeded Neale Fraser of Australia, Rod Laver of Australia, and Ramanathan Krishnan of India. Fraser whipped fellow countryman Don Candy 6-2, 6-3, 6-2, and Laver ousted Pierre Darmon of France, 6-2, 2-6, 6-1, 8-6.

Krishnan outlasted Ian Vermaak of South Africa, 3-6, 8-6, 6-0, 5-7, 6-2.

GINSBERG PAVES WAY

White Sox Rally Nips Boston, 7-6

By JOE MOOSHIL

CHICAGO (AP)—Joe Ginsberg, a newcomer to the Chicago White Sox, doubled in the bottom of the 12th inning and scored the winning run on a wild pitch by Tom Sturdivant for a 7-6 victory over the Boston Red Sox Saturday.

Ginsberg, a Baltimore castoff, kept the White Sox in the running throughout the long afternoon and led off the 12th with a double to left field, moved to third on a sacrifice and scored when Sturdivant uncorked his wild pitch with two outs.

It was a tough defeat for the Red Sox who blew a four-run lead in regulation play and then scored twice in the top of the 10th only to see the White Sox come back and tie it in the bottom half of the inning.

Bob Shaw, the seventh White Sox pitcher, who went the route last night in a 2-1 triumph over Boston, evened his record at 7-7. Sturdivant, fourth Boston pitcher, was tagged with his second defeat in as many decisions.

Boston broke out ahead 4-0 by the time the game had reached the third inning but were shackled from then on by relievers Dick Donovan, Turk Lown and Jerry Staley.

In the 10th inning, however, Boston scored twice off Staley when Russ Nixon singled home a pair of runs. Frank Baumann rescued Staley and got the side out without further damage.

The Sox came back in the home half of the 10th and tied it up on singles by Gene Freese, Ginsberg, Jim Landis and Nellie Fox.

Freese, who had four hits including a pair of doubles, had to leave the game because of a pulled leg muscle.

Freese's first double in the sixth inning with two out and one man on set the stage for Ginsberg's two-run single. Ginsberg then came home with the third run of the inning when starter Tom Brewer threw wild past first trying to get Landis, who had singled off the pitcher's glove.

14 INNINGS

Nats Clip Tigers In Marathon, 6-4

By DAVE DILES

DETROIT (AP) — Pinch hitter Billy Consolo doubled home the winning run in the 14th inning Saturday in a wild, marathon contest in which 38 players participated as the Washington Senators defeated the Detroit Tigers 6-4.

Each team used 19 players and the game took 4 hours and 18 minutes. Chuck Stobbs, who gave up one run and one hit in 3 2-3 innings — a game-tying home run in the 11th inning by Charlie Maxwell—got the win. Pete Burnside was the loser.

The Tigers battled from behind twice before the Senators finally ended the affair and stopped a four-game losing streak. Jose Valdivielso started the winning rally with a single and was bunted to second. Consolo scored him with a double, moved to third on a fly ball and tallied an insurance run on Bob Allison's squeeze bunt.

Washington had gone ahead 4-3 in the 11th when Earl Battey stroked a pinch double that scored Julio Becquer. But Maxwell's blast — tied half of the inning.

The Senators would have won it in regulation time, except for some shaky fielding. Becquer's two-run homer in the seventh gave them a 2-0 lead against rookie Bob Bruce, who made his second big league start. The runs were the first for Washington in 18 innings. The Senators made it 3-0 in the eighth when Billy Gardner's infield single scored Dan Dobbek, who had doubled.

The Tigers, who had starter Hal Woodeshick on the ropes four times in the first five innings, finally got him out in the eighth. Dobbek tried for a shoestring catch on Al Kaline's line drive and it got by him for a double. Third baseman Reno Bertoia backed up on Frank Bolling's grounder and it skipped past him for a run-scoring single. Johnny Groth got across the second run with a pinch single.

The Tigers tied it in the ninth when center fielder Dobbek was slow getting to Maxwell's safety that went for a triple. Kaline scored Maxwell with a fly ball to center.

DODGER RALLY FAILS

Spahn Preserves 4-2 Braves Win

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee Braves called on their old warhorse, southpaw Warren Spahn, to survive a shaky ninth inning and beat the Los Angeles Dodgers Saturday 4-2.

Spahn relieved young Ron Piche with two out and the bases loaded in the ninth. He retired Norm Larker on a fly to left field. It saved the victory for right-hander Bob Buhl, now 8-3. Buhl, whose lifetime record is 23-9 against the Dodgers, was pulled out of a jam in the seventh by Piche.

The Dodgers filled the bases on Piche in the ninth on John Roseboro's single and two walks. Then, with two out, Spahn cut off the threat.

Red Schoendienst's first homer of the season highlighted the Milwaukee attack against Don Drysdale, who lasted only four innings in suffering his 10th defeat against four victories and his sixth loss in a row. It was Schoendienst's first homer since Sept. 27, 1958. He missed nearly the entire 1959 campaign because of tuberculosis. The Redhead also got a single and a walk.

Schoendienst slammed the ball into the right field bleachers in the second for the Braves' first run. The Milwaukeeans picked up another tally in the fourth on successive singles by Frank Torre, Al Spangler and Charlie Lau.

Rawls Clings To Lead In Western Open

CHICAGO (AP) — Defending champion Betsy Rawls withstood hot pressure — including the meet's best round, a sub-par 72 by Barbara Romack—and clung to the lead at 4 holes in the $7,500 Women's Western Open Golf Tournament Saturday.

Miss Rawls, halfway leader by three strokes, fashioned a third-round 76 for a 225 and a one-stroke margin over Miss Romack and Mary Lena Faulk.

Miss Romack, who hasn't won a tournament since she turned pro two years ago, picked up four strokes on Beverly Country Club's par 37-36—73 course.

Miss Faulk, the halfway runner up to Miss Rawls, came through with a third-round 74.

Joyce Ziske's 76 put her in fourth place at 229, while two other 76 shooters, Mickey Wright and Jackie Pung, were tied at 231.

Bracketed at 233 were four players, including the top amateur, Phyllis Preuss of Pompano, Fla., who produced her second successive 77. The others notched at 233 were pros Louise Suggs, with a 78; Ruth Jessen, also with 78, and Fay Crocker with 80.

Patty Berg, seven-time winner of the Western Open, continued her comeback, but her 74 for a 237 came far too late.

Other leaders included Kathy Cornelius and Bonnie Randolph with 76 and 77 respectively for 24; Marline Bauer Hagge with 76 for 235, and Betty Bush with 80 for 236.

"My iron game was really sharp," said Miss Romack. "I was in trouble only once, on the 552-yard 11th when my second shot went into the trees and it took me four to get on."

Don Styron Gains Finals In 400-Meter Hurdles

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (Special) — Don Styron of Northeast Louisiana Track Club gained the finals of the 400-meter hurdles in the National AAU Track and Field Meet Friday night but finished last in a field of nine.

However, Northeast Louisiana State Coach Lew Hartzog said Don qualified for the Olympic trials despite his finish. Hartzog said Don clinched a chance in the trials by reaching the finals since several of the athletes who finished ahead of the Northeast hurdler had qualified for the Olympic tryouts at Palo Alto, Calif., next weekend in previous meets.

Hartzog said it was his understanding that the first six men in each event who had not previously qualified for the Olympic trials were eligible for the Palo Alto tryouts.

Don's twin, sprinter Dave, jumped the gun three times in the 100 meters and was disqualified. Dave was eliminated in the 400 meters when he finished fifth in the first heat. Only the top three in the heats qualified for the semifinals. Hartzog said Dave ran the 400 in 49.2

Dave, however, had another chance to qualify for the Olympic trials when he ran in the 200 meters Saturday night.

Don Styron was eliminated in the 110-meter high hurdles preliminaries, finishing just out of the money with a 14.3 clocking. Don finished second to Cliff Cushman of Kansas in a 440-meter hurdles Hartzog said.

The long, lean teen-ager from Boston University cleared 7 feet 2 inches at the National AAU Track and Field Championships Friday night, becoming the first jumper in history to scale that height outdoors.

But the summer is just beginning for the handsome, 19-year-old Negro, who will enter what he calls "the big one" next week and an even bigger one at the Rome Olympics in August.

The AAU meet, a generally unspectacular affair except for the towering leap by Thomas, winds up this evening. Sprinter Ray Norton, of Santa Clara, who won the 100-meter final, is performing near his peak and could steal much of the show with a victory tonight in the 200.

Thomas took three shots at 7-2. He appeared to make it on the second, but the bar came down moments after he did.

Thomas wouldn't say he cleared the standard easily on his third try. "But I didn't just make it over either," he said.

"I just had to make it," Thomas said later. "The second time," he said, "I cleared it and the wind knocked it off. I felt bad for a minute."

Thomas, who has gone 7-2½ indoors, said the last jump took so much out of him that he didn't feel like trying for anything above 7-2.

Asked how high he figures he can go in the next few years, Thomas responded elusively: "I can keep going up until I miss."

John's jump was a full inch better than the recognized world record, set by Russia's Yuri Stepanov in 1957, and a quarter of an inch better than Thomas' pending outdoor record. His indoor mark cannot be recognized.

Outside of Thomas, the only man to come really close to a world record was hammer thrower Hal Connolly. Connolly had a sore back—so sore he pulled out before the event concluded — but he heaved the ball and chain 224 feet 4½ inches—just 11½ inches short of his own world record.

Norton won the 100-meter dash without much trouble in :10.5, four tenths of a second off the world record. Saturday night he figures to be the class of a 200-meter field that incudes world record-holder Dave Sime. Other in the field are Bobby Poynter, Dabe Styron, and Willie Williams.

Parry O'Brien defeated rival shot putters Bill Nieder and Dave Davis with a throw of 62 feet 6¼ inches. But as O'Brien put it, the winning heave was "nothing to rave about." Parry's recognized world record is 63-4 and Nieder has a pending record of 65-7. Nieder putted 62-6 with a sore leg heavily bandaged.

The chief disappointment was Bobby Morrow's failure to qualify in the 100. Morrow, who won gold medals in both the 100 and 200 in the 1956 Olympics, has a chance to qualify in the 200 tonight.

WIMBLEDON TENNIS

MacKay, Hard Win Easily; Move Into Quarterfinals

By TOM OCHILTREE

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Barry MacKay and Darlene Hard, a pair of power-packed Americans waltzed ahead Saturday into the quarterfinals of the Wimbledon Tennis Championships before rain interrupted play for the third straight day.

A third Yank — Earl (Butch) Buchholz of St. Louis — had to scamper to the clubhouse to wait out a shower before wrapping up his match. He came back to whip Bert Gaertner of South Africa, 6-2, 6-4, 7-5.

MacKay, the pride of Dayton, Ohio, easily brushed aside Denmark's Jorgen Ulrich 6-2, 6-2, 3-6. The second-seeded slugger maneuvered to victory behind murderous serves and volleys which struck the court like bullets. He never was really pressed.

In the next round, he will meet Italy's classy Nicola Pietrangeli, who Saturday took out Jack Frost of Monterey, Calif., 6-4, 6-1, 6-2. Frost was a lost lamb up in the forecourt against Pietrangeli's angled stuff.

In the coed section, Miss Hard of Montebello, Calif., also banged away with great force to win her match once she firmly fixed in her mind where the service zones were.

She eliminated the Soviet Union's brightest hope in international tennis—Anna Dmitrieva, a 19-year-old art student from Moscow, 5-7, 6-2, 6-1.

Angela Mortimer of Britain, and South Africas Sandra Reynolds and Renee Schuurman joined Miss Hard in making the women's quarter-finals, reached Friday by defending champion Maria Bueno of Brazil, 17-year-old Karen Hantz of San Diego — the only other American woman survivor — and Britain's Ann Haydon.

Miss Schuurman eliminated U.S. Wightman Cup Captain Janet Hopps of Seattle, 6-3, 6-4, in the fourth round. Another American hope, Dorothy Head Knode of Panama and Forest Hills, N.Y., lost in a twice-postponed third round match to Britain's Christine Truman, 1-6, 6-0, 6-3.

MacKay, Buchholz, and Pietrangeli were joined in the men's quarterfinals by top-seeded Neale Fraser of Australia, Rod Laver of Australia, and Ramanathan Krishnan of India. Fraser whipped fellow countryman Don Candy 6-2, 6-3, 6-2, and Laver ousted Pierre Darmon of France, 6-2, 2-6, 6-1, 8-6.

Krishnan outlasted Ian Vermaak of South Africa, 3-6, 3-6, 6-0, 5-7, 6-2.

GINSBERG PAVES WAY

White Sox Rally Nips Boston, 7-6

By JOE MOOSHIL

CHICAGO (AP)—Joe Ginsberg, a newcomer to the Chicago White Sox, doubled in the bottom of the 12th inning and scored the winning run on a wild pitch by Tom Sturdivant for a 7-6 victory over the Boston Red Sox Saturday.

Ginsberg, a Baltimore castoff, kept the White Sox in the running throughout the long afternoon and led off the 12th with a double to left field, moved to third on a sacrifice and scored when Sturdivant uncorked his wild pitch with two outs.

It was a tough defeat for the Red Sox who blew a four-run lead in regulation play and then scored twice in the top of the 10th only to see the White Sox come back and tie it in the bottom half of the inning.

Bob Shaw, the seventh White Sox pitcher, who went the route last night in a 2-1 triumph over Boston, evened his record at 7-7. Sturdivant, fourth Boston pitcher, was tagged with his second defeat in as many decisions.

Boston broke out ahead 4-0 by the time the game had reached the third inning but were shackled from then on by relievers Dick Donovan, Turk Lown and Jerry Staley.

In the 10th inning, however, Boston scored twice off Staley when Russ Nixon singled home a pair of runs. Frank Baumann rescued Staley and got the side out without further damage.

The Sox came back in the home half of the 10th and tied it up on singles by Gene Freese, Ginsberg, Jim Landis and Nellie Fox.

Freese, who had four hits including a pair of doubles, had to leave the game because of a pulled leg muscle.

Freese's first double in the sixth inning with two out and one man on set the stage for Ginsberg's two-run single. Ginsberg then came home with the third run of the inning when starter Tom Brewer threw wild past first trying to get Landis, who had singled off the pitcher's glove.

DODGER RALLY FAILS

Spahn Preserves 4-2 Braves Win

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee Braves called on their old warhorse, southpaw Warren Spahn, to survive a shaky ninth inning and beat the Los Angeles Dodgers Saturday 4-2.

Spahn relieved young Ron Piche with two out and the bases loaded in the ninth. He retired Norm Larker on a fly to left field. It saved the victory for right-hander Bob Buhl, now 8-3. Buhl, whose lifetime record is 23-9 against the Dodgers, was pulled out of a jam in the seventh by Piche.

The Dodgers filled the bases on Piche in the ninth on John Roseboro's single and two walks. Then, with two out, Spahn cut off the threat.

Red Schoendienst's first homer of the season highlighted the Milwaukee attack against Don Drysdale, who lasted only four innings in suffering his 10th defeat against four victories and his sixth loss in a row. It was Schoendienst's first homer since Sept. 27, 1958. He missed nearly the entire 1959 campaign because of tuberculosis. The Redhead also got a single and a walk.

Schoendienst slammed the ball into the right field bleachers in the second for the Braves' first run. The Milwaukeeans picked up another tally in the fourth on successive singles by Frank Torre, Al Spangler and Charlie Lau.

Rawls Clings To Lead In Western Open

CHICAGO (AP) — Defending champion Betsy Rawls withstood hot pressure — including the meet's best round, a sub-par 72 by Barbara Romack—and clung to the lead at 4 holes in the $7,500 Women's Western Open Golf Tournament Saturday.

Miss Rawls, halfway leader by three strokes, fashioned a third-round 76 for a 225 and a one-stroke margin over Miss Romack and Mary Lena Faulk.

Miss Romack, who hasn't won a tournament since she turned pro two years ago, picked up four strokes on Beverly Country Club's par 37-36—73 course.

Miss Faulk, the halfway runner up to Miss Rawls, came through with a third-round 74.

Joyce Ziske's 76 put her in fourth place at 229, while two other 76 shooters, Mickey Wright and Jackie Pung, were tied at 231.

Bracketed at 233 were four players, including the top amateur, Phyllis Preuss of Pompano, Fla., who produced her second successive 77. The others notched at 233 were pros Louise Suggs, with a 78; Ruth Jessen, also with 78, and Fay Crocker with 80.

Patty Berg, seven-time winner of the Western Open, continued her comeback, but her 74 for a 237 came far too late.

Other leaders included Kathy Cornelius and Bonnie Randolph with 76 and 77 respectively for 24; Marline Bauer Hagge with 76 for 235, and Betty Bush with 80 for 236.

"My iron game was really sharp," said Miss Romack. "I was in trouble only once, on the 552-yard 11th when my second shot went into the trees and it took me four to get on."

Nats Clip Tigers In Marathon, 6-4

By DAVE DILES

DETROIT (AP) — Pinch hitter Billy Consolo doubled home the winning run in the 14th inning Saturday in a wild, marathon contest in which 38 players participated as the Washington Senators defeated the Detroit Tigers 6-4.

Each team used 19 players and the game took 4 hours and 18 minutes. Chuck Stobbs, who gave up one run and one hit in 3 2-3 innings — a game-tying home run in the 11th inning by Charlie Maxwell—got the win. Pete Burnside was the loser.

The Tigers battled from behind twice before the Senators finally ended the affair and stopped a four-game losing streak. Jose Valdivielso started the winning rally with a single and was bunted to second. Consolo scored him with a double, moved to third on a fly ball and tallied an insurance run on Bob Allison's squeeze bunt.

Washington had gone ahead 4-3 in the 11th when Earl Battey stroked a pinch double that scored Julio Becquer. But Maxwell's blast — tied half of the inning.

The Senators would have won it in regulation time, except for some shaky fielding. Becquer's two-run homer in the seventh gave them a 2-0 lead against rookie Bob Bruce, who made his second big league start. The runs were the first for Washington in 18 innings. The Senators made it 3-0 in the eighth when Billy Gardner's infield single scored Dan Dobbek, who had doubled.

The Tigers, who had starter Hal Woodeshick on the ropes four times in the first five innings, finally got him out in the eighth. Dobbek tried for a shoestring catch on Al Kaline's line drive and it got by him for a double.

Third baseman Reno Bertoia backed up on Frank Bolling's grounder and it skipped past him for a run-scoring single. Johnny Groth got across the second run with a pinch single.

The Tigers tied it in the ninth when center fielder Dobbek was slow getting to Maxwell's safety that went for a triple. Kaline scored Maxwell with a fly ball to center.

Simmons, Boyer Pace Cards' Win

By RALPH BERNSTEIN

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Ken Boyer's 19th home run gave the St. Louis Cardinals a 1-0 win over the Philadelphia Phillies Saturday as southpaw Curt Simmons earned his first major league victory in almost two years.

The 31-year-old Simmons, recently released as washed up by the Phillies, hurled a dandy six-hitter at his old mates, snapping their six-game winning streak. The veteran of 12 years in the National League, struck out six and walked only two in fashioning his first win since beating Pittsburgh 9-0 Sept. 1, 1958.

This was Simmons' second start since the Cardinals desided to take a chance on the one-time $65,000 bonus kid. He went well against Milwaukee in a recent outing and Saturday almost completed a game. With two out and a runner on second, Lindy McDaniel came on in relief to get Frank Herrera for the final out.

Boyer's home run, his second in two games here, was the third baseman's third hit in his last 30 at bats. It came on the first pitch from Jim Owens in the top of the ninth and pinned the eighth defeat in 11 decisions on the Philadelpha right-hander. Owens allowed but seven hits.

Simmons who last year won four games in the Eastern League while working his arm into shape after an operation, allowed only three men to reach second base, one on two straight walks in the first, another on a single and sacrifice in the second, and Lee Walls on a ninth-inning double.

Herrera, who had three straight singles off Simmons—he now has hit in 17 straight games for the National League season — sent home a crowd of 21,709, including some 14,000 non-paying youngsters with a routine fly to center fielder Curt Flood.

Duck Hunting, Pollution On Unit Program

Discussions on pollution abatement and duck hunting on Cheniere Lake headline the program planned for Tuesday night's monthly meeting of the Ouachita Wlidlife Unit.

The meeting will be held at 7:30 in the Virginia Hotel's Cameo Room.

West Monroe Mayor Allen Norris and William Rodriguez, Monroe streets commissioner, will make a report on the recent 47th national convention of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress. Norris and Rodriguez, along with unit member Bud Tidwell, attended the convention and meetings of the Congress' Wildlife and Recreation Committee.

Duck hunters are invited to attend the Tuesday meeting and give their views on hunting on Cheniere Lake. The unit will attempt to draw up plans to be presented to the Cheniere Lake Commission when it meets in July.

Chairman E. D. Elmore is slated to report on the unit's annual fish fry, to be held sometime in July.

June winners in the unit fishing contest will be announced, according to chairman Lloyd Voorhees. Voorhees urges all sportsmen, both ladies and men, to be present and receive their prizes. Also urged to attend are merchants who have donated prizes to assist in the presentations.

Program chairman A. B. Smith said a sports film will also be shown.

DELTA LEAGUE

Chatham To Host All-Stars Today

CHATHAM, La. (Special) — Chatham, declared the Delta League's first half leader by a coin flip, clashes with the All-stars from the loop's other five clubs here Sunday afternoon at 2:30 on the high school diamond.

Deadlocked with Eureka for the league lead at the halfway point, Chatham won the coin toss for the right to meet the All-stars for the second straight year. Last year Chatham won the annual contest, 4-3.

Ferrell Crowell, who has piloted the Chatham nine to an 8-1 record this season, will manage the hosts, with Bill Barton of Woodlawn and Whitey Weems of Eureka scheduled to guide the All-stars.

Mark Fuller, who has allowed only one earned run in 36 innings while picking up four straight wins, has drawn the mound assignment for Chatham. The infield will be made up of Bob Crowell at first base, Ralph Malone at second base, Buddy Ferrand at shortstop and Bobby Head at third base.

Bill Holloway, Delton Hearn and E. L. Joiner will patrol the outfield with Earl Spillers behind the plate.

Each of the other five teams have named four players to the All-stars. They are:

EUREKA — Jerry Aulds, Ralph Erwin, Jerry Lovett and D. J. Finley.

Drew had not submitted its players late last night.

No admission will be charged for the game, Manager Crowell said.

Dawson Gains French Finals

In the 36-hole final Sunday, Dawson will play Henri de LaMaze of France, who has won the event 10 times, including the past six in a row. LaMaze defeated Marius Bardana of France 2 and 1.

"I was playing well, but I had a little trouble, too," Dawson said. "I was two under 4s for the 14 holes we played. The fairways here are narrow and you have to keep the ball straight to do any good."

In the quarter-finals, Dawson beat Martin Christmas, 20-year-old British player, 4 and 3. De Urresti defeated George Iacono of South Portland, Maine, who is attached to the U.S. Embassy in Paris, 1-up on the 20th hole.

Bardana defeated E. L. Brantly of Chattanooga, Tenn., 4 and 3, and LaMaze defeated D. W. Frame of Britain 5 and 4.

Fight With Groom Costs Jockey Win

Under a precisely-timed ride by Darrell Madden, who substituted for Skuse, Jack-A-Muffin finished 1½ lengths in front of Trobar. Skilligolee was third.

Madden was riding his third winner of the afternoon and Jac-A-Muffin, claimed last March by the Jit Ranch for $7,250 was winning his third race in 11 starts and picked up $7,195 for his richest victory in two years.

Skuse had ridden two winners before his skirmish with the groom near the winner's circle after the co-featured Arlington Purse in which Skuse finished last aboard Mrs. Lottie Wolf's Idler.

Upon dismounting, Skuse said the groom swore at him and attacked him. Skuse fought back and landed several punches before police broke it up. The groom held on to Idler's reins during the melee.

OVER PHILS, 1-0

Simmons, Boyer Pace Cards' Win

By RALPH BERNSTEIN

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Ken Boyer's 19th home run gave the St. Louis Cardinals a 1-0 win over the Philadelphia Phillies Saturday as southpaw Curt Simmons earned his first major league victory in almost two years.

The 31-year-old Simmons, recently released as washed up by the Phillies, hurled a dandy six-hitter at his old mates, snapping their six-game winning streak. The veteran of 12 years in the National League, struck out six and walked only two in fashioning his first win since beating Pittsburgh 9-0 Sept. 1, 1958.

This was Simmons' second start since the Cardinals decided to take a chance on the one-time $65,000 bonus kid. He went well against Milwaukee in a recent outing and Saturday almost completed a game. With two out and a runner on second, Lindy McDaniel came on in relief to get Frank Herrera for the final out.

Boyer's home run, his second in two games here, was the third baseman's third hit in his last 30 at bats. It came on the first pitch from Jim Owens in the top of the ninth and pinned the eighth defeat in 11 decisions on the Philadelpha right-hander. Owens allowed but seven hits.

Simmons who last year won four games in the Eastern League while working his arm into shape after an operation, allowed only three men to reach second base, one on two straight walks in the first, another on a single and sacrifice in the second, and Lee Walls on a ninth-inning double.

Herrera, who had three straight singles off Simmons—he now has hit in 17 straight games for the National League season — sent home a crowd of 21,709, including some 14,000 non-paying youngsters with a routine fly to center fielder Curt Flood.

Duck Hunting, Pollution On Unit Program

Discussions on pollution abatement and duck hunting on Cheniere Lake headline the program planned for Tuesday night's monthly meeting of the Ouachita Wlidlife Unit.

The meeting will be held at 7:30 in the Virginia Hotel's Cameo Room.

West Monroe Mayor Allen Norris and William Rodriguez, Monroe streets commissioner, will make a report on the recent 47th national convention of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress. Norris and Rodriguez, along with unit member Bud Tidwell, attended the convention and meetings of the Congress' Wildlife and Recreation Committee.

Duck hunters are invited to attend the Tuesday meeting and give their views on hunting on Cheniere Lake. The unit will attempt to draw up plans to be presented to the Cheniere Lake Commission when it meets in July.

Chairman E. D. Elmore is slated to report on the unit's annual fish fry, to be held sometime in July.

June winners in the unit fishing contest will be announced, according to chairman Lloyd Voorhees. Voorhees urges all sportsmen, both ladies and men, to be present and receive their prizes. Also urged to attend are merchants who have donated prizes to assist in the presentations.

Program chairman A. B. Smith said a sports film will also be shown.

DELTA LEAGUE

Chatham To Host All-Stars Today

CHATHAM, La. (Special) — Chatham, declared the Delta League's first half leader by a coin flip, clashes with the All-stars from the loop's other five clubs here Sunday afternoon at 2:30 on the high school diamond.

Deadlocked with Eureka for the league lead at the halfway point, Chatham won the coin toss for the right to meet the All-stars for the second straight year. Last year Chatham won the annual contest, 4-3.

Ferrell Crowell, who has piloted the Chatham nine to an 8-1 record this season, will manage the hosts, with Bill Barton of Woodlawn and Whitey Weems of Eureka scheduled to guide the All-stars.

Mark Fuller, who has allowed only one earned run in 36 innings while picking up four straight wins, has drawn the mound assignment for Chatham. The infield will be made up of Bob Crowell at first base, Ralph Malone at second base, Buddy Ferrand at shortstop and Bobby Head at third base.

Bill Holloway, Delton Hearn and E. L. Joiner will patrol the outfield with Earl Spillers behind the plate.

Each of the other five teams have named four players to the All-stars. They are:

EUREKA — Jerry Aulds, Ralph Erwin, Jerry Lovett and D. J. Finley.

Drew had not submitted its players late last night.

No admission will be charged for the game, Manager Crowell said.

Dawson Gains French Finals

In the 36-hole final Sunday, Dawson will play Henri de LaMaze of France, who has won the event 10 times, including the past six in a row. LaMaze defeated Marius Bardana of France 2 and 1.

"I was playing well, but I had a little trouble, too," Dawson said. "I was two under 4s for the 14 holes we played. The fairways here are narrow and you have to keep the ball straight to do any good."

In the quarter-finals, Dawson beat Martin Christmas, 20-year-old British player, 4 and 3. De Urresti defeated George Iacono of South Portland, Maine, who is attached to the U.S. Embassy in Paris, 1-up on the 20th hole.

Bardana defeated E. L. Brantly of Chattanooga, Tenn., 4 and 3, and LaMaze defeated D. W. Frame of Britain 5 and 4.

Fight With Groom Costs Jockey Win

Under a precisely-timed ride by Darrell Madden, who substituted for Skuse, Jack-A-Muffin finished 1½ lengths in front of Trobar. Skilligolee was third.

Madden was riding his third winner of the afternoon and Jac-A-Muffin, claimed last March by the Jit Ranch for $7,250 was winning his third race in 11 starts and picked up $7,195 for his richest victory in two years.

Skuse had ridden two winners before his skirmish with the groom near the winner's circle after the co-featured Arlington Purse in which Skuse finished last aboard Mrs. Lottie Wolf's Idler.

Upon dismounting, Skuse said the groom swore at him and attacked him. Skuse fought back and landed several punches before police broke it up. The groom held on to Idler's reins during the melee.

Pirates Hand Cubs Ninth Straight Loss By 7-6 Count

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A seventh-inning sacrifice fly by Smoky Burgess made the difference as the league-leading Pittsburgh Pirates shaded the Chicago Cubs 7-6 Saturday. It was the Cubs' ninth straight defeat, the longest losing streak of the year in the National League.

Rocky Nelson tripled for the Pirates in the seventh and Burgess sent him across with the seventh run after the Pirates had three-run outbursts in the first and sixth innings.

Neither starter finished. The Pirates chased Moe Drabowsky with three runs in the first. Chicago retaliated with three runs in the fourth to knock out Joe Gibbon. He also gave up a run in the first.

Paul Giel, making his first relief appearance in weeks, earned the victory—his first of the year. He pitched 2 2-3 scoreless innings after relieving Gibbon in the fourth. The loser was Bob Anderson.

Roberto Clemente was ejected in the third inning after an argument with Umpire Vinnie Smith. The Pirates' right fielder protested a call at first base after hitting into a double play.

Trailing 3-1, the Cubs moved ahead with three runs in the fourth on five hits, two of them extra base socks by Don Zimmer and Jim Hegan. Zimmer tripled and Hegan doubled.

A walk to Gino Cimoli, Smoky Burgess' triple and back-to-back singles by Don Hoak, Bill Mazeroski and pinch hitter Gene Baker put the Pirates ahead to stay in the sixth.

PITTSBURGH MANAGER Danny Murtaugh sticks out his tongue at umpire Tom Gorman during a ninth inning argument in yesterday's Pirates-Cubs game in Pittsburgh. Gorman had ruled that Pirate catcher Smokey Burgess trapped a foul tip on what would have been the third stroke to Cub Richie Ashburn. Murtaugh disagreed with the call and told Gorman just that. The Pirates won, 7-6. (AP Wirephoto)

Condition Of Injured Racer Still Serious

LE MANS, France (AP)—Jonathan Sieff of Britain, injured in trials for the Le Mans 24-hour automobile race, remained in serious condition Saturday.

Hospital officals gave no further details, but Mrs. Sieff told a reporter:

"He had a very aggravated night and the doctors are not happy at all with his condition. He has a high temperature and is back in a coma."

Sieff, heir to a british chain store fortune, suffered a crushed pelvis. There was still some fear that his legs might be paralyzed.

Meanwhile, Fritz D'Orey of Brazil, also injured in the trials, was "much better" the hospital said.

5-Man Ring Royal Slated Monday Night

Happy Humphrey, the 750-pound behemoth who's death on bears, bulls and theater seats, and four other less bulky but more agile grapplers will square off in a five-man wrestle royal at the B&B Arena Monday night.

The five-man brawl, in which it's often two or three against one, heads an attractive card labeled triple main event.

Humphrey, who reportedly got his early mat schooling by pinning bulls and later bears, hit the headlines in New Orleans recently when it took a half dozen rescue workers to extricate him from a theater seat which caved in under his massive weight.

The five man royal sends all five into the ring at the same time, with the last one remaining on his feet being declared the winner. The event has no time limit.

The other four matmen will warm up for the five-man scrap in the other two main events. Billy Cox tangles with Firpo Zybysko in one half and Rod Rivera is matched against Tony Neopolitan in the other. Both are billed over one-hour time limits with two falls to win.

O'DELL COPS THIRD

Giants Win 2nd Over Reds, 5-2

CINCINNATI (AP) — The San Francisco Giants made it two in a row over Cincinnati, winning 5-2 Saturday as Billy O'Dell scattered 10 hits for his third win against seven defeats.

Only in the first and fourth innings did the Reds show life. Singles by Eddie Kasko, Wally Post and Dutch Dotterer producing one with Post's fourth homer of the season accounting for the other.

O'Dell helped his own cause by sparking a three-run third when, with one away, he singled through the box, was sent to second by Don Blasingame's single, and home with the first run on Jim Davenport's double. Blasingame scored on Willie May's sacrifice fly, and Davenport crossed on Willie Kirkland's single.

The Giants knocked out Cal McLish in the fourth when, after Dale Long singled but was forced by Hobie Landrith, Ed Bressoud doubled off the scoreboard. Don Newcombe took over. Bressoud was out at third, however, on O'Dell's bounce, but Blasingame's single drove Landrith and O'Dell across for another pair.

In all, acting Manager Tom Sheehan's Giants, who previously had lost four straight to Milwaukee, collected 13 hits, off McLish, who lost his fifth game against one victory, Newcombe, and Bill Henry who took over in the eighth.

'GREATEST' COMEBACK

Crawford Retains NCAA Golf Title

By FRANK PITMAN

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP)—Defending champion Dick Crawford of Houston fired four birdies in the closing nine holes to win the NCAA championship 2-up Saturday over Steve Smith of Stanford in collegiate golf's greatest comeback.

Crawford was 6-down after the morning 18 holes and rallied with a 1-under-par round on the afternoon 18 holes. NCAA officials said no one had ever been that far behind and finished the winner.

Smith's lead faded to 3-up at the end of 27 holes and Crawford evened it for the first time on the 33rd hole where Smith's second shot hit a sandtrap and he took a bogey 5 on the 465-yard hole.

Both birdied the 180-yard 34th. On the 613-yard 35th, Crawford dropped a 6-foot putt for a birdie and Smith missed a 4-footer that would have given him a birdie.

That gave Crawford his first lead. Off the 36th tee, Smith's shot went into the trees and he had to play it sideways to the fairway. Crawford was on the green in two and two-putted for the 2-up victory.

For the afternoon round, Crawford was 1-under-par with a 37-33—70 while Smith ballooned to a 40-38—78 over the 7,035-yard, par 36-35—71 Broadmoor Course.

In the morning session, Crawford had a 79-39—78 and Smith a fancy 35-36—71.

Smith's troubles began on the second hole of the afternoon round where his second shot strayed into a sand trap and he took a bogey 5.

On the next hole, No. 21, Smith's second shot landed in the sand again and he missed a 4-foot putt for another bogey. He lost another hole on No. 24 where he overshot the green and landed under pine trees. Despite a remarkable recovery shot to the green he took a bogey 5.

They halved 25, 26 and 27 to leave Smith's lead at 3-up going into the final nine.

On the 28th hole, Smith's second shot went out of bounds over the green and he took a bogey to lose the hole. Crawford canned a 25-foot birdie putt to win 29 and cut Smith's lead to 1-up.

Pirates Hand Cubs Ninth Straight Loss By 7-6 Count

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A seventh-inning sacrifice fly by Smoky Burgess made the difference as the league-leading Pittsburgh Pirates shaded the Chicago Cubs 7-6 Saturday. It was the Cubs' ninth straight defeat, the longest losing streak of the year in the National League.

Rocky Nelson tripled for the Pirates in the seventh and Burgess sent him across with the seventh run after the Pirates had three-run outbursts in the first and sixth innings.

Neither starter finished. The Pirates chased Moe Drabowsky with three runs in the first. Chicago retaliated with three runs in the fourth to knock out Joe Gibbon. He also gave up a run in the first.

Paul Giel, making his first relief appearance in weeks, earned the victory—his first of the year. He pitched 2 2-3 scoreless innings after relieving Gibbon in the fourth. The loser was Bob Anderson.

Roberto Clemente was ejected in the third inning after an argument with Umpire Vinnie Smith. The Pirates' right fielder protested a call at first base after hitting into a double play.

Trailing 3-1, the Cubs moved ahead with three runs in the fourth on five hits, two of them extra base socks by Don Zimmer and Jim Hegan. Zimmer tripled and Hegan doubled.

A walk to Gino Cimoli, Smoky Burgess' triple and back-to-back singles by Don Hoak, Bill Mazeroski and pinch hitter Gene Baker put the Pirates ahead to stay in the sixth.

Condition Of Injured Racer Still Serious

LE MANS, France (AP)—Jonathan Sieff of Britain, injured in trials for the Le Mans 24-hour automobile race, remained in serious condition Saturday.

Hospital officals gave no further details, but Mrs. Sieff told a reporter:

"He had a very aggravated night and the doctors are not happy at all with his condition. He has a high temperature and is back in a coma."

Sieff, heir to a british chain store fortune, suffered a crushed pelvis. There was still some fear that his legs might be paralyzed.

Meanwhile, Fritz D'Orey of Brazil, also injured in the trials, was "much better" the hospital said.

5-Man Ring Royal Slated Monday Night

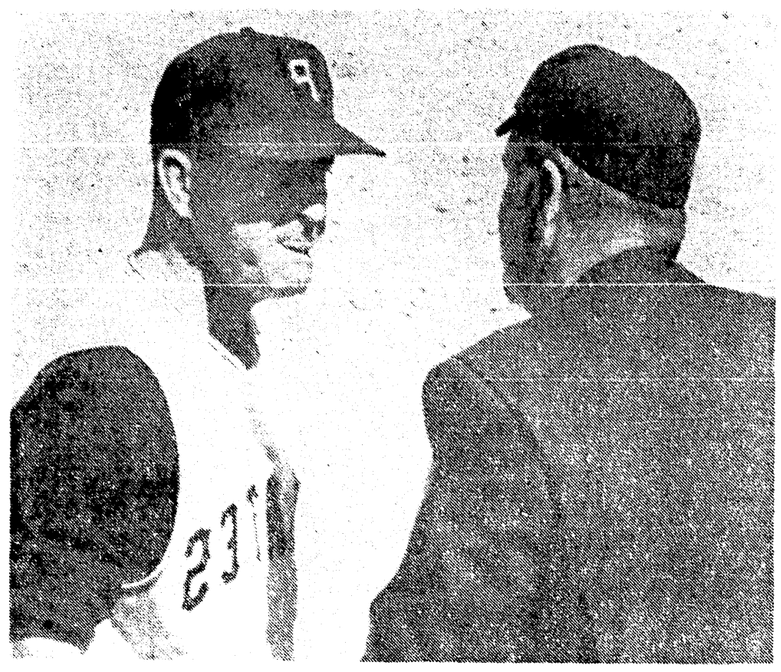

Happy Humphrey, the 750-pound behemoth who's death on bears, bulls and theater seats, and four other less bulky but more agile grapplers will square off in a five-man wrestle royal at the B&B Arena Monday night.

The five-man brawl, in which it's often two or three against one, heads an attractive card labeled triple main event.

Humphrey, who reportedly got his early mat schooling by pinning bulls and later bears, hit the headlines in New Orleans recently when it took a half dozen rescue workers to extricate him from a theater seat which caved in under his massive weight.

The five man royal sends all five into the ring at the same time, with the last one remaining on his feet being declared the winner. The event has no time limit.

The other four matmen will warm up for the five-man scrap in the other two main events. Billy Cox tangles with Firpo Zybysko in one half and Rod Rivera is matched against Tony Neopolitan in the other. Both are billed over one-hour time limits with two falls to win.

PITTSBURGH MANAGER Danny Murtaugh sticks out his tongue at umpire Tom Gorman during a ninth inning argument in yesterday's Pirates-Cubs game in Pittsburgh. Gorman had ruled that Pirate catcher Smokey Burgess trapped a foul tip on what would have been the third stroke to Cub Richie Ashburn. Murtaugh disagreed with the call and told Gorman just that. The Pirates won, 7-6. (AP Wirephoto)

O'DELL COPS THIRD

Giants Win 2nd Over Reds, 5-2

CINCINNATI (AP) — The San Francisco Giants made it two in a row over Cincinnati, winning 5-2 Saturday as Billy O'Dell scattered 10 hits for his third win against seven defeats.

Only in the first and fourth innings did the Reds show life. Singles by Eddie Kasko, Wally Post and Dutch Dotterer producing one with Post's fourth homer of the season accounting for the other.

O'Dell helped his own cause by sparking a three-run third when, with one away, he singled through the box, was sent to second by Don Blasingame's single, and home with the first run on Jim Davenport's double. Blasingame scored on Willie May's sacrifice fly, and Davenport crossed on Willie Kirkland's single.

The Giants knocked out Cal McLish in the fourth when, after Dale Long singled but was forced by Hobie Landrith, Ed Bressoud doubled off the scoreboard. Don Newcombe took over. Bressoud was out at third, however, on O'Dell's bounce, but Blasingame's single drove Landrith and O'Dell across for another pair.

In all, acting Manager Tom Sheehan's Giants, who previously had lost four straight to Milwaukee, collected 13 hits, off McLish, who lost his fifth game against one victory, Newcombe, and Bill Henry who took over in the eighth.

'GREATEST' COMEBACK

Crawford Retains NCAA Golf Title

By FRANK PITMAN

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP)—Defending champion Dick Crawford of Houston fired four birdies in the closing nine holes to win the NCAA championship 2-up Saturday over Steve Smith of Stanford in collegiate golf's greatest comeback.

Crawford was 6-down after the morning 18 holes and rallied with a 1-under-par round on the afternoon 18 holes. NCAA officials said no one had ever been that far behind and finished the winner.

Smith's lead faded to 3-up at the end of 27 holes and Crawford evened it for the first time on the 33rd hole where Smith's second shot hit a sandtrap and he took a bogey 5 on the 465-yard hole.

Both birdied the 180-yard 34th. On the 613-yard 35th, Crawford dropped a 6-foot putt for a birdie and Smith missed a 4-footer that would have given him a birdie.

That gave Crawford his first lead. Off the 36th tee, Smith's shot went into the trees and he had to play it sideways to the fairway. Crawford was on the green in two and two-putted for the 2-up victory.

For the afternoon round, Crawford was 1-under-par with a 37-33—70 while Smith ballooned to a 40-38—78 over the 7,035-yard, par 36-35—71 Broadmoor Course.

In the morning session, Crawford had a 79-39—78 and Smith a fancy 35-36—71.

Smith's troubles began on the second hole of the afternoon round where his second shot strayed into a sand trap and he took a bogey 5.

On the next hole, No. 21, Smith's second shot landed in the sand again and he missed a 4-foot putt for another bogey. He lost another hole on No. 24 where he overshot the green and landed under pine trees. Despite a remarkable recovery shot to the green he took a bogey 5.

They halved 25, 26 and 27 to leave Smith's lead at 3-up going into the final nine.

On the 28th hole, Smith's second shot went out of bounds over the green and he took a bogey to lose the hole. Crawford canned a 25-foot birdie putt to win 29 and cut Smith's lead to 1-up.

FULLMER VS. BASILIO

Savage Battle Shaping Up In Middleweight Title Bout

By ROBERT F. ALKIRE

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — If hobbies count, Wednesday night's 15-round NBA middleweight title scrap here between champion Gene Fullmer and Carmen Basilio is a stinkeroo of sorts.

For then in the clean, clear air of Derks baseball park, Fullmer—the West Jordan (Utah) Windmill who raises unfragrant minks—and Basilio — the Chittenango (N.Y.) Choo Choo who grows onions — meet in a rematch of their tough San Francisco battle of a year ago.

In that clash, Fullmer stopped the rugged little New Yorker in the 14th round and thus won the title the NBA had declared open after taking the mantle from Sugar Ray Robinson. The NBA dethroned Robinson for failure to defend often enough and sanctioned the Fullmer-Basilio match as a fightoff.

Most observers expect another savage body brawl for the upcoming affair, which will be televised (ABC, 9 p.m., EST).

Fullmer came out of the San Francisco battle with both eyes badly puffed. He obviously had halted some Basilio bombs with his face and body.

Secrecy is the watchword in both training camps this time. Fullmer is working out at the nearby West Jordan gym of his manager, Marv Jenson, and on alternate days the public and press are barred. Basilio, in his Ogden, Utah, camp, admits nobody.

But few observers expect either fighter to come up with anything yet unseen in the boxing business.

Fullmer surprised many when in San Francisco he showed a bit of ability to dance daintily and bob on occasion. But his success for the most part has been built on crunching body charges and hard slams to the rib cage.

Basilio, who knows how to bash with the best, says he doesn't plan to battle Fullmer in the same manner this time. "It'll be a different fight and this time I'm going to win," the New Yorker says.

The thick - shouldered Fullmer has been spending some of his training time yanking himself upward on ropes to pull out his reach. Jenson says it was a lengthy reach that paid off in San Francisco.

Fullmer desires a sharp, decisive victory from Basilio. The champ has had to settle for colorless decision over Spider Webb and a controversial draw with Joey Giardello in his two defenses since he won the crown.

Fullmer is a 7-5 favorite.

In an attempt to glean a $100,000 or more gate from 12,000-seats in Derks Field, promoter Norm Rotchschild of Syracuse, N.Y., and the co-promoting Intermountain Boxing Club have come up with a boxing "spectacular."

The preliminaries will include a 10-round go between Cedar City, Utah, knockout specialist Lamar Clark and Pete Rademacher, the Columbus, Ga., heavyweight who was floored by Floyd Patterson.

Clark has a 44-1 record with 43 kayoes. His only loss was a recent knockout at the hands of Bartolo Soni.

Quiz Star Wins Grassland 'Cap

CHICAGO (AP) — Quiz Star, flown in from New York several weeks ago especially for this race won the $28,785 Grassland Handicap at Washington Park Saturday.

The 4-year-old colt, owned by the Harbor View Farm, took the lead in midstretch and won by a length and a quarter over Manassas. He ran the mile and one eighth on the turf in 1:50 2-5 and earned $17,300.

Hasty House Farm's Martini II finished third and Jacnot Stable's Anxious Moment fourth in a field of 13. Another Jacnot horse, Santiago, lost jockey John Sellers at the stretch turn. Sellers was not hurt.

Quiz Star paid $8.40, $4.40 and $3.40. Manassas returned $3.80 and $3.20, Martini II $4.20.

Deadline for entering the tournament is Friday, July 1. Entries should be mailed to "SPAR Athletic Dept., Princess Park, Shreveport, La., Hoot Gibson, Tournament Director."

Monroe area teams interested in entering the tournament are urged to contact Jackie Neal at the community center, phone FA 2-2170.

Shoemaker Suspended

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Hollywood Park stewards Saturday suspended jockeys Willie Shoemaker and Eddie Burns for five days because of rides Friday. Both were set down from June 28 to July 2 inclusive.

Stewards said Shoemaker's mount in the sixth race, Perpetren, was disqualified after the jockey failed to maintain a straight course.

Burns, the officials noted, was up on Impelled when the horse crossed over and tightened up the field in the first race.

Pirates Sign Bonus Rookie

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Norman Housley, a 17-year-old outfielder-catcher from Colton, Calif., Saturday was signed by the Pittsburgh Pirates for a substantial bonus.

The Pirates outbid eight other major league clubs for Housley, a right-hander all the way.

TV GAMES TRIPLED

Fans Winners In Pro Grid War

THE SPORTS DIAL

By JIM KENSIL

NEW YORK (AP)—The immediate winner in the war of pro football leagues is the fan.

Expanding along with the game itself, pro football television next season will be three times greater than ever before.

Possibly as many as 50 games, including championship contests in both the National Football League and the American Football League, will be available in some cities.

Although complete TV schedules have not been announced, non-league cities with the three TV outlets are presently guaranteed a minimum of 47 games if the television outlets take advantage of the network offerings.

The Columbia Broadcasting system is expected to televise NFL games on 13 Sundays, Thanksgiving Day and two Saturdays late in the season. The 16 TV dates has been the CBS pattern for some years.

The National Broadcasting Co., with rights for the first time to Baltimore and Pittsburgh games in the NFL, can utilize the league's 13 Sunday dates plus the post-season title game for which the network has a long-term contract.

Therefore, the CBS and NBC games will add to a minimum of 30. Add the 17 TV dates of the AFL bought by the American Broadcasting Co., and there is a minimum of 47 games available to network TV.

With the possibility of preliminary playoff games in both leagues, plus a few added dates and post-season NFL game between the division runners-up, the over-all total could easily top 50.

As in past seasons, NFL TV games will be blacked out in areas in which NFL games are being played. The AFL will follow the same policy within its league, However, the two leagues will not respect each other's home dates.

For instance, only three AFL games (two on Sundays and the other on Thanksgiving when the AFL New York team is home) will be blacked out in New York City. The other AFL TV games will provide TV competition for the New York Giants of the NFL both when the Giants are home (and consequently blacked out in New York) and when the Giants are on the road (and televising back to New York).

There will be fewer AFL blackouts in New York and other cities of the new league because the AFL plans more Friday night games, while the established NFL is expected to continue its traditional pattern of playing most games on Sundays.

In an NFL city like Baltimore, in which there is no AFL competition, the TV fan can receive a minimum of 17 more games, the entire AFL TV slate. He also can expect to get some other NFL games, along with the Colts' out-of-town showings, on Sundays when there is no game in town.

The entire setup is involved and will vary greatly from city to city, but any way you add it up, the fan comes out the winner.

Szymanski Inks

BALTIMORE (AP) — Center-linebacker Dick Szymanski, who won a first string job on both offense and defense with the Baltimore Colts, has signed up for his fourth season, the club announced Saturday.

European Tour By Patterson Being Planned

NEW YORK (AP) — Cus D'Amato, manager of Floyd Patterson, said Saturday the heavyweight champion planned a European exhibition tour "within a month or so."

D'Amato said attempts were being made to arrange exhibitions in England, France, Germany, Italy and in Sweden.

A trip to Sweden would invade the home country of Ingemar Johansson, who lost his title to Patterson last Monday night in the New York Polo Grounds.

D'Amato said Steve Klaus would handle tour arrangements in Italy, and perhaps France, with Harry Levine acting as British and German representative. Patterson's manager is negotiating with an unnamed Swedish representative.

D'Amato said the exhibition was planned before the return title bout between Patterson and Johansson.

MRS. DONALD LANE TOON

Toon-Stephens Vows Pledged In Crossett

Miss Nancy Carolyn Stephens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Edgar Stephens, of Crossett, became the bride at 4:00 p.m. June 11th, of Donald Lane Toon, son of Mr. J. L. Toon and the late Mrs. Toon, of Cove, Arkansas.

The Rev. C. M. Atchley performed the candlelight ceremony in the First Methodist Church in Crossett. Floor baskets of white gladioli stood at the bases of four standing candelabra which held lighted white candles which reached across the length of the chancel.

Mrs. W. B. Anderson was organist, and Miss Beverly Russell soloist. Candlelighters were Misses Priscilla and Susanne Stephens, cousins of the bride.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown fashioned with a fitted bodice of Alencon lace embroidered in seed pearls. Its wide scoop neckline was edged in hand-cut scallops of the lace, and long fitted sleeves formed points over her hands. Her voluminous skirt of slipper satin appliqued in pearl-embroidered lace was caught up over a double ruffle of the lace which swept the floor. Her short veil of illusion fell from a tiara of seed pearls, and she carried a single white orchid.

Miss Norma Long, of Memphis, Tenn., cousin of the bride, served as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Charles Yauger, of Jonesboro, cousin of the bride; Mrs. Robert Fleming, of Dallas, Tex., cousin of the bride; and Miss Jo Helen Toon, sister of the groom, of Cove, Ark. They were identically dressed in pink lace sheath dresses, with bandeaus of pink tulle holding noseveils. They carried heart-shaped bouquets of sweetheart roses.

Miss Stella Ann Stratton, cousin of the bride, was flower girl. She wore a pink lace dress with full skirt, and carried a pink basket of sweetheart roses.

The groom chose his brother, Bill Toon, to serve as best man. Ushers were William Thomas Stephens, brother of the bride; Robert Green, cousin of the bride; and Charles Yauger, of Jonesboro.

A reception followed the ceremony in the church parlors. Smilax edged the bride's table, which was overlaid with white net over taffeta. A crystal epergne centered the table with an arrangement of pink roses and pink larkspur, and burning pink candles.

Mrs. Richard Jones, Jr., of Little Rock, cut the cake, and Mrs. Charles Wood poured. Miss Linda Orr, cousin of the bride, was at the bride's book. Also assisting were Mrs. C. M. Croom and Mrs. T. L. Parham.

The bride graduated in June from the University of Arkansas School of Nursing. The groom is a pre - medical student at the University.

Following a wedding trip to New Orleans the couple will be at home in Pine Bluff until the groom returns to his studies in the fall.

On Dit'

by Denise

This was a week for those who enjoy eating. Food at a number of various types of parties and gatherings ranged from the unusual to the plain good. There were exotic menus, country dinners, dainty party fare.

To a Southerner, nothing is ever better than a summer dinner of fried chicken, grits au gratin, corn on the cob, string beans, sliced tomatoes and cucumbers, with a dessert of homemade peach ice cream and cookies. This was the menu served by the CLAY WILSONS at their swimming - and - supper party Saturday night. . .Guests gathered on the patio for a dip in the pool before eating. Individual tables were set up around the yard. The buffet table, against the wall of the house, was decorated with a long ti leaf filled with fresh pineapple, peaches, bananas, cherries, and other fruits. Candles in hurricane shades wreathed with fruit flanked the central arrangement. After supper, there was dancing on the patio, and more swimming later.

Food with the flavor of the far-off Pacific was served at the Bayou DeSiard country club luau, the week's most elaborate party. The affair officially opened the new Reef room, and decorations carried the Polynesian theme throughout the club . . . An arrangement of fresh fruit used with a silver pineapple-shaped candelabra-epergne was placed on the table beneath the mirror at the entrance. Members paused here to pin on fresh orchids and don their leis . . . A beach scene complete to miniature swimmers and palm trees was used in the entry. Flanking the door leading to the new room were a peacock chair and a tall pyramid of fresh fruit.

Fresh orchids and gardenias floated in the fountain at one end of the main ballroom. Masses of greenery and white hydrangeas were banked around the fountain . . . . Individual tables were low, with cushions serving as seats. Fresh pineapple halves were used as bases for the candles and hurricane glasses which centered each green tablecloth. Surrounding the centerpieces were fresh flowers, sea shells, and leis . . . The bandstand was roofed with palmetto and hung with Japanese lanterns. The Blue Notes played for dancing from eight until twelve.

In the main dining room was the gold-covered buffet table, extending across one entire wall. A pyramid of greenery formed the base of the centerpiece, topped with an iron pineapple filled with Birds of Paradise blooms . . . At one end of the table was placed a roast suckling pig, garnished with fruit. Included on the menu were chicken curry, sweet and sour ribs, broiled lamb steak, barbecued beef, trout almandine, shrimp salad Hawaiian, egg roll with sweet and sour sauce . . . Rice a la Balinesian and spicy, bacon-wrapped string beans aroused particular comment . . . Hot apple pie and hot fresh fruit tarts were the desserts.

The Reef itself, reason for the party, is a gay place, with reed furniture, bamboo blinds, hemp carpeting, and a small dance floor. The name comes from the "reef" of native stone which extends along one wall. Hanging baskets of tropical flowers: sea shell, nets, and fish on the wall: and palm trees surrounding the floor are other accents. The wall of the bandstand is covered with a paper printed to resemble native materials . . . . Les and Wendy were playing in the new room, with Paul Jackson on the Hawaiian guitar.

MAXINE BOARDMAN, soon to move from Monroe with her family, was honored at a coffee party given by JIBBY FOX and MARY ALICE HUSTED in the spacious home of Jibby's mother-in-law, MRS. JOHN FOX on Riverside. Massive arrangements of blue hydrangeas in two silver wine coolers decorated the blue hallway. In the living room, where the honoree and her hostesses greeted the guests, were specimen white chrysanthemums and yellow day lilies . . . A mixed summer bouquet centered the dining table. Coffee and iced drinks were served with thin, crisp cheese dollars, bell pepper sandwiches, sharp cheese sandwiches, crusty pecan cocoons, and tangy lemon cheese cake squares.

For a summer luncheon, what better than tomatoes stuffed with shrimp salad and cooling lemon pie? This was the menu when ANNE BERNHARDT entertained, honoring her cousin, JOY BERNHARDT BATES at the Bayou DeSiard country club Thursday . . . . Joy, who was here this week as the guest of her parents, the PHILLIP BERNHARDTS, was also guest of honor at JEAN DAVIS' luncheon at the Paragon on Friday.

Newcomer HELEN and BOB LEWIS were welcomed to Monroe with one of our nicest kinds of parties — a boat ride and supper party on the "Playhouse". Hosts for the occasion were MINNIE and CARL TIDWELL, JANET MAHAFFEY, and CRAIG [illegible]. About twenty couples made the trip up river and enjoyed a supper of barbecued chicken with corn relish, Cole slaw, and baked beans.

And still the list grows of our people who are off for Europe. TAMAR READ, member of the music faculty at the University of North Dakota, was here last week for a visit with her parents, the PAUL READS in Farmerville, before flying to Paris Tuesday. She is now making a quick tour of Germany, Holland, and Belgium, and is scheduled to reach Paris Thursday. Beginning Friday she will be enrolled for a two-month course at the Fontainebleau school of music in the Palace of Fontainebleau. Robert Casadesus and Nadia Boulanger, internationally known figures in the world of music, are on the staff at the school . . . Tamar will be home in early September, and return to North Dakota September 10.

BERNICE FERGUSON and her daughter MARY JANE have returned from Memphis, where Mary Jane was a member of the wedding party for the marriage of SHIRLEY BANNISTER and BRUCE AVERY. Both bride and groom are classmates of Mary Jane at the University of Tennessee.

Leaving this week for Europe are MRS. JAMES SCALIA of Monroe, and her cousins, MR. and MRS. SAM A. DISTEPHANO and their son, RONALD of Alexandria. They will fly from New York to Manchester, England, where they will visit Mrs. DeStephano's parents, the FRANK BARLOWS. On July 12 they will continue to Paris, then to Rome and Sicily, where they will visit Mr. DiStephano's aunt, MRS. ROSARIO TURDO. Switzerland will be next, and then London. They will return to Manchester for another stay before boarding a plane July 29 for New York.

Former Monroyans arriving in town today are the LOUIS K. TURNERS of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. They will visit in their former home for several weeks. MR. and MRS. DALE MACKIE and young daughter of New Orleans will join them here for a few days.

The air is heavy with the passing storm.
The earth lies calm and free and glad again.
Through all its pores the flowering lilac bush
Drinks deep the pure cool freshness of the plain.
The world's reborn, transfigured by the storm.
The gutters shed a flood of rain. Now fair
And vast the blue beyond the shrouded sky,
And bright the ranges of celestial air.
But more exalted the poet of power,
Who washes clean away the dust and grime,
When by his art emerge transformed the harsh
Realities and truths of naked time.
For then our lifetime sorrows with the storm
Retreat. Free from the past of tutelage,
Our century proclaims the hour has come
To clear a passage for the future age.
No swift upheaval swelling of itself
Can make the way for our new age to be;
Our hope—the message of spirit kindled
By truth revealed and magnanimity.

THE POLYNESIAN BUFFET at the luau offered an interesting assortment of exotic dishes. Preparing to sample the island menu are Henry Bernstein, Jr., Mrs. S. E. Huey, Mr. Huey, and Mrs. Bernstein.

This was a week for those who enjoy eating. Food at a number of various types of parties and gatherings ranged from the unusual to the plain good. There were exotic menus, country dinners, dainty party fare.

To a Southerner, nothing is ever better than a summer dinner of fried chicken, grits au gratin, corn on the cob, string beans, sliced tomatoes and cucumbers, with a dessert of homemade peach ice cream and cookies. This was the menu served by the CLAY WILSONS at their swimming - and - supper party Saturday night. . .Guests gathered on the patio for a dip in the pool before eating. Individual tables were set up around the yard. The buffet table, against the wall of the house, was decorated with a long ti leaf filled with fresh pineapple, peaches, bananas, cherries, and other fruits. Candles in hurricane shades wreathed with fruit flanked the central arrangement. After supper, there was dancing on the patio, and more swimming later.

Food with the flavor of the far-off Pacific was served at the Bayou DeSiard country club luau, the week's most elaborate party. The affair officially opened the new Reef room, and decorations carried the Polynesian theme throughout the club . . . An arrangement of fresh fruit used with a silver pineapple-shaped candelabra-epergne was placed on the table beneath the mirror at the entrance. Members paused here to pin on fresh orchids and don their leis . . . A beach scene complete to miniature swimmers and palm trees was used in the entry. Flanking the door leading to the new room were a peacock chair and a tall pyramid of fresh fruit.

Fresh orchids and gardenias floated in the fountain at one end of the main ballroom. Masses of greenery and white hydrangeas were banked around the fountain . . . . Individual tables were low, with cushions serving as seats. Fresh pineapple halves were used as bases for the candles and hurricane glasses which centered each green tablecloth. Surrounding the centerpieces were fresh flowers, sea shells, and leis . . . The bandstand was roofed with palmetto and hung with Japanese lanterns. The Blue Notes played for dancing from eight until twelve.

In the main dining room was the gold-covered buffet table, extending across one entire wall. A pyramid of greenery formed the base of the centerpiece, topped with an iron pineapple filled with Birds of Paradise blooms . . . At one end of the table was placed a roast suckling pig, garnished with fruit. Included on the menu were chicken curry, sweet and sour ribs, broiled lamb steak, barbecued beef, trout almandine, shrimp salad Hawaiian, egg roll with sweet and sour sauce . . . Rice a la Balinesian and spicy, bacon-wrapped string beans aroused particular comment . . . Hot apple pie and hot fresh fruit tarts were the desserts.

The Reef itself, reason for the party, is a gay place, with reed furniture, bamboo blinds, hemp carpeting, and a small dance floor. The name comes from the "reef" of native stone which extends along one wall. Hanging baskets of tropical flowers: sea shell, nets, and fish on the wall: and palm trees surrounding the floor are other accents. The wall of the bandstand is covered with a paper printed to resemble native materials . . . . Les and Wendy were playing in the new room, with Paul Jackson on the Hawaiian guitar.

MAXINE BOARDMAN, soon to move from Monroe with her family, was honored at a coffee party given by JIBBY FOX and MARY ALICE HUSTED in the spacious home of Jibby's mother-in-law, MRS. JOHN FOX on Riverside. Massive arrangements of [illegible] hydrangeas in two silver wine coolers decorated the blue hallway. In the living room, where the honoree and her hostesses greeted the guests, were specimen white chrysanthemums and yellow day lilies . . . A mixed summer bouquet centered the dining table. Coffee and iced drinks were served with thin, crisp cheese dollars, bell pepper sandwiches, sharp cheese sandwiches, crusty pecan cocoons, and tangy lemon cheese cake squares.

For a summer luncheon, what better than tomatoes stuffed with shrimp salad and cooling lemon pie? This was the menu when ANNE BERNHARDT entertained, honoring her cousin, JOY BERNHARDT BATES at the Bayou DeSiard country club Thursday . . . . Joy, who was here this week as the guest of her parents, the PHILLIP BERNHARDTS, was also guest of honor at JEAN DAVIS' luncheon at the Paragon on Fri[illegible].

Newcomer HELEN and BOB LEWIS were welcomed to Monroe with one of our nicest kinds of parties — a boat ride and supper party on the "Playhouse". Hosts for the occasion were MINNIE and CARL TIDWELL, JANET MAHAFFEY, and CRAIG [illegible]. About twenty couples made the trip up river and enjoyed a supper of barbecued chicken with corn relish, Cole slaw, and baked beans.

And still the list grows of our people who are off for Europe. TAMAR READ, member of the music faculty at the University of North Dakota, was here last week for a visit with her parents, the PAUL READS in Farmerville, before flying to Paris Tuesday. She is now making a quick tour of Germany, Holland, and Belgium, and is scheduled to reach Paris Thursday. Beginning Friday she will be enrolled for a two-month course at the Fontainebleau school of music in the Palace of Fontainebleau. Robert Casadesus and Nadia Boulanger, internationally known figures in the world of music, are on the staff at the school . . . Tamar will be home in early September, and return to North Dakota September 10.

BERNICE FERGUSON and her daughter MARY JANE have returned from Memphis, where Mary Jane was a member of the wedding party for the marriage of SHIRLEY BANNISTER and BRUCE AVERY. Both bride and groom are classmates of Mary Jane at the University of Tennessee.

Leaving this week for Europe are MRS. JAMES SCALIA of Monroe, and her cousins, MR. and MRS. SAM V. DISTEPHANO and their son, RONALD of Alexandria. They will fly from New York to Manchester, England, where they will visit Mrs. DeStephano's parents, the FRANK BARLOWS. On July 12 they will continue to Paris, then to Rome and Sicily, where they will visit Mr. DiStephano's aunt, MRS. ROSARIO TURDO. Switzerland will be next, and then London. They will return to Manchester for another stay before boarding a plane July 29 for New York.

Former Monroeans arriving in town today are the LOUIS K. TURNERS of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. They will visit in their former home for several weeks. MR. and MRS. DALE MACKIE and young daughter of New Orleans will join them here for a few days.

The air is heavy with the passing storm.
The earth lies calm and free and glad again.
Through all its pores the flowering lilac bush
Drinks deep the pure cool freshness of the plain.
The world's reborn, transfigured by the storm.
The gutters shed a flood of rain. Now fair
And vast the blue beyond the shrouded sky.
And bright the ranges of celestial air.
But more exalted the poet of power.
Who washes clean away the dust and grime.
When by his art emerge transformed the harsh
Realities and truths of naked time.
For then our lifetime sorrows with the storm
Retreat. Free from the past of tutelage.
Our century proclaims the hour has come
To clear a passage for the future age.
No swift upheaval swelling of itself
Can make the way for our new age to be:
Our hope—the message of spirit kindled
By truth revealed and magnanimity.

THE POLYNESIAN BUFFET at the luau offered an interesting assortment of exotic dishes. Preparing to sample the island menu are Henry Bernstein, Jr., Mrs. S. E. Huey, Mr. Huey, and Mrs. Bernstein.

Miss Anne Bosttick Weds H. T. Rogers, Jr., Saturday

Of much interest to friends throughout Northeast Louisiana was the wedding of Miss Elizabeth Anne Bostick, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John Nathaniel Bostick of Gilbert, and Hollis Thames Rogers, Jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. Hollis Thames Rogers of Winnsboro. The marriage was solemnized at seven - thirty in the evening of June 25 in the sanctuary of the First Baptist Church of Winnsboro with the Reverends Clarence Ernest Young and Joseph William Boyd officiating at the double ring ceremony.

Candelabra holding tall pink tapers interspersed with pink gladiola and chyrsanthemums graduated to the altar. A massive arrangement of pink spring flowers above the baptistry centered the decorations. Woodwardia palms tied with ribbons were placed throughout the sanctuary. The family pews were marked by bouquets of pink blossoms and matching satin ribbons.

Selections of pre - nuptial music, played on the organ by Mrs. E. T. McClung of Winnsboro, preceded the ceremony. Miss Alice Elizabeth Broadbent of Hopkinsville, Kentucky, cousin of the bride, was soloist. She sang at appropriate intervals O Perfect Love, O Lord Most Holy by Cesar Franck, and Malotte's setting of The Lord's Prayer.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory peau de soie designed by Bianchi. It was made along princess lines with a scoop neck appliqued in Alencon lace and seed pearls, fitted bodice, and tight elbow length sleeves. The full skirt ended in a long chapel train. Her veil of imported silk illusion fell from a delicate crown of seed pearls and satin orange blossoms. For something old, the bride carried a handkerchief of point lace, made by her maternal great-great grandmother. She wore short white gloves and carried a white satin prayer book on which was placed Phalaenopsis orchids with streamers of stephanotis blossoms and ribbons tied in lovers' knots.

She was attired in a gown of petal pink silk organza designed with a fitted bodice having a bateau neckline and tiny sleeves. The full skirt featured a double pouf panel in the back. In her gloved hands she carried a cascade bouquet of pink streamers. Her jewelry was a pearl pendant gift of the bride.

The bridesmaids, similarly attired, were Mrs. Robert Wallace Pack, Jr. of Dallas, Texas, sister of the groom, and Misses Mary Odeyne and Jane Gill Bostick, sisters of the bride.

Ushers were Ernest Baccarini, Justin Henry Colvin, Jr., and Thomas Burk McDuff, Jr., of Winnsboro.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Bostick chose a powder blue sheath of silk organza over taffeta, fashioned with a wide portrait collar and short fitted sleeves. She wore matching accessories of blue and a corsage of white orchids. Mrs. Rogers was dressed in a Romance blue silk chiffon, designed with a full circular skirt, a shirred cummerbund and short sleeves. A corsage of white orchids and matching accessories of blue completed her ensemble.

MRS. JOHN MICHAEL CAGE

Ruston Ceremony Unites Miss Stovall, Michael Cage

John Michael Cage of West Monroe claimed as his bride Miss Mary Virginia Stovall of Ruston in a ceremony performed at the First Baptist Church in Ruston June 18. Dr. G. Avery Lee heard the vows in a setting of palms, tall standards of white gladioli, chrysanthemums and pink pompons, and pink tapers in candelabras laced with smilax.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Shelby Cage of West Monroe, and the bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Oren Trout of Ruston.

A pre - nuptial concert was given by Mrs. B. D. Allbritton, aunt of the groom. She accompanied the soloists, Miss Patricia Smith who sang "I Love Thee" and "Because"; and Buddy Brazil, who sang "The Lord's Prayer".

Miss Barbara Sue Stovall of Ruston was her sister's maid of honor. She was wearing a bell-shaped pink organza ballerina length dress, fashioned with lace bodice and full skirt of unpressed pleats. She wore a garland of pink leaves and forget-me-nots in her hair and carried a rose pink carnation bouquet fashioned in three tiers of small nosegays.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Jerry Watters of Ruston; Miss Carolyn Crain, cousin of the bride, of Shreveport; and Miss Suzanne Sloane of Shreveport. Their dresses and headdresses were like that of the maid of honor, and they carried similar bouquets of white shading to pink at the outer edge.

The bride entered on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. She was wearing an exquisite gown of pure silk peau de soie embellished with handrun alencon lace. The bodice with scalloped neckline was of the lace and peau de soie formed the princess line flowing skirt. Swirls of lace down the front formed an apron effect which was caught up in the back. A full flowing cathedral train fell from a flat bow. Her veil of imported illusion was held by a crown of lace and seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of white roses and lily of the valley, cascading effect with shower ribbon. Her only jewelry was a single strand of pearls, a gift from the groom.

Mr. Cage chose his brother, Joseph Shelby Cage, Jr., as best man. Groomsmen were Kenneth Caldwell of Shreveport; Gene Barham of Austin, Texas; Alton McCready of Natchez, Miss.; Donald De Loach, New Orleans; Larry Bowman, Ruston; and Randolph Cage, West Monroe.

RECEPTION

The bride's parents honored the married couple at a reception in the church parlors immediately following the ceremony. Guests were invited into the reception rooms by Mrs. W. B. Temple and Mrs. H. E. Shadowen. Mrs. Robert O. Trout, mother of the bride, and Mrs. J. Shelby Cage mother of the groom greeted the guests, and in the receiving line were the bride and groom, the maid of honor, and the bridesmaids.

The bride's mother wore a mint green imported Chantilly lace sheath with scalloped sabrina neckline and a drape of silk chiffon at the midriff forming a graceful flowing back panel. Her small pearl and sequin trimmed flower hat and other accessories were in a matching shade, and her corsage, a bronze orchid.

The groom's mother chose a champagne lace over willow green silk sheath fashioned with becoming cutaway neckline and short sleeves. The darker green silk satin cumberbund at the waistline accented the coloring of the dress and her accessories, which were of the same shade. She wore a green orchid corsage.

The cake table was overlaid with white swiss organdy over pink satin. A wide band of chantilly lace was draped across the front and caught at intervals with tiny nosegays of pink roses and valley lilies. The wedding cake, a beautiful blush pink confection, had pink roses and lilies of the valley cascading down one side held by a lover's knot. The lower tier was balanced by a single pink hand molded orchid. A garland of cultured smilax further enhanced the table. Mrs. C. R. Crain, aunt of the bride, and Mrs. P. L. Rishell, aunt of the groom, served the cake.

The punch table, covered with eyelet organdy over pink satin, held two silver punch bowls and was centered with a silver candelabra holding the bride's own bouquet and two tall pink tapers. The candelabra and punch bowls were also garnished with cultured smilax. Alternating at the punch bowls were Miss Mary Gallaway and Mrs. John McKim, aunts of the bride, and Mrs. B. D. Allbritton, aunt of the groom.

Miss Virginia Cage and Miss Carol Cage, sisters of the groom, alternately registered the guests at the bride's book, which was placed on a table graced with a single rose.

Tea girls were Miss Eva Jeanne Shirley, Mrs. Alice Marie Kennedy, Miss Evelyn Gibson, and Miss Toni Burton. Soft piano music was played by Mrs. G. W. McGinty during the reception. Misses Carol Jones, Kim Oglesby, and Nancy Barnes passed pink net rice bags to the guests.

When the bride and groom left on their wedding trip, Mrs. Cage was wearing a two piece bone pure silk linen sheath with accessories of pearlized champagne. A cocoa silk organza hat and a brown orchid corsage completed her costume.

After their honeymoon in the Ozarks, the couple will make their home in Ruston until September, when the groom will enter his senior year at the Louisiana State University School of Medicine.

The bride, who was president of Phi Mu sorority at Louisiana Polytechnic institute, was also a member of Phi Kappa Phi and Alpha Tau Delta honorary fraternities. She was elected to Who's Who in American colleges and universities.

Mr. Cage attended Louisiana Tech before entering the School of Medicine in New Orleans. He was a member of Pi Kappa Alpha and named to Who's Who in American colleges and Universities. He is also a member of Nu-Sigma Nu medical fraternity.

Miss Betty Scott Weds Jay Cummins Saturday

An atmosphere of beauty encompassed the sanctuary of the Parkview Baptist Church last Saturday afternoon when Miss Betty Corinne Scott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Scott, became the bride of Jay Hullum Cummins, son of Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Cummins.

The stained glass windows of the church caught the last rays of the day's sun and cast muted shades of light to mingle with the glow of multiple candles. Lining the chancel railing were graduated candelabra entwined with Sprengeria fern interspersed with white mums and chrysanthemums. A center focal arrangement of agapantha, gladioli, and mums pointed upward to the lighted stained glass cross in back of the altar. Two massive arrangements in wrought iron standards were placed on either side of the chancel.

Miss Sue Ann Kiper, maid of honor was similarly dressed and carried a bouquet of deep pink carnations. The junior bridesmaid, Cheryl Frazier, and the flower girl, diminuitive Robin Frazier, wore floor length gowns identical in design to those of the bridesmaids.

The fitted bodice and small cap sleeves emphasized the gossamer effect of the voluminous floor - length skirt embellished with sprays of seed pearls on Alencon lace and ending in a graceful cathedral train. Her finger tip veil of illusion fell from a small crown of seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of white Jafette orchids nestled in a bed of lace-like lilies of the valley. Her only ornament was a single strand of pearls, a gift from the groom.

Evangelist Gets Support

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

When Billy Graham began his evangelistic crusades 10 years ago, he was a controversial figure.

Many Protestant clergymen looked askance at the Madison Avenue ballyhoo that preceded his appearances. They deplored what they called the "circus atmosphere" of his meetings. They questioned the validity of his conversions. They charged that his "narrow fundamentalist preaching" would drive educated people away from Christianity.

Behind all of these specific criticisms was a suspicion — well grounded in the history of earlier revivalists — that Graham planned to glorify and enrich himself by leading his followers into a "Graham cult" outside of the established churches.

FEW CRITICS

You can still find churchmen who question Graham's methods and motives. But they are getting scarcer all the time.

The vast majority of Protestant clergy today respect Graham as a sincere ally who is making a valuable, if specialized, contribution to the common cause.

His acceptance by established churches, including such old-line bodies as the Lutherans and Episcopalians, is attested by their willingness to join in sponsoring his crusades. His current Washington crusade, for example, is being sponsored by the National Capital Council of Churches, an official inter-denominational agency representing more than 80 per cent of the Protestant churches in the Washington area.

Several things have contributed to the new attitude.

Evangelist Gets Support

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

When Billy Graham began his evangelistic crusades 10 years ago, he was a controversial figure.

Many Protestant clergymen looked askance at the Madison Avenue ballyhoo that preceded his appearances. They deplored what they called the "circus atmosphere" of his meetings. They questioned the validity of his conversions. They charged that his "narrow fundamentalist preaching" would drive educated people away from Christianity.

Behind all of these specific criticisms was a suspicion — well grounded in the history of earlier revivalists — that Graham planned to glorify and enrich himself by leading his followers into a "Graham cult" outside of the established churches.

FEW CRITICS

You can still find churchmen who question Graham's methods and motives. But they are getting scarcer all the time.

The vast majority of Protestant clergy today respect Graham as a sincere ally who is making a valuable, if specialized, contribution to the common cause.

His acceptance by established churches, including such old-line bodies as the Lutherans and Episcopalians, is attested by their willingness to join in sponsoring his crus

Candle Tree Planting Tips

By MILDRED SWIFT

This is about the last week you can put out Imperial Candle Trees. They must have time to put on growth to bloom for you in August and September. Get the bucket or pot plants. These trees give you so much pleasure for such a little investment. I saw some nice bucket plants last week selling for fifty cents.

Also, you can still put out caladiums (the plants) being careful not to disturb the roots when you transplant. Also, coleus can be put out now. Water all plants well, of course. I found portulaca plants in a nursery, if you don't want to wait for the seed.

DESERT PLANTS

Nurserymen are of the opinion that gardeners just don't like to spend the summer watering plants. Also, they feel that there are many beautiful desert plants that will grow here with just no care at all. So - they're out "hunting" - that is hunting desert plants that have been proven for climates such as ours.

In the fall, as a result of this search, we'll be seeing more yuccas and cactus and more varities of these. We'll be seeing new plants. Not that we're not pleased with our old tried and true shrubs, but we need more variety of texture and more small trees that bloom in the summer.

A small tree that blooms in the summer is the desert willow or chilopsis. There are a few of these growing in Monroe. Roach says several years ago he saw one blooming on Georgia Street. Please, if any of you have this plant, call me when it is in bloom.

Here is the description of this desert willow, a summer blooming tree: It grows about 20 feet high, about 10 feet across - not as large as our mimosa. It's a neat growing tree with foliage soomething like the willow. The flowers are about two inches long and orchid shape. The different varieties are red, pink, white, orchid.

The tree is evergreen and goes through the cold winters. There are a number of these planted around the court house in Benton, La. If you travel out west, this year, watch for the desert willow in bloom.

PALMS

We're appreciating the many varieties of palms, but nurserymen say select varieties that will go through the winters. Palms are easy to grow, they're beautiful when small and after they're full grown. They love heat and drouth. They give a variety in texture that many of our gardens need.

The palm is a strange plant. It does well transplanted in June, because when the roots are cut, they heal quickly and put out new ones. In Florida you see enormous palms loaded on trucks, and they'll have very little root system.

Several years ago when an old home in town was demolished, some full grown palms were pulled up and carried to the dumping ground. A gardener heard about this, sent one of the nurserymen to get them to plant in his (the gardener's) own garden. The tops were pruned back and the palms lived and put out again.

The three varieties that do best here are: Trachycarpus Fortunei, which grows 30 feet or more in height and has a palmetta type foliage. The cocus Australia has fronds that weep and are very graceful. The Texas Sabal also has the palmetta type leaf and grows not quite so tall as the Trachycarpus.

MORE GARDENING

Keep plants mulched. Soak about once every 10 days if this dry spell continues.

Two plants that root well in water are: Gardenias and oleanders. However, this process takes several weeks so don't get impatient. After they put out a set of roots plant them outside in a shaded area. Keep moist during hot weather. In the winter of 1961 they'll be big enough to move to a permanent location.

Again let me remind you to watch for roses sending up shoots from under the stalk on which they were grafted. You can distinguish these shoots because they have seven leaflets instead of five. Cut these shoots off close to the bark where they leave the main roots or they'll sap the strength from your plants.

HINTS

A tablespoon of vinegar added to the soap and water in which blue jeans are washed will help keep them soft, lint free and easier to iron.

Every now and then, give those popular plastic flowers and plants a swishing in luke warm water and soap or detergent suds. They'll look fresh and new.

A household that needs more drip drying space can now buy a handy metal cabinet with slide out garment carrier, electric blower attachment, and stainless steel catch pan and drain. This cabinet comes in a choice of 16 colors, to harmonize with kitchen and laundry areas. It can be used to drip dry freshly laundered clothing or home furnishings such as curtains or draperies.

Things are seldom what they seem! Now there's a wash and wear nylon fabric which looks just like soft, velvety suede. How nice to have a suede - like jacket which can be home laundered in soap or detergent suds.

An out - dated spinet, upright piano, or baby grand doesn't have to be a white elephant! It can have a new and glamorous lifetime in the recreation or family room or in the little girl's bedroom. Simply, "upholster" the case with washable self adhesive vinyl plastic, cut to fit. This transforms the relic into the focal point of the room. Choose your favorite color, solid or a clean white.

Oil cloth has gone glamorous these days. So beautiful and different it is, that you no longer apologize for an oil cloth table covering.

Place paint buckets in paper plates while painting. The plate will stick to the bucket and catch the drippings we amateurs always have.

Beauticians say, "women who wear glasses should always use mascara". And by the way, there's a type that is absolutely waterproof, even if you go in swimmng.

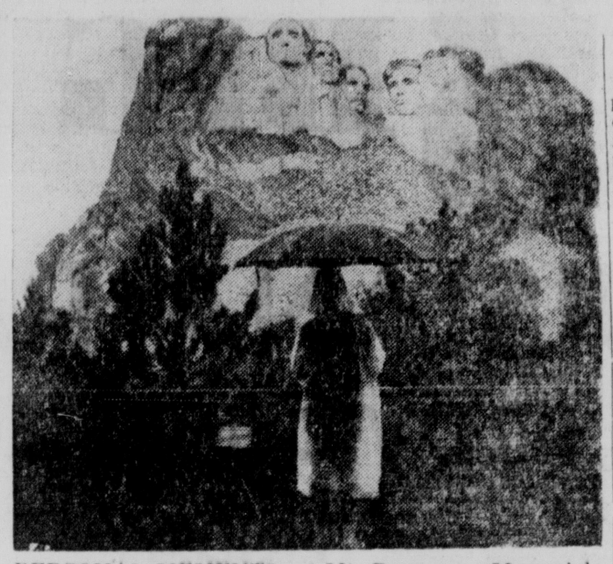

Summer is the time to wear comfortable clothes, nothing tight or binding. Summer girdles come in ventilated materials. Ventilated shoes keep the feet cool. Summer shoes should be a half size wider than those you wear for winter. Drink plenty of cooling drinks. Eat lots of fruits and vegetables. Leave off starches, heavy pies, thick sauces and gravy. Think cooling thoughts. Easy to say, but harder to do, isn't it?

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Pictures Revive Memories

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

With vacation season at hand, cameras, equipment and supplies need a thorough check. Vacation pictures are usually a once in a lifetime opportunity so the time spent in advance preparations is likely to pay dividends later in results.

Test new or borrowed cameras before using them on a vacation. Shoot a couple of rolls of film of the same type you intend using and under varying conditions you are likely to encounter. Make sure you're familiar with all working operations, especially the loading and rewind mechanism. Take the instruction booklet for reference.

CLEAN

If a camera hasn't been used for some time, clean it carefully. Open the back and check the shutter speeds and diaphragm openings while looking at the lens.

Empty your camera case or gadget bag and vacuum the interior. Check your filters, adapter rings, sunshade, flash cords and get new batteries for your flash. Add a lens tissue packet and, if you are going near a beach, a long-handle soft brush to dust out sand particles.

Order plenty of favorite film to avoid on-the-spot shortages. Stick to the type you have used or tested, but experiment if you wish after you have taken your basic pictures. Always carry an extra roll of film in your pocket.

Vacation movies demand much more attention than they usually get. They should not be haphazard snatches with wild panning. Good results depend on full-time attention at the transition points when luggage is being hauled and the train, plane or ship is boarded and when you pass landmarks or arrive at your destination. These are the moments that put the "move" in movie and they must be noted in advance or they'll be forgotten in the excitement.

HANDY

All cameras should be loaded and handy during the trip. And "handy" means around your neck, on your shoulder or on the auto seat. A camera should never be kept in that little hot box, the glove compartment. Nor safely stowed away inside your valise or hidden under the baggage in the car trunk. After all, do you want to show pictures of your trip or talk about the pictures that got away?

Get personal in your vacation pictures. Show your wife, your family, and yourself at times, as part of the scenery. But not in obvious, stiff, look-at-the-camera attitudes. They can admire the view, study signs, lean against trees, sit on fences, converse with local inhabitants, pet animals or do anything that can be classed as natural action suitable for the shot being taken.

Strive for variety in your camera angles. Take your normal eye-level views but see if you can't improve them with a high or a low angle. There are long, medium and close-ups not only in movies but in still photography. And for dramatic impact, circle your subject and shoot in side-light and in back-light, adding one and two stops to your exposure as compensation from normal front light.

Backgrounds are an essential part of vacation pictures, so they must be studied carefully. They must not clash or merge with foreground interest. Often just slight change in camera angle is all that is needed to maintain each element in the composition.

Vacation pictures, too, lend themselves to artistic framing through natural devices like archways, columns, tree branches, caves and tunnels. It's best to leave the foreground frame in silhouette to spotlight the background.

Shoot local signs, landmarks and road signs for picture identifications and as ready - made movie titles. But also keep a pocket notebook with names and dates noted and collect informative literature, souvenirs, hotel and resort menus to spice up your picture album later.

EXTENSION NOTES

Young Pines Are Damaged

By AUDREY DAWSON

Serious damage is being done to young pine trees in the landscape by the pine colaspis. The pine colaspis is a small light brown beetle that feeds on the needles causing them to turn brown. Our entomologists, Kirby L. Cockerham, recommends spraying the infested trees with a mixture of one-half pound of 50 per cent DDT wettable powder in 25 gallons of water, or dust thoroughly with 5 per cent DDT dust.

Watch for black spot on your roses. Black spot is the nation's most destructive rose disease, but it can be controlled easily these days. Thanks to the development of effective chemical fungicides. The fungus produces unsightly circular black spots on leaves causing them to turn yellow and fall off. The most generally recommended fungicide for roses at the present time is captan. It should be used at the rate of one pound per 50 gallons of water. If small amounts of spray are needed use one tablespoon of captan to a gallon of water.

The other disease that may cause you trouble is mildew. Buds stems and leaves infected with the organism that causes mildew have a whitish coating that is easily seen. Leaves frequently become curled and twisted after infection. Mildew is not controlled by many of the fungicides used to spray roses. Sulphur is one of the best materials to use. There is a relatively new material available now called mildex which is useful for the control of mildrew.

FACTS ABOUT MILK

According to research and studies children drink most of the milk. Children under 15 years of age represent one-fourth of the population and drink one-half of all the milk. Only 25 per cent of the adults over 21 drink milk. Only about half of the people in the U. S. drink milk. Twelve per cent of the south's population drink milk. We are very low.

If you are afraid that fruit juice curdles milk, you can relax — it does and in doing so saves your digestive juices the trouble. The first step in digesting milk is to curdle it. Experiments have shown that acid fruit juices often form a softer curd than the digestive juices.

Louisianans can live better these days because milk is more abundant. Milk provides about 100 food nutrients, minerals, vitamins, protein elements and fats.

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

Compositions Interesting

By MARY JARDINE

By GLADYS M. KULCKE
Guest Writer

The Bayou DeSiard Garden Club had a most interesting show in the Garden Center. In the horticulture division, Mrs. R. D. Farr exhibited a collection of Daylilies.

Mrs. Robert Farr used a rough block of wood for her composition of Helianthus, ivy, dried dock and aspidistria. She placed a large sand rock on the base. The golden yellow blossoms of Helianthus were placed in front of the rock, swirling to one side, back and above the rock giving depth to the design. The dock and curved leaves of aspidistria placed back of the flowers, continued to carry the rhythm of the design. An interesting combination of material and a long lasting composition suitable for the patio party.

COMPOTE

Mrs. Farr chose a small white milk - glass compote for her second arrangement. She created a diagonal line of Editor McFarland roses. The open roses were placed at the base of the design ascending with small roses and buds completing the diagonal line. Yucca was used back of the roses to strengthen the line. A small pink and green caladium leaf was placed over the rim of the container continuing the diagonal line. A very pretty arrangement for the daughters' bedroom.

Mrs. A. H. Smith made a cool white and green arrangement for the living room. She chose a vase of green glass. Esther Reed Daisies and narrow leaf Commodor Fern were used to make the lovely triangle design. Mrs. E. J. Foster used the circular form for her arrangement of all green material. She chose a dusty pink footed pottery container. The gracefully curved branches of bells of Ireland formed the circular design. A branch of pink and green coleus and magnolia leaves filled in the design. The combination of material was most pleasing.

SPRING ISSUE

The Brooklyn Botanic Garden has recently published the Spring issue "Plant and Gardens,," which every serious gardener in America will welcome. It is a directory of sources of plants. It not only tells where to buy the plants but it also serves as a descriptive guide to nearly 1,000 fine trees and shrubs. The material in this latest of the Garden's series of Handbooks, entitled "Trees and Shrubs for Every Purpose—Where to Buy Them", has been arranged for quick reference and use. There are complete indexes to both common and scientific names of all the plants in the book. The main part of the Handbook following the index, is devoted to brief descriptions of the plants which are in alphabetical order under seven different headings: dwarf coniers; evergreen trees; dwarf or low growing shrubs; flowering shrubs; shrubs planted for foliage and fruits; flowering trees, and deciduous trees planted for foliage. Over 100 firms are listed as sources of plant material. The list of firms alone is of special value to anyone looking for reputable nurseries which can supply such plants as rare species of maples, flowering cherries, crabapples, hawthorns, hollies, barberries, etc.

This 64-page handbook, printed on quality book paper, has been published as a service to all who are in search of plants that are not easily obtained. Single copies are available by mail for one dollar, from the Brooklyn Botanic Garden, Brooklyn 25, New York.

SOUTHERN GARDNER

Plant Food And Mulch

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

Before you put your summer mulch over the garden beds, scatter a liberal amount of fertilizer over the ground. Where a mulch is maintained on flower beds the year around, more fertilizer is needed for the plants because the old mulch is constantly using up nitrogen in the rotting process. Without the necessary nitrogen, the old mulch cannot decay very fast and may be stealing food from your plants.

In nature, the leaves next to the soil are decaying, and a new mulch is added every autumn. This is the way our soil is built. In the garden, you can hasten this process by applying enough fertilizer for both the plants growing there and the old part of your mulch. In this way, you will build up the soil faster than it is being used.

MIX

In using saw dust to build your soil, be sure to mix a pint of complete fertilizer with each bushel of fully rotted saw dust that you dig into your soil. When saw dust is used as a mulch, do the same thing. Raw, un-decayed saw dust is sometimes used as a sort of dust mulch one inch deep, but it is much safer to use partially decayed material with fertilizer in it.

Old newspapers may be used to hold the weeds down. Hoe out all the weeds, and then fit several thicknesses of paper over the soil and around your plants. A big pair of scissors will help you. If it is a windy day, spread soil over the papers as fast as you lay them. Then spread any kind of mulch deep enough to hide the papers. When coarse perennial weeds come through the paper cut them off below the soil.

Mulches help in preventing weed seeds from coming up by keeping the soil too cool for the weeds to germinate. Not all the weeds will be held down, but the job will be kept at a minimum.

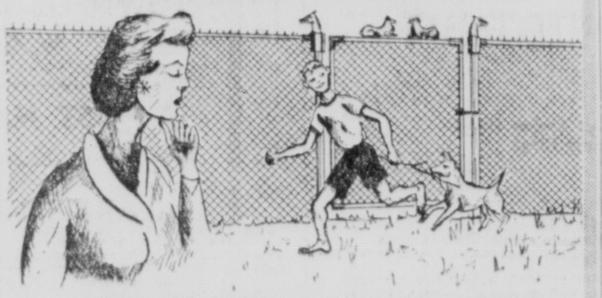

HARDY CYCLAMENS

The hardy cyclamens may be moved about now. Cyclamen neapolitanum, the one with the beautifully mottled evergreen leaves, will start to bloom in mid-summer. If you order the corms and plant them now, you will not miss any of the flowering period.

Things are seldom what they seem! Now there's a wash and wear nylon fabric which looks just like soft, velvety suede. How nice to have a suede - like jacket which can be home laundered in soap or detergent suds.

An out - dated spinet, upright piano, or baby grand doesn't have to be a white elephant! It can have a new and glamorous lifetime in the recreation or family room or in the little girl's bedroom. Simply, "upholster" the case with washable self adhesive vinyl plastic, cut to fit. This transforms the relic into the focal point of the room. Choose your favorite color, solid or a clean white.

Oil cloth has gone glamorous these days. So beautiful and different it is, that you no longer apologize for an oil cloth table covering.

Place paint buckets in paper plates while painting. The plate will stick to the bucket and catch the drippings we amateurs always have.

Beauticians say, "women who wear glasses should always use mascara". And by the way, there's a type that is absolutely waterproof, even if you go in swimming.

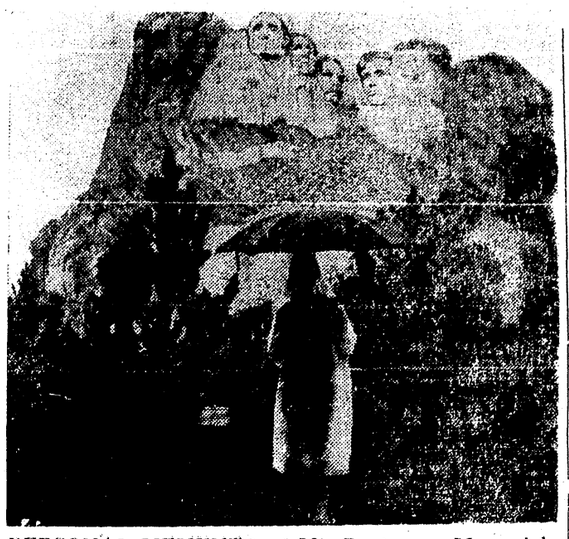

Summer is the time to wear comfortable clothes, nothing tight or binding. Summer girdles come in ventilated materials. Ventilated shoes keep the feet cool. Summer shoes should be a half size wider than those you wear for winter. Drink plenty of cooling drinks. Eat lots of fruits and vegetables. Leave off starches, heavy pies, thick sauces and gravy. Think cooling thoughts. Easy to say, but harder to do, isn't it?

Pictures Revive Memories

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

With vacation season at hand, cameras, equipment and supplies need a thorough check. Vacation pictures are usually a once in a lifetime opportunity so the time spent in advance preparations is likely to pay dividends later in results.

Test new or borrowed cameras before using them on a vacation. Shoot a couple of rolls of film of the same type you intend using and under varying conditions you are likely to encounter. Make sure you're familiar with all working operations, especially the loading and rewind mechanism. Take the instruction booklet for reference.

CLEAN

If a camera hasn't been used for some time, clean it carefully. Open the back and check the shutter speeds and diaphragm openings while looking at the lens.

Empty your camera case or gadget bag and vacuum the interior. Check your filters, adapter rings, sunshade, flash cords and get new batteries for your flash. Add a lens tissue packet and, if you are going near a beach, a long-handle soft brush to dust out sand particles.

Order plenty of favorite film to avoid on-the-spot shortages. Stick to the type you have used or tested, but experiment if you wish after you have taken your basic pictures. Always carry an extra roll of film in your pocket.

Vacation movies demand much more attention than they usually get. They should not be haphazard snatches with wild panning. Good results depend on full-time attention at the transition points when luggage is being hauled and the train, plane or ship is boarded and when you pass landmarks or arrive at your destination. These are the moments that put the "move" in movie and they must be noted in advance or they'll be forgotten in the excitement.

HANDY

All cameras should be loaded and handy during the trip. And "handy" means around your neck, on your shoulder or on the auto seat. A camera should never be kept in that little hot box, the glove compartment. Nor safely stowed away inside your valise or hidden under the baggage in the car trunk. After all, do you want to show pictures of your trip or talk about the pictures that got away?

Get personal in your vacation pictures. Show your wife, your family, and yourself at times, as part of the scenery. But not in obvious, stiff, look-at-the-camera attitudes. They can admire the view, study signs, lean against trees, sit on fences, converse with local inhabitants, pet animals or do anything that can be classed as natural action suitable for the shot being taken.

Strive for variety in your camera angles. Take your normal eye-level views but see if you can't improve them with a high or a low angle. There are long, medium and close-ups not only in movies but in still photography. And for dramatic impact, circle your subject and shoot in side-light and in back-light, adding one and two stops to your exposure as compensation from normal front light.

Backgrounds are an essential part of vacation pictures, so they must be studied carefully. They must not clash or merge with foreground interest. Often just slight change in camera angle is all that is needed to maintain each element in the composition.

Vacation pictures, too, lend themselves to artistic framing through natural devices like archways, columns, tree branches, caves and tunnels. It's best to leave the foreground frame in silhouette to spotlight the background.

Shoot local signs, landmarks and road signs for picture identifications and as ready - made movie titles. But also keep a pocket notebook with names and dates noted and collect informative literature, souvenirs, hotel and resort menus to spice up your picture album later.

EXTENSION NOTES

Young Pines Are Damaged

By AUDREY DAWSON

Serious damage is being done to young pine trees in the landscape by the pine colaspis. The pine colaspis is a small light brown beetle that feeds on the needles causing them to turn brown. Our entomologists, Kirby L. Cockerham, recommends spraying the infested trees with a mixture of one-half pound of 50 per cent DDT wettable powder in 25 gallons of water, or dust thoroughly with 5 per cent DDT dust.

Watch for black spot on your roses. Black spot is the nation's most destructive rose disease, but it can be controlled easily these days. Thanks to the development of effective chemical fungicides. The fungus produces unsightly circular black spots on leaves causing them to turn yellow and fall off. The most generally recommended fungicide for roses at the present time is captan. It should be used at the rate of one pound per 50 gallons of water. If small amounts of spray are needed use one tablespoon of captan to a gallon of water.

The other disease that may cause you trouble is mildew. Buds stems and leaves infected with the organism that causes mildew have a whitish coating that is easily seen. Leaves frequently become curled and twisted after infection. Mildew is not controlled by many of the fungicides used to spray roses. Sulphur is one of the best materials to use. There is a relatively new material available now called mildex which is useful for the control of mildrew.

FACTS ABOUT MILK

According to research and studies children drink most of the milk. Children under 15 years of age represent one-fourth of the population and drink one-half of all the milk. Only 25 per cent of the adults over 21 drink milk. Only about half of the people in the U. S. drink milk. Twelve per cent of the south's population drink milk. We are very low.

If you are afraid that fruit juice curdles milk, you can relax — it does and in doing so saves your digestive juices the trouble. The first step in digesting milk is to curdle it. Experiments have shown that acid fruit juices often form a softer curd than the digestive juices.

Louisianans can live better these days because milk is more abundant. Milk provides about 100 food nutrients, minerals, vitamins, protein elements and fats.

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

Compositions Interesting

By MARY JARDINE

By GLADYS M. KULCKE
Guest Writer

The Bayou DeSiard Garden Club had a most interesting show in the Garden Center. In the horticulture division, Mrs. R. D. Farr exhibited a collection of Daylilies.

Mrs. Robert Farr used a rough block of wood for her composition of Helianthus, ivy, dried dock and aspidistria. She placed a large sand rock on the base. The golden yellow blossoms of Helianthus were placed in front of the rock, swirling to one side, back and above the rock giving depth to the design. The dock and curved leaves of aspidistria placed back of the flowers, continued to carry the rhythm of the design. An interesting combination of material and a long lasting composition suitable for the patio party.

COMPOTE

Mrs. Farr chose a small white milk - glass compote for her second arrangement. She created a diagonal line of Editor McFarland roses. The open roses were placed at the base of the design ascending with small roses and buds completing the diagonal line. Yucca was used back of the roses to strengthen the line. A small pink and green caladium leaf was placed over the rim of the container continuing the diagonal line. A very pretty arrangement for the daughters' bedroom.

Mrs. A. H. Smith made a cool white and green arrangement for the living room. She chose a vase of green glass. Esther Reed Daisies and narrow leaf Commodor Fern were used to make the lovely triangle design. Mrs. E. J. Foster used the circular form for her arrangement of all green material. She chose a dusty pink tooted pottery container. The gracefully curved branches of bells of Ireland formed the circular design. A branch of pink and green coleus and magnolia leaves filled in the design. The combination of material was most pleasing.

SPRING ISSUE

The Brooklyn Botanic Garden has recently published the Spring issue "Plant and Gardens.," which every serious gardener in America will welcome. It is a directory of sources of plants. It not only tells where to buy the plants but it also serves as a descriptive guide to nearly 1,000 fine trees and shrubs. The material in this latest of the Garden's series of Handbooks, entitled "Trees and Shrubs for Every Purpose—Where to Buy Them", has been arranged for quick reference and use. There are complete indexes to both common and scientific names of all the plants in the book. The main part of the Handbook following the index, is devoted to brief descriptions of the plants which are in alphabetical order under seven different headings: dwarf coniers: evergreen trees: dwarf or low growing shrubs: flowering shrubs: shrubs planted for foliage and fruits: flowering trees, and deciduous trees planted for foliage. Over 100 firms are listed as sources of plant material. The list of firms alone is of special value to anyone looking for reputable, nurseries which can supply such plants as rare species of maples, flowering cherries, crabapples, hawthorns, hollies, barberries, etc.

This 64-page handbook, printed on quality book paper, has been published as a service to all who are in search of plants that are not easily obtained. Single copies are available by mail for one dollar, from the Brooklyn Botanic Garden, Brooklyn 25, New York.

SOUTHERN GARDNER

Plant Food And Mulch

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

Before you put your summer mulch over the garden beds, scatter a liberal amount of fertilizer over the ground. Where a mulch is maintained on flower beds the year around, more fertilizer is needed for the plants because the old mulch is constantly using up nitrogen in the rotting process. Without the necessary nitrogen, the old mulch cannot decay very fast and may be stealing food from your plants.

In nature, the leaves next to the soil are decaying, and a new mulch is added every autumn. This is the way our soil is built. In the garden, you can hasten this process by applying enough fertilizer for both the plants growing there and the old part of your mulch. In this way, you will build up the soil faster than it is being used.

MIX

In using saw dust to build your soil, be sure to mix a pint of complete fertilizer with each bushel of fully rotted saw dust that you dig into your soil. When saw dust is used as a mulch, do the same thing. Raw, un-decayed saw dust is sometimes used as a sort of dust mulch one inch deep, but it is much safer to use partially decayed material with fertilizer in it.

Old newspapers may be used to hold the weeds down. Hoe out all the weeds, and then fit several thicknesses of paper over the soil and around your plants. A big pair of scissors will help you. If it is a windy day, spread soil over the papers as fast as you lay them. Then spread any kind of mulch deep enough to hide the papers. When coarse perennial weeds come through the paper cut them off below the soil.

Mulches help in preventing weed seeds from coming up by keeping the soil too cool for the weeds to germinate. Not all the weeds will be held down, but the job will be kept at a minimum.

HARDY CYCLAMENS

The hardy cyclamens may be moved about now. Cyclamen neapolitanum, the one with the beautifully mottled evergreen leaves, will start to bloom in mid-summer. If you order the corms and plant them now, you will not miss any of the flowering period.

Physician May Suggest Hypnosis As Treatment

By ALTON BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Writer

The odds are good, and growing, that your doctor will suggest hypnotizing you as part of your medical treatment, or to aid in surgery or childbirth.

Before you rear back in dismay, or start calling him a stagestruck charlatan, consider current medical facts and viewpoints on hypnosis.

Today at least 7,000 U.S. physicians and as many dentists are actively using hypnosis, and many are taking courses to learn how.

Medical journals and speakers increasingly report benefits from hypnosis to kill pain in hopeless cancer, or pain after surgery, as an aid ti breaking some bad habits, or in losing weight, or in having babies with less or sometimes no anesthesia.

They also warn it's no panacea, that it has limitations and even hazards if used unwisely.

Two years ago the American Medical Assn. approved hypnosis as an acceptable type of medical treatment.

Hypnosis dates way back to early human times, and bears some taint of theatrical magic since it's often used to provide mystifying and entertaining stage shows.

Nor is hypnosis news in medicine. It has waxes and waned before in popularity. But in this latest revival, hypnosis is being studied scientifically, to pin down benefits and limitations, and this time it bids to stay.

Q: Exactly what is hypnosis?

A: There is no satisfactory definition yet, any more than there are real definitions of sleep or consciousness, says Dr. Lewis R. Wolberg, New York psychiatrist, who has employed hypnosis as one technique of therapy for 20 years. Hypnosis lies somewhere between sleep and wakefulness, he says. It owes its efficacy to a state of expanded suggestibility, and all of us are normally suggestible.

Q: What happens in hypnosis?

A: You simply accept and act on the suggestions given you—to relax, to feel sleepy, to feel no pain, or carry out some suggestion after the trance, even long afterward.

Q: How does it feel to be hypnotized?

A: You don't sleep. In fact, your senses are all more acute than normally. Many people come out of a trance certain they had not been hypnotized at all. The trance makes you feel pleasantly relaxed.

Q: Do you lose your will power, or "fall under the spell" of the hypnotist?

A: No, you can actually wake yourself at any time you want.

Q: Can everyone by hypnotized?

A: No. Experts estimate 80 to 90 per cent of us can be induced into a light trance, about half of us into a middle stage, and only about 20 per cent into a deep or somnambulistic trance, resembling deep sleep.

Q: Will people commit immoral or criminal acts under hypnosis?

A: They awaken before doing anything they ordinarily would not do. In 25 years, only three documented cases of actual criminal acts involving hypnotic suggestion have been reported, says Dr. Martin T. Orne of Harvard Medical School.

Q: Can hypnosis make childbirth completely painless?

A: Only for some few women. But many others can be helped to relax, to reduce fears and tensions, and need less anesthesia.

Q: Can hypno is really banish the pain of cancer?

A: Perhaps half of cancer patients can get some relief or control of pain, and 10 per cent may need no pain-killing drugs at all. The pain is still there, but hypnosis permits them to block out the perception of pain.

Q: Can a person hypnotize himself?

A: He can be taught to do so, and this is often done with cancer. Self-hypnosis should be employed only under the direction of a competent professional person.

Q: Can a person be hypnotized against his will?

A: No, he must cooperate.

Q: Are dumb or bright persons easier to hypnotize?

A: The intelligent, well-adjusted person generally is easier. But this varies.

Q: Can hypnosis help you lose weight?

A: Yes, and no. It can help the person who's fat because of faulty diet, helping him follow a good diet. But the true food addict — if just told that favorite foods no longer will taste good —either overcomes the suggestion or can fall into other trouble because of needed crutch has been taken away.

Q: Can it help someone quit smoking?

A: Again yes, sometimes. But much depends upon his real desire to stop, and his reasons for excessive smoking. One woman quit, through hypnosis, but then began eating too much and gained 40 pounds. Hypnotized again, she stopped gorging, but became an alcoholic. She needed psychotherapy to gain insight into her fundamental problems and tensions. Just taking away one crutch led to substituting another.

Q: How does hypnosis aid in psychotherapy?

A: With it, the trained psychiatrist can help the patients recall experiences or reactions lying at the root of his problems, so he can gain insight.

Q: Under hypnosis, do people really re-live past and even forgotten experiences?

A: Yes, in part, such as remembering details of a childhood birthday party. But the recollections may not be accurate, in part at least. Some "facts" may be fancied in efforts to remember and to please the hypnotist, for a hypnotized person invaribly wishes to reply to the suggestions given to him. But such fantasies can also supply clues to emotional conflicts.

Q: This means a hypnotized person doesn't always tell the truth?

A: By no means. Lying or fibbing can be easier. A main reason is the person wants to cooperate with the hypnotist, and give answers. They needn't necessarily be true, with the subject not consciously lying, but inventing.

Q: Can a hypnotized person recall things that supposedly happened in a previous life?

A: Authorities find no evidence for the Bridey Murphy type of tale. They explain the subject responds to suggestion, calling upon half-forgotten experiences which happen to fit as "evidence" for events in a former life.

Q: How useful is hypnosis in surgery? Can it eliminate need for chemical anesthesia?

A: In minor surgery, it often can. But only rarely in major surgery can hypnosis be the sole anesthesia, so no pain is felt. But hypnosis can help patients relax, to be less tense and fearful. So they need less of the usual anesthetics.

Q: Can children be hypnotized?

A: Yes, and they're often the best subjects because they are imaginative. Hypnosis can be particularly helpful in preparing many children for surgery.

Q: What are other main medical uses of hypnosis?

A: To reduce or eliminate pain or distress after surgery; to reduce pain in burns or in changing bandages; in making some medical examinations or treatments more comfortable; helping patients lie still when skin is being grafted, for example, from the abdomen to the hand; in repairing dislocations.

Q: Is hypnosis helpful in dentistry?

A: Very often, in reducing pain, or tensions in drilling or extracting teeth, dental surgery and other procedures.

Q: Is it safe to hypnotize anyone at all?

A: Hypnosis is no parlor game to be played by amateurs who don't understand the complexity of human beings. In the hands of trained medical persons it is safe.

Q: Where does hypnosis stand now and in the future in medicine?

A: As a useful tool, one more technique for treating a variety of situations, and just that. Sound experience can make it a permanent part of medical practice, showing where it fits and works, and where it doesn't.

Retired Pair Held Prisoners By Bee Swarm

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)—A retired couple are prisoners in their own home. For three weeks Mr. and Mrs. Allen S. Vaughan have been besieged by bees.

It began when part of a swarm found a hole and took up residence between the inside and outside wall of the breakfast nook.

"It wasn't until about a day later that I realized what I had done. I had sealed the queen bee and about half the colony in my wall. The rest of the colony is on the loose, and they want in—bad."

Whenever the Vaughans make a noise in their breakfast room, the queenless half of the colony comes swooping over the treetops to attack the house. That's not all. They keep a watch on the doors—and the Vaughans have taken to staying in all day.

Vaughan has tried spraying the bees with insecticide, scalding water and several commercial bug bombs. Didn't work.

Experts tell him just to be patient and wait for the bees to die.

"I've been patient—I've waited three weeks," he sighed. "I want to mow my lawn, pick my apricots and spray my orchard."

Millers Ferry Dam Project To Get Funds

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Lister Hill (D-Ala.) said Saturday that the Senate appropriations committee will approve a public works bill early next week, including $200,000 for the Millers Ferry Dam in Alabama.

"I am certain that the committee will include the money," Hill said. "There is no question about it."

The biggest hurdle in getting additional planning money for the Millers Ferry Dam was overcome earlier this year when the House finally approved a $200,000 appropriation.

In the past three years, the Senate included between $150,000 and $200,000 for the project but the House did not. It always failed to survive the compromise House-Senate version of the bill.

As in other years, the amount does not have the approval of the administration, but Hill said he doubted very much if President Eisenhower would veto the Public Works Appropriations Bill.

The completion of the Millers Ferry Dam is considered the first step in the development of the entire Coosa-Alabama Waterway.

Physician May Suggest Hypnosis As Treatment

By ALTON BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Writer

The odds are good, and growing, that your doctor will suggest hypnotizing you as part of your medical treatment, or to aid in surgery or childbirth.

Before you rear back in dismay, or start calling him a stagestruck charlatan, consider current medical facts and viewpoints on hypnosis.

Today at least 7,000 U.S. physicians and as many dentists are actively using hypnosis, and many are taking courses to learn how.

Medical journals and speakers increasingly report benefits from hypnosis to kill pain in hopeless cancer, or pain after surgery, as an aid ti breaking some bad habits, or in losing weight, or in having babies with less or sometimes no anesthesia.

They also warn it's no panacea, that it has limitations and even hazards if used unwisely.

Two years ago the American Medical Assn. approved hypnosis as an acceptable type of medical treatment.

Hypnosis dates way back to early human times, and bears some taint of theatrical magic since it's often used to provide mystifying and entertaining stage shews.

Nor is hypnosis news in medicine. It has waxes and waned before in popularity. But in this latest revival, hypnosis is being studied scientifically, to pin down benefits and limitations, and this time it bids to stay.

Q: Exactly what is hypnosis?

A: There is no satisfactory definination yet, any more than there are real definitions of sleep or consciousness, says Dr. Lewis R. U.S. Business Keeping Steady Pace, Reports Nationwide Mid-Year Survey

By JACK LEFLER
Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Business entered the summer season this week with the automobile industry holding its strong pace and the steel industry continuing its slide.

Plus and minus signs were pretty well divided throughout the economic field. Retail trade and carloadings advanced, heavy construction and truck tonnage declined and homebuilding was unchanged.

Automakers stepped up production to an estimated 140,000 passenger cars, pushing the total for the year to 3,696,957, a 15 per cent gain over last year.

Most of the increase over last week's output of 137,641 was due to brisker activity at Ford Motor Co., where a wildcat strike shut off some production a week ago.

Compact cars accounted for a record 31 per cent of this week's total. Production of these popular new models in the first half of the year reached almost one million.

STEEL

Steel output slipped to 1,739,,000 tons, or 61 per cent of capacity. This was the second lowest operating rate of the year, exceeding only the week in which the Memorial Day holiday fell.

Steelmen looked for the operating rate to dip near 50 per cent during July, during vacation. The industry took heart from a prediction by Charles M. Beeghly, president of Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp., that an upturn should develop in August and that 1960 will be a good year.

Father's Day buying propelled retail trade to gains up to 4 per per cent over a year ago.

John M. Snow, executive vice president of the National Assn. of Furniture Manufacturers, reported sales in the first half of the year were equal to or a little higher than last year. He forecast a 3 per cent gain for the year as a whole.

The cost of living in May inched to a new record for the third month in a row, moving up one-tenth of 1 per cent to 126.3 per cent of the 1947-49 average on the Labor Department's consumer price index About 200,000 workers in the aircraft, meat-packing, chemical, trucking and metal-working industries will get wage raises of 1 to 2 cents an hour.

Two big railroad unions will get pay raises as the result of new agreements. Four per cent boosts were granted the 100,000-member brotherhood of railroad trainmen and the 45,000-member brotherhood of locomotive firemen and engineers.

NEW YORK (AP)—"We can't have a boom every year."

W. L. Burns Jr., a banker in Durham, N.C., sums up his sentiment on business at mid-year in this one sentence. It pretty well defines the economic situation everywhere.

At mid-1960 business generally is holding steady, disappointing some but satisfying others, a nationwide survey by the Associated Press discloses.

Many businessmen think the second half of 1960 will produce a rousing rally. A few economists believe a letdown is possible.

One thing's certain: Business is not as good as economists and businessmen enthusiastically forecast it would be six months ago.

A spokesman for Detroit's big J. L. Hudson department store says, "The 'sizzling Sixties' are not sizzling as well as expected." The store's business is above a year ago, but it has revised downward its third quarter sales estimate.

NEWSMN

In New Orleans Isidore Newman, president of the Maison Blanche, says the bottom dropped out of sales in May. He adds: "It's the worst slump I've ever seen in New Orleans. I expect business to improve, but I don't look for a boom year."

But Reeve Wetherill of John Wanamaker's in Philadelphia says "our business in the first six months was better than we anticipated and we look for continuance of same."

Yet weather which hurts one section of the economy can help others. Vermont's extended winter produced a record ski season and a more valuable maple sugar crop. Snow came at the right time for the Winter Olympics and helped Reno, Nev., retail trade.

In Rochester, N. Y., booming business has caused a shortage of skilled labor and office help. Help wanted ads run 30 per cent above a year ago in Philadelphia, also experiencing a skilled labor shortage.

SUITS

A Columbus, S.C., retailer bubbles happily that he sold more men's suits in April than in any month in five years.

Omaha business reflects a construction boom, including 80 million dollars in missile bases in the area. Winston-Salem enoys the stimulus provided by three new plants going up, involving more than 59 million dollars.

A Gastonia, N. C., hardware merchant says of his customers for lawn mowers: "They ask for the ones with the automatic starters. They'll pay $10 extra to keep from having to pull that rope."

Yet there are weak spots.

A big one is steel. After operating at near capacity early this year, about 40 per cent of the industry is now shut down. Roger Bloudy, chairman of U.S. Steel, says the industry currently may have excess capacity of about 25 per cent.

This hurts the big industrial areas in Ohio, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Alabama. Layoffs speckle the bright prosperity picture. Unemployment nationally runs around five per cent of the labor force. Older people, once released, tend to remain unemployed.

CLEVELAND

"Inventories now are low and are still being trimmed, so I feel the chances of stretching the boom into 1961 are getting better and better."

Another weak spot is appliances. A St. Louis appliance dealer complains, "there is just nothing new and different in appliances."

In Memphis Sam Gassaway, manager of the appliance division of Orgill Bros. & Co. says, "manufacturers are bringing out special models called 'drop-ins.' They are stripped and they're going at low prices to attract customers."

The appliance pile up has caused small production cut backs and employee lay offs in some areas, including General Electric's gigantic "Appliance Park" site at Louisville. But it hasn't hurt Louisville's total employment.

WEAK

Still another weak spot is housing. Private housing starts run at an annual rate of 1,254,000 units compared with 1,613,000 a year ago. Weather gets some blame for the decline. "Tight money" gets more.

Housing is a big industry. Its age is mirrored elsewhere but rehomes mean new furniture but retailers generally report furniture sales slumping under last year.

Some plywood mills in Oregon have started to close, laying off workers, because the demand for wood for housing is slack. E.C. Sammons, Portland bank president says, "there is not the prosperity we had a year ago, but business still is pretty good."

Some cities have their own peculiar problems.

Los Angeles employed 200,000 people in its aircraft industry in 1957, but is now down to 160,000.

Cincinnati's big machine tool industry has been in a depression for many months. A merchant says, "we looked for a big spring pick up in sales. At the 1960 midpoint, we're still looking."

AUTOS

Auto production and sales are outstanding. For the first six months production amounts to around 3,824,363 units compared with 3,286,851 last year. In the record year, 1955, the half year total was 4,257,150.

Compact cars, immensely popular, use less steel, glass, upholstery, gas. Stocks of new cars pack dealers' show rooms and back lots. Many cities report poor sales of used cars.

Automation makes further gains but, happily, does not replace the secretary. Missile and electronic manufacturers may get additional stimulus from collapse of the summit conference and world-wide renewal of the cold war.

LEISURE

Leisure time activities reap a harvest. Bowling soars and domestic producers of automatic pin setting machines move in' foreign lands. The boating industry looks forward to a lush summer. More people attend so-called "adult movies."

In retail shops all sorts of sportswear, men's and women's, make the hottest items. But intensive advertising to promote the Bikini bathing suit attains doubtful success. "Let's put it this way," says the advertising manager of a big New York department store, "women still buy more regular swim suits—a lot more."

Quirks enliven the scene.

Trampolines sell very well in Lincoln, Nebr., and also in several other cities.

HAIR NET

In South Dakota women buy "wind-chasers," a flimsy net to cover the hair, just as they do in Herald Square, N.Y. But it's only a mild craze. A Chicago department store president says, "there is no real rage item."

New Yorkers, according to the State Canners and Freezers Assn. have "suddenly developed an enormous appetite for fruit drinks and the output of this product has grown fantastically in one year."

To these imbibers, whether straight or mixed, this note from Idaho might be of interest: The fruit industry was hit by a late spring frost. The prune crop, the state's biggest, is only 10 per cent of normal.

CROPS

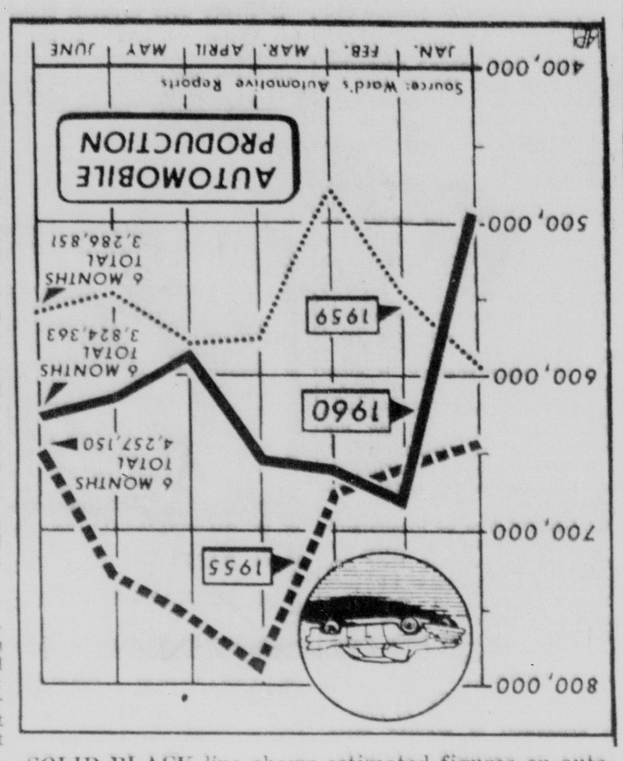

Crops are important to other areas. The wet spring delayed corn planting in the Midwest and a Des Moines banker doesn't think farmers will have as much money to spend this year as last. Cold weather did some damage to the South's cotton crop.

There were no big national strikes, but there was an unusual one: For the first time in 41 years the show didn't go on along Broadway. Actors either struck or were locked out, causing wild consternation at Lindy's and Sardi's. The nation, however, survived.

Twenty - eight years after an election campaign which produced the "forgotten man," the forgotten topic is inflation. Few mention it. Robert Weem, dean of business at the University of Nevada, says, "inflation is under control but there might be a slight recession coming."

The business research station of the Mississippi State University reaches a conclusion which could apply in most states:

"The general attitude over the state of Mississippi is this: 'Business is fair, and we are not complaining, but we could certainly stand a little more business than we are getting'."

Stocks Show Uneven Gains During Week

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks gained irregularly during the past week in the second largest weekly trading of 1960.

All the leading groups had their off days and some of the recent favorites such as the vending issues, electronics, and boat stocks suffered from time to time on realizing selling.

Old line leaders enjoyed a somewhat better market, aided more by hopes for the future than performance of their industries for the week. For example, steels firmed on a statement by the president of Jones & Laughlin that steel inventories would reach a minimum level by August and news that Republic has received enough orders to forestall closing its Warren, Ohio, plant Independence Day. Steel operations sank to a new 1960 low at 61 per cent of rated capacity and further declines are expected as industrial vacations spread.

OILS

Oils were helped by improvement in their inventory situation. Gasoline supplies had their sharpest drop of the year. Also oil companies were reported expanding their sales by pushing hitherto neglected products.

Individual news items helped their stocks. American Shipbuilding gained on a 4-for-1 split. Great Western Financial was up on a 100 per cent stock dividend. American Distilling made a new high on a 2-1 split. Otis Elevator rose on news it will make automatic pinsetters for Bowi-Mor Corp. At the same time, selling came into Brunswick which also makes these items.

In the Dow-Jones calculation, the industrial average closed the week at 647.01 off 3.88 points. Railroad and utility averages each gained exactly 1.07 points to 143.79 for the rails and 93.30 for the utilities, the latter a new high since April 8, 1959. The 65-stock average closed the week at 212.53 up 0.07 points.

A summer employee of the General Telephone Co. in Tampa, Fla., James David Bruno, of St. Joseph, a 20-year-old senior at Northeast State College, will be associated with the accounting department under their personnel training program, it was learned last week.

C. Ransom, manager of the Land Bank Association of Monroe.

James Hemphill has won a one week, all expense paid, vacation in Jamaica, it was announced by Alva Wilkinson, president of Twin City Pontiac. Hemphill sold more new Pontiacs than any other salesman in the Monroe zone during the 70-day selling spree.

U.S. Business Keeping Steady Pace, Reports Nationwide Mid-Year Survey

By JACK LEFLER
Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Business entered the summer season this week with the automobile industry holding its strong pace and the steel industry continuing its slide.

Plus and minus signs were pretty well divided throughout the economic field. Retail trade and carloadings advanced, heavy construction and truck tonnage declined and homebuilding was unchanged.

Automakers stepped up production to an estimated 140,000 passenger cars, pushing the total for the year to 3,696,957, a 15 per cent gain over last year.

Most of the increase over last week's output of 137,641 was due to brisker activity at Ford Motor Co., where a wildcat strike shut off some production a week ago.

Compact cars accounted for a record 31 per cent of this week's total. Production of these popular new models in the first half of the year reached almost one million

STEEL

Steel output slipped to 1,739,000 tons, or 61 per cent of capacity. This was the second lowest operating rate of the year, exceeding only the week in which the Memorial Day holiday fell.

Steelmen looked for the operating rate to dip near 50 per cent during July, during vacation. The industry took heart from a prediction by Charles M. Beeghly, president of Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp., that an upturn should develop in August and that 1960 will be a good year.

Father's Day buying propelled retail trade to gains up to 4 per per cent over a year ago.

John M. Snow, executive vice president of the National Assn. of Furniture Manufacturers, reported sales in the first half of the year were equal to or a little higher than last year. He forecast a 5 per cent gain for the year as a whole.

The cost of living in May inched to a new record for the third month in a row, moving up one-tenth of 1 per cent to 126.3 per cent of the 1947-49 average on the Labor Department's consumer price index About 200,000 workers in the aircraft, meat-packing, chemical, trucking and metal-working industries will get wage raises of 1 to 2 cents an hour.

Two big railroad unions will get pay raises as the result of new agreements. Four per cent boosts were granted the 100,000-member brotherhood of railroad trainmen and the 45,000-member brotherhood of locomotive firemen and engineers.

NEWSMN

In New Orleans Isidore Newman, president of the Maison Blanche, says the bottom dropped out of sales in May. He adds: "It's the worst slump I've ever seen in New Orleans. I expect business to improve, but I don't look for a boom year."

But Reeve Wetherill of John Wanamaker's in Philadelphia says "our business in the first six months was better than we anticipated and we look for continuance of same."

Where sales disappointed, the weather got much blame. Spring was late, cold and wet.

Yet weather which hurts one section of the economy can help others. Vermont's extended winter produced a record ski season and a more valuable maple sugar crop. Snow came at the right time for the Winter Olympics and helped Reno, Nev., retail trade.

In Rochester, N. Y., booming business has caused a shortage of skilled labor and office help. Help wanted ads run 30 per cent above a year ago in Philadelphia, also experiencing a skilled labor shortage.

SUITS

A Columbus, S.C., retailer bubbles happily that he sold more men's suits in April than in any month in five years.

Omaha business reflects a construction boom, including 80 million dollars in missile bases in the area. Winston-Salem enoys the stimulus provided by three new plants going up, involving more than 59 million dollars.

A Gastonia, N. C., hardware merchant says of his customers for lawn mowers: "They ask for the ones with the automatic starters. They'll pay $10 extra to keep from having to pull that rope."

Yet there are weak spots.

A big one is steel. After operating at near capacity early this year, about 40 per cent of the industry is now shut down. Roger Bloudy, chairman of U.S. Steel, says the industry currently may have excess capacity of about 25 per cent.

This hurts the big industrial areas in Ohio, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Alabama. Layoffs speckle the bright prosperity picture. Unemployment nationally runs around five per cent of the labor force. Older people, once released, tend to remain unemployed.

CLEVELAND

"Inventories now are low and are still being trimmed, so I feel the chances of stretching the boom into 1961 are getting better and better."

Another weak spot is appliances. A St. Louis appliance dealer complains, "there is just nothing new and different in appliances."

In Memphis Sam Gassaway, manager of the appliance division of Orgill Bros. & Co. says, "manufacturers are bringing out special models called 'drop-ins.' They are stripped and they're going at low prices to attract customers."

The appliance pile up has caused small production cut backs and employee lay offs in some areas, including General Electric's gigantic "Appliance Park" site at Louisville. But it hasn't hurt Louisville's total employment.

WEAK

Still another weak spot is housing. Private housing starts run at an annual rate of 1,254,000 units compared with 1,613,000 a year ago. Weather gets some blame for the decline. "Tight money" gets more.

Housing is a big industry. Its age is mirrored elsewhere but re-homes mean new furniture but retailers generally report furniture sales slumping under last year.

Some plywood mills in Oregon have started to close, laying off workers, because the demand for wood for housing is slack. E.C. Sammons, Portland bank president says, "there is not the prosperity we had a year ago, but business still is pretty good."

Some cities have their own peculiar problems.

Los Angeles employed 200,000 people in its aircraft industry in 1957, but is now down to 160,000.

Cincinnati's big machine tool industry has been in a depression for many months. A merchant says, "we looked for a big spring pick up in sales. At the 1960 mid-point, we're still looking."

AUTOS

Auto production and sales are outstanding. For the first six months production amounts to around 3,824,363 units compared with 3,286,851 last year. In the record year, 1955, the half year total was 4,257,150.

Compact cars, immensely popular, use less steel, glass, upholstery, gas. Stocks of new cars pack dealers' show rooms and back lots. Many cities report poor sales of used cars.

Automation makes further gains but, happily, does not replace the secretary. Missile and electronic manufacturers may get additional stimulus from collapse of the summit conference and world-wide renewal of the cold war.

LEISURE

Leisure time activities reap a harvest. Bowling soars and domestic producers of automatic pin setting machines move in' foreign lands. The boating industry looks forward to a lush summer. More people attend so-called "adult movies."

In retail shops all sorts of sportswear, men's and women's, make the hottest items. But intensive advertising to promote the Bikini bathing suit attains doubtful success. "Let's put it this way," says the advertising manager of a big New York department store, "women still buy more regular swim suits—a lot more."

Quirks enliven the scene.

Trampolines sell very well in Lincoln, Nebr., and also in several other cities.

HAIR NET

In South Dakota women buy "wind-chasers," a flimsy net to cover the hair, just as they do in Herald Square, N.Y. But it's only a mild craze. A Chicago department store president says, "there is no real rage item."

New Yorkers, according to the State Canners and Freezers Assn. have "suddenly developed an enormous appetite for fruit drinks and the output of this product has grown fantastically in one year."

To these imbibers, whether straight or mixed, this note from Idaho might be of interest: The fruit industry was hit by a late spring front. The prune crop, the state's biggest, is only 10 per cent of normal.

CROPS

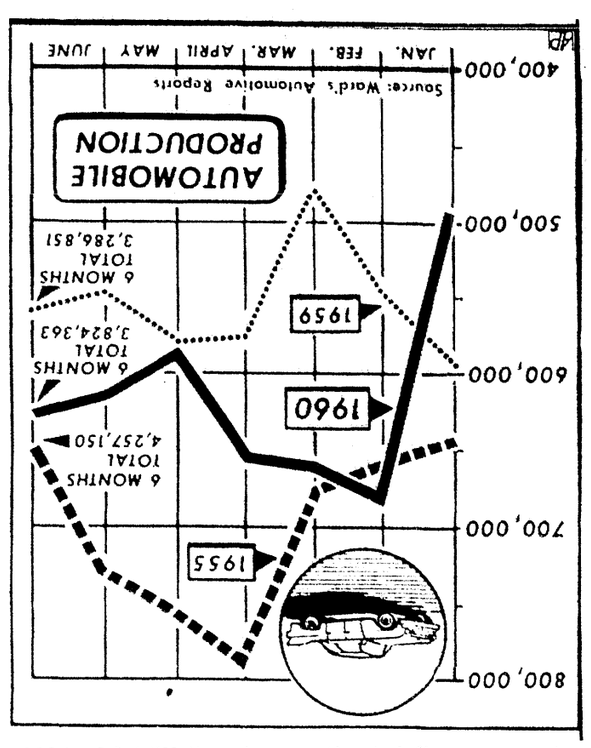

Crops are important to other areas. The wet spring delayed corn planting in the Midwest and a Des Moines banker doesn't think farmers will have as much money to spend this year as last. Cold weather did some damage to the South's cotton crop.

There were no big national strikes, but there was an unusual one: For the first time in 41 years the show didn't go on along Broadway. Actors either struck or were locked out, causing wild consternation at Lindy's and Sardi's. The nation, however, survived.

Twenty - eight years after an election campaign which produced the "forgotten man," the forgotten topic is inflation. Few mention it. Robert Weem, dean of business at the University of Nevada, says, "inflation is under control but there might be a slight recession coming."

The business research station of the Mississippi State University reaches a conclusion which could apply in most states:

"The general attitude over the state of Mississippi is this: 'Business is fair, and we are not complaining, but we could certainly stand a little more business than we are getting'."

Stocks Show Uneven Gains During Week

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks gained irregularly during the past week in the second largest weekly trading of 1960.

All the leading groups had their off days and some of the recent favorites such as the vending issues, electronics, and boat stocks suffered from time to time on realizing selling.

Old line leaders enjoyed a somewhat better market, aided more by hopes for the future than performance of their industries for the week. For example, steels firmed on a statement by the president of Jones & Laughlin that steel inventories would reach a minimum level by August and news that Republic has received enough orders to forestall closing its Warren, Ohio, plant Independence Day. Steel operations sank to a new 1960 low at 61 per cent of rated capacity and further declines are expected as industrial vacations spread.

OILS

Oils were helped by improvement in their inventory situation. Gasoline supplies had their sharpest drop of the year. Also oil companies were reported expanding their sales by pushing hitherto neglected products.

Individual news items helped their stocks. American Shipbuilding gained on a 4-for-1 split. Great Western Financial was up on a 100 per cent stock dividend. American Distilling made a new high on a 2-1 split. Otis Elevator rose on news it will make automatic pinsetters for Bowi-Mor Corp. At the same time, selling came into Brunswick which also makes these items.

In the Dow-Jones calculation, the industrial average closed the week at 647.01 off 3.88 points. Railroad and utility averages each gained exactly 1.07 points to 143.79 for the rails and 93.30 for the utilities, the latter a new high since April 8, 1959. The 65-stock average closed the week at 212.53 up 0.07 points.

Business Briefs

The purchase of property by the First National Bank of West Monroe adjacent to the establishment for a parking area was reported Friday.

The bank stated it has bought residential property owned by Mrs. J. G. Cobb for $30,000.

Also announced by the bank was a $4 per share semi-annual dividend payment to stockholders on record as of June 30.

A summer employee of the General Telephone Co. in Tampa, Fla., James David Bruno, of St. Joseph, a 20-year-old senior at Northeast State College, will be associated with the accounting department under their personnel training program, it was learned last week.

The Federal Land Bank of New Orleans is awarding a $1200 scholarship each year to a Louisiana farm boy in either 4-H or FFA who enters the school of agriculture of the department of vocational agricultural education at LSU, it was announced by A. C. Ransom, manager of the Land Bank Association of Monroe.

James Hemphill has won a one week, all expense paid, vacation in Jamaica, it was announced by Alva Wilkinson, president of Twin City Pontiac. Hemphill sold more new Pontiacs than any other salesman in the Monroe zone during the 70-day selling spree.

Jack L. Rivers, salesman at Brown - Rivers - Scogin, represented Monroe at a five - day Ford Division truck sales workshop in Shreveport last week with 18 other Louisiana Ford dealership representatives.

CAREER TRACED

Silvers Started As Child Singer

By DOC QUIGG

NEW YORK (UPI) — George Washington looked down on Phil Silvers from the height of the statue pedestal on the spot on Wall Street where Washington took the oath as first U.S. President.

Phil Silvers faced the statue and looked right back.

At the moment of the Silvers-Washington confrontation — whether from a sense of history or not — the skies wept. It's been rainy around here lately anyhow.

The cameras hadn't even been set up yet and it looked as though it would rain all day — not the kind of weather to tape an outdoor TV scene — so the crew packed up and left. Silvers hied himself to a rehearsal hall.

CHILD SINGER

Silvers' life, even as a kid, was the stage: "I was a kid singer. I got on the stage in local theaters at about 8; I sang in social clubs and in neighborhood taverns, where they'd toss me money. And as a fresh kid of 7 or 8, I'd go make speeches for Eugene V. Debs on street corners, and my dad would give me 50 cents a speech.

"My dad was run out of Russia at 18 after he hit a Cossack on the head with a shovel. At Ellis Island he put down that he was a builder, and so they put him in steel construction, working high among the girders, and at that time practically all the steel workers were Irish.

"Dad didn't know any English, so he learned the language from his fellow workers. Here he was a very religious Jew, speaking English with an Irish brogue, coming out with words like 'bejabbers.' He educated himself, went to night school."

STARS IN REVUE

Being a native of New York, as he says, "all my life," Silvers is peculiarly suited to star in a TV special called "Summer in New York," which is to be shown by CBS-TV this Thursday, June 30. Carol Haney and Carol Lawrence are guest stars.

"The idea of this special, about what you can do here in the summer, is really a flimsy excuse to have gaiety—to do a revue," he said. "But as far as I'm concerned about half the idea is really true. I love summer in New York. There's an exodus and you can get things done.

"The show opens with a picnic on Wall Street, with dancing around George Washington's statue — that is it will if the rain ever stops. There's a dance on a Staten Island ferry. And scenes all around, like Municipal Court and the U.N. and a beatnik espresso joint, and there's a Madison Ave. tongue-in-cheek skit about how the Sgt. Bilko show was born."

Bilko, the celebrated soldier-character whom Silvers played in an Army-life series for five seasons, was ended as a TV production at the end of last season—but the films of the show are marching right on. The reruns are syndicated on TV all over the country, and they're in 10 European countries.

Macumba Love" was produced and directed by Douglas Fowley for United Artists release. Starring in the film are Walter Reed, Ziva Rodann, William Wellman Jr., and June Wilkinson with Ruth de Souza.

731 ACTORS IN STRIKE

When the 19 Broadway shows resumed performances, 632 actors returned to give a show. Those missing were in "Duel of the Trial," and "Finian's Rainbow," which closed during the strike.

The issuance of the stamp will coincide with the Eighth World

Collectors desiring first day cancellations of this 4-cent stamp may send their addressed envelopes, together with remittance to cover the cost of the stamps to be affixed, to the Postmaster, New York 1, N. This is the first time Mexico and the U. S. will issue postage stamps with the same basic designs. The Mexican stamp will be of the 30-centavos denomination and the U. S. adhesive will be a 4-center. Both stamps will be printed in red and green on white paper (Mexico's national colors).

Sound Of Music Features 'Kids'

By JACK GAVER

NEW YORK (UPI) — Whatever the considerable talents of Mary Martin, Theodore Bikel, Kurt Kasznar, Patricia Neway, and Marion Marlowe, the viewer of "The Sound of Music" at the Lunt-Fontaine Theatre has to be impressed by the kids.

If for no other reason, because there are so many of them. Seven, to be exact, of assorted ages and sexes. It must be a bedlam backstage, especially in view of the fact there are three other moppets offstage who are understudies. Ten in all.

But there is no bedlam, according to Steve Meyer, 28-year-old assistant stage manager, whose principal assignment is supervision of the youngsters.

"I guess they gave me the job because, being a bachelor, they felt I'd have an objective viewpoint," Meyer said. "Actually, I love kids, and we get along fine."

But the stage mother problem must be horrendous.

"Well," commented Meyer, "they all have mothers, and they are all ambitious for their children. During the early rehearsals I remember, they were in the habit of counting lines — even words — to be sure that their offspring were getting a fair shake. Somehow or other, everyone seemed to wind up satisfied.

"But we do not have a throng of mothers backstage during performances. Primarily it is a question of space. This is an enormous show. There simply isn't room for a lot of extra people. We allow one mother backstage at each performance. They take turns."

The management has gone all out to ease Meyer's job by providing the children with a playroom, complete with TV set, beneath the stage. They can relax there when they have a breather, and it is there that Meyer keeps the understudies at the ready just in case.

"Of course," Meyer continued, "my job is simplified considerably by the fact many of these children are 'old pros.' They've been around, and they know the ropes."

Marilyn Rogers, for instance at the age of 12, played 650 performances in "The Music Man" and was in "Hide and Seek" before that. She has worked most of the major TV shows and has even supplied "voices" for animated cartoons. Another 12-year-old is Kathy Dunn, who was in "Uncle Willie" and has had nine songs published.

At 16, Lauri Peters, the oldest of the brood, is practically an adult and has had roles of Broadway's "Say, Darling" and "First Impressions," to say nothing on stage and TV in the ballet, "The Nutcracker Suite."

VAUDEVILLE RETURNING?

NEW YORK (AP) — Efforts are being pushed to bring bigtime vaudeville back to Broadway.

Included in the plan is a vaudeville circuit which would lure the stars to New York, Miami, Houstons, Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco, and other cities.

Joey Adams, president of the American Guild of Variety Artists, says he already has signed for such a tour stars like Donald O'Connor, Pearl Bailey and the Ritz Brothers. Now he is trying to interest Sophie Tucker Eddie Cantor, Frank Sinatra, Milton Berle, Ted Lewis and Bobby Darin.

ELANA EDEN portrays the title role in the picture, "The Story of Ruth," a CinemaScope-Color epic opening next Sunday at the Paramount Theatre.

FAMILIAR GROUND

PHILADELPHIA (AP) —Starring role in "Face of a Hero," murder drama which will have its pre - Broadway premiere in Philadelphia and Boston before its New York opening Oct. 20, goes to Albert Deker.

Some of the action of "Face of a Hero" takes place in a courtroom, which should be familiar ground to Deker who recently played the defense attorney in "The Andersonville Trial."

ADAPTATION DUE

NEW YORK (AP) — Playwright Sean O'Casey has agreed that his drama about the Irish Easter Rebellion of 1916. "The Plough and the Stars," be transformed into a musical. Composer Elie Seigmeister and Edward Mabley, the latter to write book and lyrics, are now working on the musical variation.

Afraid you're getting old because stair climbing leaves you breathless? "Nonsense," says Helena Rubinstein. "You're just forgetting to breathe! People tend to hold their breath while mounting a staircase. If you consciously think of inhaling and exhaling as you climb, you'll be far less tired when you reach the top."

Great Circus Epic Will Be Feature Here

That all-time great circus epic, which stands in a class by itself as far as spectacular entertainment is concerned — Cecil B. DeMille's Technicolor production, "The Greatest Show on Earth"—is once again being made available when Paramount's release opens Thursday at the Jim Theatre.

Starring Betty Hutton, Cornel Wilde, Charlton Heston, Dorothy James Stewart, and an unprecedented array of Ringling talent, "The Greatest Show on Earth," combines two of America's most popular entertainments — the special kind of spectacle for which DeMille was famous, and which no one to date has been successfully able to imitate, plus the thrills of a big-time Big Top show, than which there is no bigger or more thrilling than Ringling Bros-Barnum & Bailey circus.

DRAMATIZED

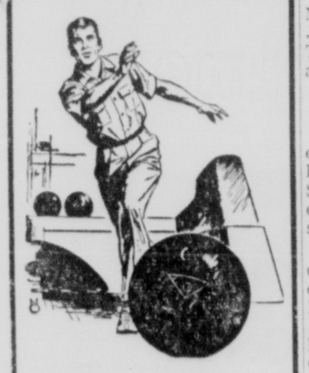

In addition, there is told a powerful, personal story dramatized brilliantly by the stars, completing a combination on such outstanding entertainment that "The Greatest Show on Earth" was honored with the Academy Award for Best Picture of the Year in which it was first released. Made with the cooperation of the Ringling people, the DeMille epic features hundreds of famed attractions — circus "flyers," acrobats, tightrope walkers, clowns, hair-raising thrillers.

Silvers Started As Child Singer

By DOC QUIGG

NEW YORK (UPI) — George Washington looked down on Phil Silvers from the height of the statue pedestal on the spot on Wall Street where Washington took the oath as first U.S. President.

Phil Silvers faced the statue and looked right back.

At the moment of the Silvers-Washington confrontation — whether from a sense of history or not — the skies wept. It's been rainy around here lately anyhow.

The cameras hadn't even been set up yet and it looked as though it would rain all day — not the kind of weather to tape an outdoor TV scene — so the crew packed up and left. Silvers hied himself to a rehearsal hall.

CHILD SINGER

Silvers' life, even as a kid, was the stage: "I was a kid singer. I got on the stage in local theaters at about 8; I sang in social clubs and in neighborhood taverns, where they'd toss me money. And as a fresh kid of 7 or 8, I'd go make speeches for Eugene V. Debs on street corners, and my dad would give me 50 cents a speech.

"My dad was run out of Russia at 18 after he hit a Cossack on the head with a shovel. At Ellis Island he put down that he was a builder, and so they put him in steel construction, working high among the girders, and at that time practically all the steel workers were Irish.

"Dad didn't know any English, so he learned the language from his fellow workers. Here he was a very religious Jew, speaking English with an Irish brogue, coming out with words like 'bejabbers.' He educated himself, went to night school."

STARS IN REVUE

Being a native of New York, as he says, "all my life," Silvers is peculiarly suited to star in a TV special called "Summer in New York," which is to be shown by CBS-TV this Thursday, June 30. Carol Haney and Carol Lawrence are guest stars.

"The idea of this special, about what you can do here in the summer, is really a flimsy excuse to have gaiety—to do a revue," he said. "But as far as I'm concerned about half the idea is really true. I love summer in New York. There's an exodus and you can get things done.

And scenes all around, like Municipal Court and the U.N. and a beatnik espresso joint, and there's a Madison Ave. tongue-in-cheek skit about how the Sgt. Bilko show was born."

Bilko, the celebrated soldier-character whom Silvers played in an Army-life series for five seasons, was ended as a TV production at the end of last season—but the films of the show are marching right on. The reruns are syndicated on TV all over the country, and they're in 10 European countries.

Great Circus Epic Will Be Feature Here

That all-time great circus epic, which stands in a class by itself as far as spectacular entertainment is concerned — Cecil B. DeMille's Technicolor production, "The Greatest Show on Earth"—is once again being made available when Paramount's release opens Thursday at the Jim Theatre.

Starring Betty Hutton, Cornel Wilde, Charlton Heston, Dorothy James Stewart, and an unprecedented array of Ringling talent, "The Greatest Show on Earth," combines two of America's most popular entertainments — the special kind of spectacle for which DeMille was famous, and which no one to date has been successfully able to imitate, plus the thrills of a big-time Big Top show, than which there is no bigger or more thrilling than Ringling Bros-Barnum & Bailey circus.

DRAMATIZED

In addition, there is told a powerful, personal story dramatized brilliantly by the stars, completing a combination on such outstanding entertainment that "The Greatest Show on Earth" was honored with the Academy Award for Best Picture of the Year in which it was first released. Made with the cooperation of the Ringling people, the DeMille epic features hundreds of famed attractions — circus "flyers," acrobats, tightrope walkers, clowns, hair-raising thrillers.

VOTERS FAR APART

Campaign Rough In Dakota

By ARTHUR EDSON

LISBON, N. D. (AP) — Campaigning in North Dakota is rough. It's such a long way between voters.

But the special Senate election Tuesday, between Republican Gov. John E. Davis and Democratic Rep. Quentin Burdick is so important both parties are making the most extraordinary efforts in their history to see that words and pleas and candidates reach each far-flung voter.

For this is a sort of trial run to see how farm states will react to the administration's farm policies.

A Davis victory, so the reasoning runs, means that the arguing over Agriculture Secretary Ezra Taft Benson may be noisy but hardly fatal.

A Burdick victory would be a sign, in a state that traditionally has been easy pickings for Republicans, that the GOP may be in for real trouble in the farm country in November.

Possibly the best way to get the feel of a campaign is to follow a candidate as he goes about his mysterious business. So let's set out with one of them, in this case Davis, a handsome, personable man of 47.

Driving east from Bismarck, the capital, we pass through some of the prettiest and richest farm land in America. North Dakota can be brutal when the rains don't come, but this year they have been generous and timely.

At Jamestown, 100 miles away, the governor paused at the Red Owl Food Store and busily pumped hands, including those of the surprised butchers who had felt themselves safe in their glassed-in cage.

As Davis politicked, Jim Schlosser, his campaign manager in Stutsman County, said he thinks Republicans will carry this area, as usual, but now they're running scared. Real scared. He has planned a mammoth telephone campaign, wherein each independent Republican voter will be called three times in an effort to get out every vote.

At the Star Theater, now GOP headquarters, there's a reminder that no matter what the national issues are, local issues may swing elections.

Glenn Talbott, state president of the powerful Farmers Union, told his members in a speech June 15: "You're nuts if you're not for Quentin Burdick, and you're nuts if you don't vote for him."

Republicans seek to capitalize on this. An ad in Saturday's Fargo Forum asked, "How do you like to be told how to vote?"

And at the Star Theater boys and girls were giving away peanuts and toting signs that said they are nuts about Davis.

Nibbs, a beautiful golden retreiver, was carrying a placard, "I'm nuts about Davis, too." In fairness, Nibbs seemed to think all humans are nuts. He firmly refused to pose for a picture with the governor, wisely preferring to move over into some shade.

Mrs. Norris Succumbs At Downsville

Mrs. Clara Vernon Norris, 76, died at her residence in Downsville Saturday afternoon.

Funeral services will be held in the Downsville Baptist Church at 2 p.m. Monday with the Rev. Ardis Smith and the Rev. Filer J. Seal officiating.

Interment will be in the Downsville Cemetery under the direction of Mulhearn Funeral Home. The remains will be at the residence from 10 a.m. Sunday until time of services.

She is survived by four daughters, Mrs. Ada Mae Stewart, New Orleans; Mrs. Willie Farmer, Downsville; Mrs. Edna Millard, Waynesville, Mo., and Mrs. Callie Lolley, West Monroe; two sons, Modell Norris, West Monroe, and W. L. Norris, Columbus, Ohio; six brothers; three sisters; 12 grandchildren, and 3 great-grandchildren.

Red China Aggression Move Eyed

WASHINGTON (AP) — U. S. strategists think that any new Asiatic aggression by Red China would have to be waged without mass destruction weapons.

This opinion, held by various Pentagon officials, is predicted on the Soviet policy of withholding such items as nuclear bombs and the newer types of war gases from its Red Chinese partner.

Realists among military leaders here say this Soviet policy presumably is not based on Moscow's professed love for peace, but on a basic fact: Mass destruction weapons would be a menace to the Russians themselves if some day the differences between the two Red nations should become more than ideological interpretations.

The situation was pointed up last week in the Bucharest session of Communist leaders. There Premier Nikita Khrushchev emphasized that Soviet policy would continue to be based on coexistence. But Red Chinese Delegate Peng Chen took pains to ignore this idea, and in China Red publications said that people who advocated peaceful cooperation with the free world were revisionists.

Pentagon and State Department officials emphasize that by no means should these conflicting views he interpreted as signs that conflict between the Soviet Union and Red China is imminent. They say these developments merely point up Moscow's cagey and cautious treatment of its potentially dangerous Eastern comrade.

Even without hydrogen rockets and nerve gases, hords of Chinese with conventional weapons could be a sticky problem for defenders of the Soviet Eurasian empire.

Texas Rangers Join In Probe Of Burglary

VERNON, Tex. (AP) Texas Rangers joined county officers today in an investigation of a jewel burglary of the sprawling Waggoner Ranch. It occurred Thursday night.

Officers described it as one of the biggest residential burglaries in Texas history. The exact amount hasn't been determined, but estimates run from $60,000 to $100,000.

The jewelry, along with three pieces of firearms, were taken Thursday night from the elegant ranch home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Waggoner.

Waggoner is a son of the founder of the famed Waggoner Ranch, second in size in Texas. It is 15 miles south of Vernon.

The robbery occurred while the Waggoners were attending a rodeo. A safe in a bathroom had been "peeled" from the wall.

Three guns from Waggoner's collection of more than 100 pieces were stolen from a rack. They included two shotguns and a submachine gun. The stock of one of the shotguns was ornamented with gold.

Man Killed In Home; Pushes Wife To Safety

LAKE HIAWATHA, N. J. (AP) —A former paratrooper was shot and killed in his bed early Saturday by a single bullet. His wife told police he pushed her to safety on the floor seconds before he was killed.

Ann Lupoli, 26, said she did not see her husband Joseph's assailant.

After Lupoli, 38, pushed her out of bed, she heard a shot and, when she turned on the lights, found her husband shot with a bullet wound in his right temple. Their three young children still were asleep in adjoining rooms.

Neighbors in this quiet Morris County lake community some 35 miles west of New York said they did not hear the shot at 12:45 a.m.

Police found a .22-caliber pistol in the bushes outside the Lupoli home. Partial prints and the serial number are being checked to trace its owner.

Lupoli, an officer with the 82nd Airborne Division in World War II, saw action in the Battle of the Bulge. Police said he worked in Brooklyn, N. Y., supervising the installation of elevators. He was home only on weekends.

SITE ON BAYOU

LOT 205x205 FT. facing Bayou DeSiard with 100x203 ft. riparian rights. The most beautiful pecan trees in Monroe are located on this old plantation homesite. In fact, enough yield to pay taxes and more. It's high, dry, well drained. Needs not one wheel barrow of dirt. Oak trees, elm, etc. You will love it! Enough room for 2 residences. Where else can you buy in a restricted area a plot of ground like this for $6500? And the lake, too! It's ideal for 2 families, and the lots would cost you only $3250 each. Cannot sell separately. This just came on the market, and it won't stay here long. Unimproved, bald-as-your-hand property will cost you much more. Why not drive out today and see this property? Owner has planted an entire row of catalpa trees across the back of this property to raise his own fishing bait. Owner will finance with low down payment. Don't miss this!

SITE ON BAYOU

LOT 205x205 FT. facing Bayou DeSiard with 100x203 ft. riparian rights. The most beautiful pecan trees in Monroe are located on this old plantation home site. In fact, enough yield to pay taxes and more. It's high, dry, well drained. Needs not one wheel barrow of dirt. Oak trees, elm, etc. You will love it! Enough room for 2 residences. Where else can you buy in a restricted area a plot of ground like this for $6500? And the lake, too! It's ideal for 2 families, and the lots would cost you only $3250 each. Cannot sell separately. This just came on the market, and it won't stay here long. Unimproved, bald-as-your-hand property will cost you much more. Why not drive out today and see this property? Owner has planted an entire row of catalpa trees across the back of this property to raise his own fishing bait. Owner will finance with low down payment. Don't miss this!

Wrong Wright Partially Has Grounded Himself

By TOM HENSHAW

ITHACA, N.Y., (AP) — The wrong Wright has partially grounded himself after a high-flying career that almost spans the whole history of aviation.

He is Theodore P. Wright, 65, once vice president of Curtiss-Wright Corp. and former head of the Civil Aeronautics Administration, who retires Friday as Cornell vice president for research.

Ted Wright didn't invent the airplane —his cousins far removed, Wilbur and Orville, did—but his role in its development over 43 years has earned for him the title of elder statesman.

The airplane was still something of a novelty in 1917 when young Wright shelved a brand new degree in architectural engineering —briefly, he thought—to enter the fledgling Naval aviation service.

The official speed record stood at a fantastic 126 m.p.h. One daring young man had even flown his awkward aircraft for the unbelievable distance of more than 1,000-miles non-stop.

Across the Atlantic, daredevil Allied and German fliers had only recently given up shooting at each other with rifles and were mounting crude machine guns on their spidery Spads, Nieuports and Fokkers.

Wright didn't shoot at anybody. In fact, he didn't even fly. As an Ensign-inspector, his field was production. And, in the hectic days of World War I, the production field was a mess.

"It was pretty much trial and error," Wright recalls. "I remember long rows of Bristol fighters and Liberty engines in a plant in Buffalo. They had to be scrapped when it was found the Bristols couldn't fly with Liberties."

Trial and error just about summed up the early days of aviation before aeronautical engineering had amassed a backlog of experience on which to draw. At least once, it could have cost Wright his life.

"I used to fly some of our training planes just to keep my hand in," he says. "Usually I'd go up and make one turn in a spin and pull out. We found out later that, in one of the planes, if you made three turns you couldn't pull out."

Wright left the Navy in 1921 but the architectural engineering degree stayed on the shelf.

"I was so much in love with aviation," he says, "that I just couldn't go back to architecture."

He wound up as assistant chief engineer for the Curtiss Aeroplane and Motor Corp. as the first great age of the airplane dawned.

It was an era of speed. International air races for the Schneider and Pulitzer trophies rivalled the World Series and Davis Cup matches for fan interest. Curtiss-built racers won most of them.

One of Wright's biggest disappointments came in the Schneider trophy races of 1926.

"We had won two legs on the cup and needed one more victory to retire it," he recalls. "But we made the mistake of using last year's planes and lost. You had to move fast to keep up with developments in those days."

It was also an era of fabulous firsts.

"It seemed like every other month there was another noted flight," says Wright. "Smith and Nelson flying around the world. Adm. Byrd and Floyd Bennett flying over the North Pole. And Lindbergh. It was an exciting time."

Lindbergh took off en route to Paris from Roosevelt Field next door to the Curtiss plant on Long Island. Wright, then chief engineer of Curtiss, directed some of the last minute work on Lindy's "Spirit of St. Louis."

More important, though, he developed his "project engineer" system of production which still is used by the major airplane makers.

"In those days," says Wright, "specialists like experts in aerodynamics or structure worked on all the planes. They more or less competed against each other in the design. We could have built a plane so aerodynamically perfect that it would break apart in the air.

"The project engineer is the man who knows all about a single plane. He melds the experts."

Wright was concerned with air safety, too. His pet plane was the Curtiss "Tanager," which won the Guggenheim safe aircraft prize.

Some strange planes came out of the Curtiss factory in those days, too.

"There was the A8, an attack plane," Wright recalls. "It had pants over its landing gear and four machine guns in the pants. And the F9C had a hook on top of its fuselage so it could be caught and pulled into a dirigible in the air. Those planes never amounted to much."

Wright became something of an Air Age prophet in 1936 after a tour of German airplane factories.

"I figured the Germans were turning out three times as many planes as the United States and England combined," he says. "In the light of the times, this was disturbing."

He came back to the United States preaching airplane production in speeches and magazine articles. But, as in the case with many prophets, no one listened. When war finally broke out, however, the government turned to Wright for help in producing planes. As director of the aircraft resources control office, he saw production rise to the point where Allied aircraft drove German and Japanese planes from the skies.

"In 1944 we were turning out nearly 100,000 planes a year," he says. "By the fall of that year we had the feeling the war was won productionwise."

Wright took on the post of Civil Aeronautics Administrator just in time to sit in on another aviation milestone—the International Civil Aviation Conference in Chicago which laid the ground rules for the present international network of airlines.

"The Russians were invited to send a delegation," Wright recalls. "They actually got as far as New York before they were called back. The Kremlin had decided not to open its skies. This was one of the first hints that the Iron Curtain was falling."

Wright had served in the CAA four years when the Cornell opportunity came.

"Actually," he says, "I had planned my career to include service in industry, government and university. The university is sort of a family tradition. My father and two brothers were college professors. My son, Ted, teaches at Bates College in Maine."

But the university job didn't mean leaving aviation.

He also became chairman of the board of the Cornell Aeronautical Laboratory in Buffalo and chairman of the Cornell-Guggenheim Aviation Safety Center in New York. He's retaining those jobs after retirement.

And the man who earned his pilot's license soloing in a JN4—the famed Flying Jenny—also is a consultant to a company that builds atomic reactors and a firm that works on rockets.

In an age dedicated to space travel, Wright sees a lot of room for improvement downstairs.

"Aviation has more or less taken over travel for distances of more than 300 miles," he says. "But travel for distances of less than that hasn't really been dented by aviation.

"I'm going to take a refresher course in flying this summer," he says, "so I can fly for pleasure again."

Wrong Wright Partially Has Grounded Himself

By TOM HENSHAW

ITHACA, N.Y., (AP) — The wrong Wright has partially grounded himself after a high-flying career that almost spans the whole history of aviation.

He is Theodore P. Wright, 65, once vice president of Curtiss-Wright Corp. and former head of the Civil Aeronautics Administration, who retires Friday as Cornell vice president for research.

Ted Wright didn't invent the airplane —his cousins far removed, Wilbur and Orville, did—but his role in its development over 43 years has earned for him the title of elder statesman.

The airplane was still something of a novelty in 1917 when young Wright shelved a brand new degree in architectural engineering —briefly, he thought—to enter the fledgling Naval aviation service.

The official speed record stood at a fantastic 126 m.p.h. One daring young man had even flown his awkward aircraft for the unbelievable distance of more than 1,000-miles non-stop.

Across the Atlantic, daredevil Allied and German fliers had only recently given up shooting at each other with rifles and were mounting crude machine guns on their spidery Spads, Nieuports and Fokkers.

Wright didn't shoot at anybody. In fact, he didn't even fly. As an Ensign-inspector, his field was production. And, in the hectic days of World War 1, the production field was a mess.

"It was pretty much trial and error," Wright recalls. "I remember long rows of Bristol fighters and Liberty engines in a plant in Buffalo. They had to be scrapped when it was found the Bristols couldn't fly with Liberties."

Trial and error just about summed up the early days of aviation before aeronautical engineering had amassed a backlog of experience on which to draw. At least once, it could have cost Wright his life.

"I used to fly some of our training planes just to keep my hand in," he says. "Usually I'd go up and make one turn in a spin and pull out. We found out later that, in one of the planes, if you made three turns you couldn't pull out."

Wright left the Navy in 1921 but the architectural engineering degree stayed on the shelf.

"I was so much in love with aviation," he says, "that I just couldn't go back to architecture."

He wound up as assistant chief engineer for the Curtiss Aeroplane and Motor Corp. as the first great age of the airplane dawned.
